City Hall Workers Walk Out

About 80 outside workers at city hall are off the job today in an escalating walkout to protest the suspension of two fellow workers.

The walkout started early this morning when about 40 members of Local 50 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees failed to show up for work and by noon, almost 80 outside employees were off the job.

A source said two city workers, a sub-foreman and a laborer, were given three-day suspensions Tuesday after an underground cable was damaged by a street crew.

Local 50 president Jim Walker said the local has filed a grievance, but the union members decided to act on their own.

He said the executive is attempting to keep the men on the job but "the situation is deteriorating" with more workers booking off as they hear about the situation.

At press time, a meeting was being held with Walker, city manager Jim Bramley and personnel manager Terry Fitzpatrick in an attempt to resolve the problem.

ROBBERY TOOK 24 MINUTES

Brinks Haul $2.8 Million

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Border points and airports are under tight security today in the wake of a $2.8 million robbery from a Brinks armored car here Tuesday.

The amount of cash taken exceeds that taken from a Brink's Inc., express office in Boston Jan. 17, 1950, by eight masked men who got away with $2,775,39.12 of which $1,281,211.29 was in cash.

Police believe that at least three of the five bandits who levelled a Second World War vintage machine-gun at the truck driver are Americans and would be headed for home.

They also feel that a recent TV movie based on the earlier armored car robbery could have provided the spark for Tuesday's heist.

Rewards totalling $125,000 have already been offered for information leading to capture and conviction of the robbers and recovery of the money, which is in small bills and virtually untraceable.

The robbery which police term "highly professional" took just 24 minutes to execute.

When the Brinks truck pulled into a laneway near the main branch of the Royal Bank, there was a white panel truck already parked there.

The armored car stopped behind it.

Three guards entered the bank and came out with bags of money for distribution to branches of the Royal which they loaded on the Brinks truck.

When they entered the bank for more bags, police said, a second truck pulled up behind the Brinks car and the driver got out and approached the armored car.

He banged on the door and motioned for the driver to look at the white van.

At that time, police said, the rear doors of the white van were kicked open, revealing a 50-millimetre machine gun manned by two men. The gun was mounted on a tripod and weighted down by sand bags.

Police said one of the bandits ordered the driver to "open the door." They were the only words spoken by the robbers.

"With the machine-gun pointed at him, the driver opened the door of the armored car and surrendered," police said.

"He was handcuffed by one of the men and forced to lie on the floorboards.

"The first truck then pulled away and the second man followed driving the Brinks truck. The guards inside the bank never knew what had happened." The bandits left their other truck in the alley. There were no shots fired.

The thieves drove the armored car through the busy financial district and along the Bonaventure Expressway to a golf course on Nun's Island, an upper class area on the outskirts of Montreal.

Police found the armored truck about two hours later. Also found nearby was the white van and the machine-gun.

The driver was found handcuffed and gagged in the rear of the truck.

Police said they have few leads and are concentrating their investigation on determining where the machine-gun came from.

"It has to be stolen," one detective said. "You obviously can't buy this kind of gun in a Canadian store."

Insp. Jean-Claude Rondou, heading the investigation said the gun may have come from the United States.

"But you can smuggle pianos across the border, and they could easily smuggle a gun like that," Insp. Rondou said.

Towing Contract Runs Out

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Insurance Corporation of British Columbia and the towing industry failed to reach agreement Tuesday to renew contracts on towing rates that expires today.

Ron Baldwin, manager of the Automotive Retailers Association (ARA) which represents independent towing companies, said Tuesday night the ICBC board of directors has refused the association's request for a 12 per cent increase over 1975 towing rates.

Baldwin also said ICBC has told tow truck operators they will not get any increase, not even a 10-cent mileage increase.

As a result, he said, the industry cannot provide towing services for the corporation at an uneconomical rate, and will, effective today, terminate its agreement with ICBC.

Baldwin said the end of the agreement with ICBC shouldn't make any difference to motorists in trouble. But it does mean individual companies can charge whatever rate they can afford to work at.

He did not say what effect the change will have on billing procedures, nor did he rule out the possibility that motorists using a towing service after an insured accident would be billed directly.

He said the request for an increase was contained in an ARA brief to the corporation. The increase would have meant that an $11 towing charge would have increased to $12.50 and a $16 charge to $18.

Closer Gov't Watch On Oil Companies

OTTAWA (CP) — Tougher monitoring of oil companies will be imposed this spring to ensure most of the coming oil price increase is spent on exploration and development of new supplies.

Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said Tuesday he plans to require mandatory reporting of the money each company spends.

"There is already some monitoring of the industry but I'm not satisfied that it is sufficient for our needs," the minister said.

He told the Commons national resources committee that the monitoring system will be announced at the same time as the new northern oil and gas regulations, likely sometime in early May.

Gillespie announced the new monitoring plan after T. C. Douglas (NDP — Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands) asked what guarantees consumers had that the higher prices they pay will bring on new supplies.

Government ministers already have said that, if the money isn't spent on exploration and development, further action might be taken, presumably to tax away the additional money.

Tax measures now provide an incentive to the companies to pump money back into exploration, Gillespie added.

With a $1 price increase, the companies would get an extra 25 cents even without additional investment, while the provinces would get 48 cents and Ottawa 27 cents, he said.

But if the companies reinvested 50 cents of the increase, they would get 53 cents of the $1, the provinces 44 cents and Ottawa three cents.

Gillespie repeated for the meeting that consumers can expect an increase of between $1.05 and $2 a barrel on July 1, that would add between four and eight cents to a gallon of heating oil or gasoline.

He said outside the committee that meetings of government officials on oil prices have been continuing, but no further formal negotiations are expected until Prime Minister Trudeau meets the provincial premiers, probably in early May.

Keep Out, Arafat Tells U.S.

BEIRUT (AP) — Palestinian guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat has told the United States not to interfere in the Lebanese civil war.

Noting that the U.S. 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean is within 24 hours sailing of Lebanon, Arafat told a news conference Tuesday:

"America says its fleet can arrive on these shores within 24 hours. We now are within range of the fleet. I say welcome America. You will sink in Lebanon as you sank in Vietnam."

Defence Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said in Washington today the U.S. is not currently planning to evacuate American citizens but is standing by in case an evacuation is called.

Meanwhile, leftist Moslem chief Kamal Junblatt said he is under pressure from Syria to stop the Lebanese struggle.

Syrians have stopped a shipment of 4,000 weapons and seven million rounds of ammunition from reaching Lebanese Moslems and have stationed 18,000 soldiers on their side of the border to seal access routes into Lebanon, Junblatt said.

However, Junblatt told reporters before the meeting he still demands that rightist Christian forces agree to the resignation of President Suleiman Franjieh and to far-reaching changes in the distribution of political power before any ceasefire.

NEWS BRIEFS

Reachng 23 Million

OTTAWA (CP) — The population of Canada on Jan. 1 was estimated at 22,998,000, an increase of 339,000 from a year earlier, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

Prisoner Burns Self

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — Francois Tallon Ferland, a prisoner in the B.C. Penitentiary, died at midnight Monday night by setting fire to his cell. A penitentiary spokesman said Ferland apparently poured a flammable fluid over himself and his bed and set it afire.

IRA Robs Train

DUBLIN (Reuter) — A gang of masked gunmen early today held up the Cork-to-Dublin mail train in what police believe is the latest of a series of fund-raising raids by the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

Goal Is Austerity

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Argentina's new military president has promised an eventual return to democracy, but called first for "sacrifices and austerity" to stamp out corruption and terrorism. "The armed forces repeat their decision to assure the existence, in the future, of political parties," Lt. Gen. Jorge Videla said Tuesday.

Pictures Slashed

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuter) — A knife-wielding man ran amok here today at an exhibition of photographs by Lord Snowdon, slashing several pictures and cutting the throat of a guard. Police said Lord Snowdon, estranged husband of Princess Margaret, was not at the exhibition at the time.

Teachers Make Sure MLAs Get School Cost Message

VANCOUVER (CP) — At least one teacher from each B.C. school district will try to convince his local MLA in Victoria Thursday to back teachers' demands for increased education spending.

Bill Broadley, who was elected today to his second term as president of the B.C. Teachers Federation, is financing the venture but it is not intended to be an organized rally.

He said the purpose of the trip is to make certain that each member of the legislature realizes what will happen if the Social Credit government doesn't provide more money.

The BCTF president said most school districts he has heard from have indicated they will increase local taxes if the government doesn't come up with more money because the local boards don't intend to cut back on their education programs.

The teachers voted to raise about $1 million through federation fees for an action fund to support their political action programs. Members voted overwhelmingly in favor of raising fees to about $200 from the $165 teachers expected to pay this year.

Teachers left allocation of the money up to the discretion of the new executive, which was being elected today.

Meanwhile, deputy education minister Walter Hardwick told the convention that he and others in the department are out of touch with many education developments in the province.

"Our system is not now managed in a fashion in which we in the department know much of what is going on in education terms," Hardwick said. "I'm concerned about our ability to manage the system — to flag problems when they arise and develop mechanisms to correct them."

He listed several shortcomings of the department and suggested the coming year of "fiscal restraint" will allow for time to review those areas.

He spoke specifically of a review of class sizes, which the BCTF fears will increase under the new education budget.

Hardwick also promised studies and co-operation with the BCTF and the public on concerns over students' ability to read and write, an increased interest in technical training and the problems of children with learning difficulties.

"The evidence from the human resources and justice departments is that there is a close correlation between success in school . . . and social offences at a later date."

HOUSE ARGUES INTO MORNING

Business in the B.C. Legislature bogged down as members wrangled over procedure until the early morning today.

The opposition protested it needs further information before speedy approval could be given to a bill approving up to a $400 million government loan and a $1.222 billion interim supply bill. See Page 60. Other House stories are on Page 72.

Bureaucrats' Pay Cheques Checked

Local government bureaucrats tend to be regarded by the jaundiced eye of the taxpayer as knitters of red tape, procrastinators and pompous purveyors of restrictive rules and regulations.

But, in the Greater Victoria area at least, there are compensations for these much-maligned officials.

An article by five Times municipal reporters on Page 19 today looks at the salaries paid to senior public officials by the municipalities of Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt, as well as the Capital Regional District, noting some interesting facts and drawing certain comparisons.

Deborah Wins Trip to Visit the Stars

Deborah Sing, 19, of Saanich, is looking forward to an all-expense trip to Hollywood as the winner of the Times-CJVI visit-the-stars contest.

"This is wonderful," she said Tuesday afternoon after the official drawing. "I didn't think I had a chance."

The win certainly was not easy.

Deborah marked down Al Pacino as best actor, then at the last moment scratched it out and changed it to the correct winner Jack Nicholson before mailing it in.

Then she arrived at the post office at the eleventh hour — literally. It was 11 p.m. Saturday, one hour before the deadline, when her letter went down the chute.

Making it all chancier, of the 4,600 who entered the contest, 30 per cent had the right answers and Deborah's name was drawn from among 1,380 finalists.

"I watched the Academy Awards and I knew I had the right answers but I was afraid it was too late. I am very happy about this because now we can go to Hollywood this summer."

"We" includes her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Sing, of 1715 Blair, along with Deborah and her sister and three brothers.

The prize pays expenses for two and the rest of the family will be paying their own way.

"I decided that if I won we would go as a family. My brother is the only one who has been to Los Angeles. He went down with the Mount Douglas High School band. He can act as our tour guide."

Deborah is a graduate of Mount Douglas and is employed at Eaton's.

Three consolation prizes of a dinner for two at The Empress and two passes to an Odeon theatre were awarded to those whose names were drawn second, third and fourth from among the 1,380 finalists.

They are Patricia Haram of 6788 Blanchard Road in Sooke, Helen Pride of 203-1002 Pakington Street and Betty Marshall of 41-1706 Newton Street.

Ironically Deborah won her trip by correctly predicting a clean sweep for One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest but she has not yet seen the movie.

"I read the book in high school and I thought that if they could make a movie out of it, it would be quite an achievement. I saw Jaws and I was very impressed but I took a chance on One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest on the basis of the book."

She is an avid movie fan.

Quebec Bars Ads Aimed at Tads

QUEBEC (CP) — Legislation tabled in the Quebec national assembly Tuesday will bar all advertising directed at children under 13 and virtually eliminate premiums from soap and cereal boxes and other products.

The bill tabled by Lise Bacou, minister of consumer affairs, co-operative and financial institutions, is a revised and expanded version of the 1971 Consumer Protection Act.

Miss Bacon told a news conference after the bill was tabled that she had insisted on introducing the legislation this month in the hopes that it will be sanctioned before the end of June and the summer recess.

Where the current law lays down rules governing publicity directed at children, the new bill bans commercial advertising directed at children under 13.

One article of the bill states: "No merchant shall offer any premium to a consumer, excepting services or a rebate on a future purchase, unless the consumer is offered the choice between the premium and the value in cash ascribed to it in his advertising."

Miss Bacon said this meant no more towels in soap boxes or toys in cereal boxes and no more food stamps.

The bill also stipulates that a used-car dealership must pay half the costs of repairing a defect in the motor or power train of one of its cars if the vehicle was sold for more than $1,000 and if the defect occurs within two months of the sale.

In the case of car repairs costing $160 or more, the bill obliges a garage keeper to furnish the customer with a detailed estimate of the repairs needed itemizing the costs of parts and labor.

A guarantee of one month or 1,000 miles must cover all parts repaired or replaced.

In the area of credit cards, the bill provides. "In case of loss or theft . . . the consumers, shall incur no responsibility for a debt resulting from the use of such card by a third party after the issuer is notified of the loss or theft.

"Even when such a notice is not sent, the responsibility of the consumer whose credit card is lost or stolen shall be limited to the sum of $50."

The bill also bans advertising to the effect that a merchant accepts cheques issued by the governments of Canada or Quebec.

WILLIAMS PLANNING NEW BCR SESSION

Labor Minister Allan Williams was to arrange a meeting for today between officials of the United Tansportation Union and British Columbia Railway in an attempt to end a contract dispute.

Williams announced the meeting after talks between his office and the UTU adjourned Tuesday.

Glen Bowles, a UTU spokesman, said his union wants to continue negotiations, but doesn't want to discuss binding arbitration — the settlment formula accepted by the three other unions without contracts bargaining with the railway.

The UTU's main dispute with the railway concerns its demand for daily overtime payments.

Japanese Trawler Nabbed

The second foreign fishing vessel to be arrested this month was to enter the Inner Harbor at 8 p.m. tonight under the escort of the fisheries patrol vessel Howay.

The 210-foot Japanese stern trawler Shizuoka Maru 175 was put under arrest about 3 p.m. Tuesday.

The Howay spotted her fishing inside the Canadian fisheries' closure line in the Queen Chorlotte Sound.

The Howay's master, Capt. Wally Furlong, put a fisheries officer aboard the Japanese vessel which had 280 tons of ocean perch in her hold.

Vancouver fisheries officer Ken Pitrie reports the skipper of the Shizuoka Maru 175 faces a maximum of $35,000 in fines if found guilty in court.

There is a maximum fine of $10,000 for being inside the closure line and a maximum penalty of $2,000 for fishing inside the restricted area.

LIDS RECALLED

Canada Safeway stores throughout B.C. are calling back about one million canning lids sold last year because some are proving faulty.

Safeway spokesman Marilyn Chilvers said the Rosewood brand lids were sold in all B.C. stores, including those in Victoria.

Company tests on the lids, conducted after complaints from customers, showed that one in every few hundred would not hold a vacuum.

Chilvers said the food canned would go mouldy after esposure to the air through the faulty seal, alerting people to the fact that the food was bad.

The lids were offered for sale after the main canning season, Chilvers said, so most are probably still in storage awaiting this year's season.

Safeway is offering a full refund.

Five Firms Sign With Teamsters

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — Doug McLeod, a Teamsters Union spokesman, said Tuesday night that five Vancouver area trucking companies have bypassed their bargaining agent — Transport Labor Relations — and signed an agreement on their own with the union.

McLeod said the agreement meets the Teamsters' demands for a $1.40-an-hour increase over one year on a base rate of $6.50 for semi-trailer drivers.

McLeod would not name the companies involved in the agreement but said more will be contacted by the union to see if they will also go along with it.

Irvin Froese, chief negotiator for TLR, described as despicable the Teamsters' action to get the five companies to agree to union's demands.

Froese said he believes only one or two of the five are members of TLR and the action of attacking the smaller carriers means something is wrong with the bargaining process.

Meanwhile some 400,000 U.S. teamsters, who move 60 per cent of that nation's manufactured goods, have voted to strike at midnight if no agreement is reached in their contract talks.

Labor Secretary W. J. Usery met with negotiators in formal and informal sessions in Washington until early today and indicated hopes a settlement could be reached.

Economic issues — particularly wages and a cost-of-living escalator — were given as the main obstacles.

McGeer To See Contracts

All B.C. colleges have been asked to file with the education department employment contracts of all senior administrators, Education Minister Pat McGeer told the Legislature Tuesday.

The move came as McGeer announced a government inquiry into a $41,700 severance payment granted a Vancouver College principal who resigned after 18 months service.

McGeer called the settlement "extremely excessive" and said he ordered the inquiry as soon as he learned of the settlemeont which will go to former Capilano College principal Peter Spratt.

"To say that I was shocked over the college council's decision to give Mr. Spratt a year's salary of $41,000 in lieu of notice is putting it mildly," said McGeer.

The minister said he believes college principals should come under the same severance provisions as senior public servants — one month's pay for each year of service up to six month's pay.

Government officials have been ordered to contact the college about the reasons behind the severance pay.

Spratt resigned from the college Monday following a disagreement with the college council.

Teachers Return

Fight for Rights . . . or Lose Them

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Ralph Nader, early disciple of auto safety and patron saint of consumerism, gave a crash course in effective citizenship to some 600 Victoria and lower island residents Tuesday.

A nearly half-filled Royal Theatre heard Nader speak for more than two hours and asked questions for another 45 minutes to conclude the second one of the Menie Brereton memorial lecture series.

The audience didn't seem to mind him being 15 minutes late — difficult plane connections — and responded frequently during his talk with bursts of laughter and applause to Nader's barbs aimed at government and corporate targets.

He had some special advice for Canadians:

—Dump the Official Secrets Act. Adopt freedom of information legislation. How can there be democracy with secrecy?

Do more parliamentary investigating. Canada needs capacity to conduct Watergate-type hearings.

—Develop student investigative organizations, like the Ontario Public Interest Research Group, to deal with nuclear power, pollution and other subjects of social importance.

—Question institutions, such as the press. Ask why newspapers do things the way they do, why more relevant matter is not published. "Tell them to stop using so much pulp from over the wire . . . develop alternative journalism."

—Develop democratic institutions and work at them. "We have the foot in the door to develop democratic institutions — flesh it out." In a country the size of Canada, 4,000-5,000 citizens devoting 200-300 hours of their time a year, "you can't believe the progress you'll make."

"As my father used to tell me, 'if you don't use your rights, you'll lose your right,' " Nader said.

He also had a sharp word for this country. Canada had lost some of its moral authority on the nuclear issue by its sale of a Candu reactor to India, enabling that nation to build a bomb.

On the Trident missile submarine base under construction at Bangor, Wash., Nader said it is up to Canada to take a strong moral stand against such an aggressive move. But it would be more difficult because Canada is "pushing the sale of nuclear reactors" abroad.

The base will be home for "the most destructive machine in human history, more destructive than all wars, right through Vietnam. I don't think the U.S. needs it. It is not necessary for the balance of power."

At another point he was referring to bribery as a tool of purchasing agents and being told in Montreal that such a thing didn't happen in Canada.

Nader: 'take action'

"Who owns Canada?" he asked.

The crowd murmured an appreciative, "Ah-h-h-h."

"Our northernmost prosperous colony," Nader added and slapped Quebec for being a pollution haven for American-based corporations.

Citizenship has become dull because it is important. Two hundred years ago, Americans gave more of their time to citizenship than they do today; the active citizen is the deviate, while apathy is normal.

"There are no awards for active citizens in North America (although) there are for people who save children from the bottom of wells, and for rescuing cats off the highway."

Citizen action is a threat to established political power. "Why do you think they praised the silent majority? Because the silent majority left them alone."

Nader said there is no such thing as daily democracy without daily citizenship.

People, labor unions, consumer groups, other democratic organizations must perserve against giant corporations and big government in a creative struggle:

"The greatest public role in the world—the full-time citizen."

When people say, "what good can one person do?" or, "you can't fight city hall," they coalesce into inaction. But every movemnet started with one person, Nader said.

"I know of no spontaneous combustion of civic movement."

"It is, nonetheless a hard struggle because those who have asked people to believe have persevered over those who ask people to think. "Thinking is hard work."

And with two super powers of a magnitude never before seen, rampant pollution, threat of nuclear holocaust and destruction of the ozone, "this globe doesn't have many years left at the present rate."

Civilization has both mastered and abused nature and pushed itself into a plutonium-based economy, Nader said.

"But don't worry folks, its safe. A perfect technology—like the Titanic. Like Thalidomide."

The dangers of nuclear generating stations, transport of radioactive fuels and waste, expsoure to hijacking, even the loss of civil rights by granting police powers to nuclear utility companies, are too great to ignore, Nader said.

"Why not develop solar energy?

"Because Exxon doesn't own the sun. We don't have an energy problem in the United States. We have an Exxon problem."

The sun is a non-depleting resource, it is found all over the world, is connected straight to each consumer's home, eliminates the utility company, requires no centralized technology to control price and supply "and bring government to its knees."

That's why government is not pushing solar power and why corporations are not developing it, said Nader.

Exxon is part of the corporate welfare system that has existed in the oil industry for 40 years, he charged. Energy "monopoloids", like Exxon, like energy sources that can be controlled all the way to the consumer.

But power in a democracy can't be corrupted if it is insecure, if it is accountable, or if it is watched critically by citizens and consumer action groups. The great need, Nader said, is to fill the vast gap between organized bureaucracy and unorganized citizens.

And citizens need participatory rights to question why corporations are subsidized, why governments allow proliferation of the nuclear industry and similar matters. Candu sales abroad, for example, should have citizen approval.

VOLVO: WE NOW HAVE 5 SCHOOLS OF THOUGHT ON THE SUBJECT.

For years, thinking people have found their way to our Volvo showroom for an intelligently designed car. But this year, it will require even more thought to leave in one. We'll confront you with a multiple choice: five Volvos.

There's a two-door and a four-door sedan and a five-door wagon in our basic 240 series. (Caution: what we call "basic" is by some cars' standards, opulent.)

You get a fuel-injected, overhead cam engine. Rack-and-pinion steering. Four-wheel power disc brakes. Steel-belted radials. Infinitely adjustable, orthopedically designed bucket seats. Front side window defrosters. Tinted glass all around. Rear window defroster/de-mister. All standard equipment.

Then there's our new 264 GL. A luxury four-door sedan. You not only get everything above. You get all below.

Automatic transmission or four-speed manual with overdrive. Power-assisted steering. Leather faced seats. Sunroof. Power front windows. Air conditioning. Heated driver's seat. And Volvo's largest engine: an overhead cam, fuel-injected V-6.

There's even a luxury station wagon. It offers most of the standards above plus a 67.6-cu.-ft. load compartment behind the front seat.

Come on in. We're now in a position to disappoint you four ways. And satisfy you in one.

Low Farce

The little drama being played in the legislature this week has many of the requirements for good theatre — conflict of wills, an interesting subject (money), a cast of actors with loud voices — but at bottom it's mainly low farce, a sham.

It's all over Bill 3, the British Columbia Deficit Repayment Act, 1975-76, the enabling legislation to allow the minister of finance to borrow $400 million to pay the deficit (in the language of the government's thespians — the shambles, sloppy mess, unbelievable disorder) left by the outgoing New Democratic Party administration.

The government insists that the bill must be rushed through the legislature before midnight today, when the 1975-76 fiscal year comes to a close. The deficits were run up in that year, so must be paid off in that year, goes the reasoning from the treasury benches. But who needs the money in such a hurry? Nearly half of the borrowing the bill authorizes will be used to wipe out ICBC's accumulated deficit.

But does the crown corporation need the cash at midnight, else it is seized by the sheriff and his bailiffs and padlocked, policy writers and adjusters evicted into the night? Of course not. The deficit must be paid off, but at the moment the corporation is flush with money, a couple of hundred million dollars at least, from all the premiums drivers had to pay by Feb. 29.

It is absurd to suggest that the bill must pass by midnight to provide a transfusion of funds to keep the deficit-ridden crown corporations from shutting down. There's no cash flow problem with the government or any of its agencies, but it insists on acting as if loathsome disease threatened unless Finance Minister Evan Wolfe is allowed by the nasty NDP to mush to the rescue with a special dogteam sled loaded with life-giving serum.

(Similar reasons have been put forth by the government, too, for the urgency in granting interim supply, a device whereby the legislature allows the government a portion of its annual budget to keep the machinery operating without giving up the right to grill cabinet ministers about their departmental spending plans.

(The reasoning is specious — the civil service payday doesn't fall due until the middle of April, so there are at least two weeks to grant interim supply. There's no hurry.)

That was a test of the NDP's new time limits on debate, which incidentally remain in force despite Social Credit's vehement opposition to them a year ago.

So we see a "filibuster" by the opposition against Bill 3, and a government equally determined that the bill will go through on schedule. It's an interesting clash of wills, the first real test of mettles for NDP and Social Credit in their new roles. Turn the clock back a year, and you'd see a similar situation, with the parties on opposite sides of the house. Bill Bennett had his slogan then too: "Not a dime without debate."

They were so vehement that they forced the NDP government to give in and grant more time to debate spending estimates. This time, it's the NDP in opposition seeing how far the new boys can be pushed. It will provide a fascinating test of political strengths, and who in the legislature will set the pace, government or opposition.

"... another thing I need from you ... got a match? ..."

Open Holster, Open Mind

It is interesting to note all the brouhaha created by the sight of a holstered handgun. Sidney council's handwringing about the threatening appearance of the new Victoria uniform that will include handguns in open holsters on the right hip is almost laughable. This same council or any of its local facsimiles would be falling over itself to endorse any other measure leading to better police efficiency including one that would cauterize civil liberties. But land sakes, the sight of the butt end of a .38 calibre police service revolver, why it's obscene!

Central Saanich police officers have had open holsters for at least three years. But Sidney is so worried about what's happening at the other end of the street, it apparently doesn't notice what's going on next door. It is even more ludicrous to hear complaints that exposed weapons don't create the warm and friendly attitude council wants surrounding the police. A police officer faced with an armed antagonist doesn't want to create a warm, friendly attitude. Having his weapon efficiently close at hand may save his own life, not to mention those of innocent passersby. Police officers are not public relation shucks for municipal councils. They are there to protect the citizenry through compassionate enforcement of laws.

Most police forces have tough rules regarding an officer's even drawing his gun. More stringent rules are observed about firing it. Any time a weapon is discharged in the line of duty a report is required on most forces. For years Canadian policemen have been entangled in Sam Browne belts, button-down holsters and uniforms that in general look like the cast-off wardrobe of a Bengal Lancer bat boy. If municipal councils would worry more about the labyrinthine laws they enact, the 700 sections of the criminal code that result in overflowing jails, or some of the more inhumane aspects of enforcing outmoded laws, they would better serve their jurisdictions. Instead they prattle on about appearances rather than substance. Was it ever thus at this low level of political acumen.

Let the policemen have open necks and open holsters. Let them be comfortable and secure in an increasingly difficult job. Meanwhile, councils carry on tilting at windmills inside their heads.

JAMES RESTON

How's He Going to Do It?

WASHINGTON — U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's warnings to the Soviet Union and Cuba against further military intervention in Africa make good political headlines, but it would be helpful if he would tell the U.S. how he proposes to carry them out.

In his speech before the World Affairs Council of Dallas, he said "the United States will not accept further Cuban military interventions abroad." The issue in Angola, he added, "was and remains the unacceptable precedent of massive Soviet and Cuban intervention in a conflict thousands of miles from their shores ... the danger was and is that our inaction ... will lead to further Soviet and Cuban pressures on the mistaken assumption that America has lost the will to counter adventurism or even to help others do so."

It is easy to understand his reaction, especially since he is being attacked in the presidential campaign for being soft on the communists, but what do these stern public statements mean?

Back Them Up

If the United States will "not accept" further Cuban military interventions abroad, how does he propose to stop them or punish them? Would he go back to a policy of economic or naval blockade of Cuba, or put military pressure on that island to force the Cuban expeditionary army back home?

His general principle seems sensible enough. "We are not the world's policeman," he says, "but we cannot permit the Soviet Union or its surrogates to become the world's policeman either, if we care anything about our security and fate and freedom of the world. It does no good to preach strategic superiority while practising regional retreat."

But it does no good either to issue warnings unless you are ready, willing, and able to carry them out, as Kissinger himself discovered in Vietnam and again in Angola. He stated another principle in his Dallas speech:

"The issue is not an open-ended commitment or a policy of indiscriminate American intervention. Decisions on whether and how to take action must always result from careful analysis and open discussion. It cannot be rammed down the throats of an unwilling congress or public."

This is precisely the problem now. For the secretary of state has issued his warnings and indicated the United States would act in some unspecified way if Moscow and Havana don't stop their "unacceptable" military adventures, but there has been no "careful analysis" in congress or any serious "open discussion" of these highly complicated and dangerous situations, and nothing to indicate that his warnings wouldn't stick in congress's throat.

HENRY KISSINGER
... just idle threats?

In Africa, as in Southeast Asia, the Soviet government has openly insisted on its right to support what it calls "wars of national liberation." The United States has protested repeatedly about this policy and has warned that Moscow cannot violate the principle of co-existence "selectively" without endangering the U.S.-Soviet co-operation elsewhere.

There is no evidence here, however, that Kissinger is recommending a policy of economic retaliation against the USSR.

Both nations said in the Helsinki declaration that they would "refrain in their mutual relations, as well as in their international relations in general, from the threat of use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state, or in any other manner inconsistent with the purposes of the United Nations and with the present declaration."

This declaration also forbade not only the threat of direct force but of the "indirect use of force." Nevertheless, the communist policy of intervening in these "wars of liberation" continues, along with the assertion by both Moscow and Havana that it is not inconsistent with the policy of detente.

"We are certain," Kissinger said, without indicating who "we" are, "that the American people understand and support these two equal principles of our policy — our support for majority rule in Africa and our firm opposition to military intervention."

Threats Don't Help

This may be so, though the issues have scarcely been debated here, but if the government of Rhodesia insists on minority rule and the U.S. rules out military intervention, it is hard to see how Kissinger's warnings and principles can avoid more guerrilla war in that part of the world.

Either they mean nothing more than a bold stand that would please the Reagan supporters in the presidential campaign, or they mean that the U.S. has finally decided to draw the line against Soviet and Cuban military intervention.

And if the latter is true, then the American people, who would have to carry out the warnings, have a right to know what the secretary has in mind. He is obviously frustrated by the hard task of defending his Soviet policy when it is violated openly by the USSR, and also when his efforts to stop the slide in Africa are opposed by a majority of congress.

But speeches are not likely to restore the balance, and threats that are not understood or supported at home could make the situation both in Africa and in this hemisphere even worse than they now are.

The Swine Flu

The 1918 flu epidemic, deadly, worldwide in scope, left 20 million people dead!

The swine flu virus, for such it was, has lain dormant during the intervening years and now re-emerges to attack young and old, weak and strong alike. This is not a 24-hour flu that a couple of aspirin and a few days in bed will cure! In fact, this is a deadly plague. Those living today who survived 1918 and the terrifying moments of suspense wondering who would be next, will not scoff at the seriousness of the threatening disaster. Those born since then have only to contemplate one tragic fact to be impressed — 20 million men, women and children ... dead! Digest this fact. It can happen again.

The United States government, recognizing the necessity of immediate response to the problem, has reacted as only a responsible government can. The appropriation of $135 million dollars has been announced by President Ford to conduct a mass innoculation program.

Grave question: What action will be taken by the government of Canada to protect Canadian citizens from this deadly virus? Less important business must not push this matter aside. A question of life or death deserves the highest priority. Citizens and news media must insist on immediate recognition by the Canadian government of theseriousness of the problem.

Speaking for all concerned people I call upon the government of Canada to inform the Canadian people of what decisive action will be taken. This is a high priority matter and must be acted upon without delay. Remember, lives are at stake. —R. J. Gordon-Lyall, Sooke.

Taxing Inequalities

I see the mayor of Oak Bay has proposed that those over 65 should be exempt from paying property taxes.

I know that I am typical of many younger property owners in this city. I bought my house after the property boom began in 1973 and like many young people face mortgage payments of over $400 a month. For anybody earning around the national average of about $1,000 a month this means that mortgage payments take up nearly 50 per cent of net income and leaves many young families about $400 a month after mortgage payments; about the same as a pensioner couple receives in the form of government pensions. Since many pensioners own their own homes and face no mortgage payments, the young family and the government pensioners are often approximate equals in terms of disposable income. Why should equal groups not be taxed equally? Justice and taxation theory require equal treatment for equals.

The mayor's suggestion would be greatly improved if some sort of income test was applied. Some over 65-year-olds are much wealthier than I. Why should I pay their taxes? If a pensioner has a low income and is mainly dependent on the government pension let him apply for an exemption.

Finally the mayor should be aware that a rise in property taxes on rest homes and apartments will be passed on, at least in part, to residents and tenants. If these are pensioners they should have that part paid by the municipality. If not, the mayor will be discriminating between property owning pensioners and non-property owning pensioners. — Peter Dunnett, 2850 Doncaster Drive.

Frequent Causes

Help! I'm broke due to good causes which included: UNICEF, Dec.-Jan., United Way, Christmas Seals, Mothers' March (Feb.), B.C. Heart Foundation; March Telethon from Vancouver (Kinsmen), Telethon from Victoria (Lions), Easter Seals; April Conquer Cancer Campaign, Muscular Dystrophy Fund, YM-YWCA drive to raise $1,350,000 — just to name a few of the door to door canvassers.

I like to be generous but enough is enough. I thought the United Way was an attempt to group many of these. I am getting tired of "shelling out" for all the causes. I will just have to say no, sorry. — Mrs. A. Shelly, Fort Street.

Mason Gaffney, head of Institute for Economic Policy Analysis.

Research Institute

In a province that depends so heavily upon natural resources and upon public management of those resources, extensive research of government policy is essential. The British Columbia Institute for Analysis of Economic Policy was established to provide expertise and research in critical area of government policy-making. This, we are told, is not a priority. The recent decision to close this small research group reflects a philosophy of short-sighted thinking. One might well ask whether the government, in the rush of purge, ever thought to research the implications of rejecting the institute.

The institute has supported itself through a $5 million perpetual fund which provided long-term self-sufficiency. It sought nothing from the annual revenues of government coffers. Nor has it ever served political purposes, as its independent research on copper smelters, the ferry system, property taxation and housing development attests.

Perhaps this government has absolved itself from thinking about its own decisions and about the future of this province? — Alan Ferguson, 3050 Cedar Hill Road.

Housing Equation

At a meeting between the Vancouver Tenants Association and the members of the legislature in Victoria recently, the tenants were asked if they thought that the taxpayers should supply housing for the tenants. There is no need for that. The government can get into housing without using one cent of the taxpayers' money.

Landlords and builders have been using money from progressive building mortgages through Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. for more than 20 years to construct apartments.

The initial problem of such entrepreneurs has been acquiring title to the land on which the apartment is to be constructed. But any level of government would not have this problem. Federal and provincial governments have crown lands, so at once could get an approximate amount of one-quarter of the mortgage with which it would be committed to construction of a portion of the premises, generally the basement. When this is done and the work inspected, another draw is issued to build the skeleton or basic frame, and so on until the aprtment is completed. The final draw is held back until all bills for labor and suppliers are paid, generally 61 days. But before that the structure is ready for occupancy and the rentals start pouring in. And with a portion of those rent monies, the landlord, after another month or so commences to pay off the mortgage.—Edith Davis, Victoria.

Moral Calculations

I drive a rather ancient Volkswagen van. Everybody — almost everybody — passes me on the highway. The other day I drove to town — nice sunshine, hardly any traffic — and on the Gorge somebody behind me tooted his horn. A Saanich police car with the shiny blue cartop light. Of course, I had to stop. "You drove a little too fast," said the constable. "I don't believe it."

"Oh yes you did. Otherwise I would not have stopped you." Well, you cannot argue with the police. "It will cost you no money, but three points." So he takes my driver's licence and goes to his car to write the ticket. I light my pipe, to relax, and walk over to the young officer. He is still writing, opens his window and says: "Well, since you are such a nice old gentleman (in spite of my long hair and big beard), I changed my mind and have given you only a warning ticket." The sun seemed to me much brighter and warmer then. The moral? Be nice to a cop, it might make him change his mind. — H. B. F. Schmidt, 765 Arden Road.

Justified Hunt

Like the issues of abortion and capital punishment, the annual seal hunt off the northeast coast of Canada has become a very emotional subject.

I wonder if people every calmly consider the matter dispassionately? If seals were not hunted by east coast fishermen as part of their livelihood, the following three points would have to be dealth with:

1. The multiplying herds of seals would have to be controlled by the government.
2. Fishermen would lose a valuable part of their meagre annual income and so we would have more people on the dole.
3. Seals eat vast amounts of fish, and if seal hunting were to end, much of the east coast fishery would be decimated.

Another point which does not seem to be widely known by all those self-righteous, meat-eating, leather-wearing opponents of the seal hunt is that seal meat is a source of food (considered a delicacy) for thousands of people.

Wouldn't it be wonderful if society could get all excited and campaign on behalf of the starving and oppressed million of people in our world. The real brutality and barbarity on this tiny planet is man's inhumanity to his fellow man, including bigotry and social injustice. —S.E., Victoria.

Fed Up

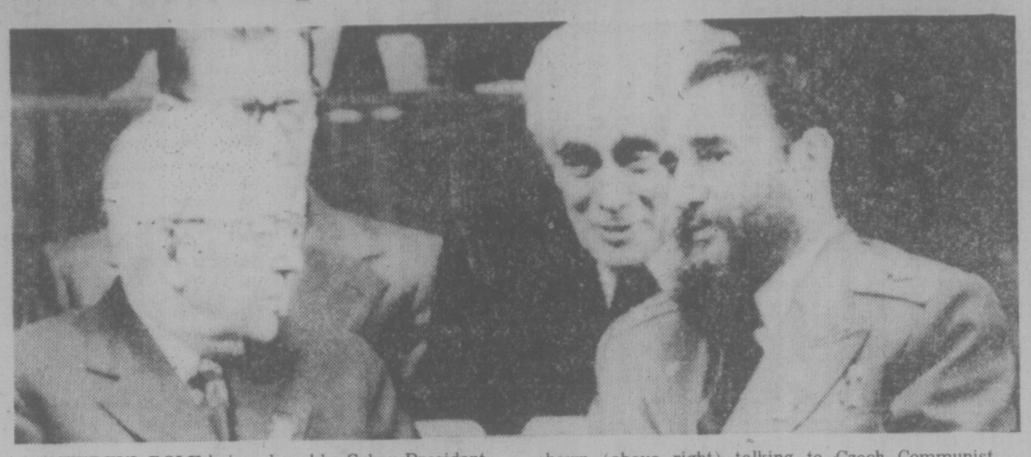

For B.C. Telephone and B.C. Hydro, I'm fed up. Can't drive or afford the bus, or a cheque, plus an eight-cent stamp on your new fancy envelope.

If I walk two miles to the corner store to pay my bill, it now costs me 10 cents plus my shoe leather. It's time B.C. Telephone and B.C. Hydro were forced to open up cashier wickets in the outskirts of Victoria.—One Thin Dime.

Castro's Deep African Plunge

By JIM HOAGLAND
The Washington Post

"We don't know anything about desert fighting," a Cuban official stationed in Europe said with a sly smile as he dismissed reports that Cuban soldiers are aiding Arab guerrillas in the Western Sahara. "The jungle is our bag."

The Cuban military victory over American-supported African factions in Angola has inspired much more than such bits of diplomatic machismo in Cuban embassies abroad.

It has sharply boosted Prime Minister Fidel Castro's stock with revolutionary regimes and movements throughout the Third World, where the Cuban presence has been growing quietly but rapidly in recent years. Suddenly, Castro, an obviously isolated figure at the 1973 summit conference of nonaligned nations in Algiers, looms large again in Africa and the Middle East.

The Angolan success is the most visible foreign effort Castro has ever undertaken. But the networks of Cubans working abroad are active and farflung, according to diplomatic and intelligence sources in Europe, the Middle East and Africa. The pattern of Cuban involvement elsewhere in Africa and the Middle East suggests that Castro will want to keep an important presence in Angola for some time. This would enable him to savor a long-overdue victory, to continue to refurbish his tarnished credentials in Latin America by showing his influence elsewhere and to remain in position for further kicks to the groin of the United States and its "imperialist" allies.

In contrast to the suggestions from Washington that Castro is paying a political debt to the Soviet Union by allowing his troops to be used to fight in Angola, European diplomats with long experience in Cuban affairs — as well as Communist bloc sources — suggest that the Soviets have more often restrained Castro from undertaking spectacular foreign adventures, especially in Latin America.

Still, Cuban security men are now helping Algeria's internal security apparatus. In Congo-Brazzaville, Cuban agricultural experts have established a new system of growing sugar cane. Mechanics from Havana maintain Soviet-made tanks and jets in Somalia and South Yemen. In Conakry, Guinea, Cuban teachers have established a Marxist ideological centre for Africans.

Their imprint is seen in Europe, too. Cuban intelligence has long used a Paris travel agency as a cover for recruiting European leftists to their cause by enticing them with cut-rate trips to Havana.

Cuban diplomats here have maintained close links with Latin American extremists, including "Carlos" the Venezuelan terrorist, who led the assault in December on the Vienna headquarters of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The continuing spread into the armies of developing countries of sophisticated Soviet weapons that need outside maintenance expertise and training has helped implant Castro's soldiers and mechanics around the Third World.

The darker-skinned, Spanish-speaking Cubans are far more acceptable to many Third World leaders concerned about their non-aligned images than would be a growth in the number of Soviet advisers these leaders host, according to European and African diplomats.

The stationing of some 3,000 to 4,000 Cuban military men in at least seven African and Arab countries other than Angola is also an efficient way for Cuba to repay at least a fraction of the enormous debt contracted to the Soviet Union for its economic help since 1959, these sources feel.

But the driving force behind the expanding Cuban presence abroad is undoubtedly Castro's revolutionary mystique, which has failed to make a major impact closer to home in the Caribbean and Latin America but which is paying important dividends in other former colonial areas where the United States has less room to manoeuvre.

★ ★ ★

Guinea's President Sekou Toure "loved the idea of being linked with a small country that had stood up to the giant of imperialism, the United States," says a diplomat who watched the arrival of Cuban instructors to establish the ideological institute in Conakry in 1968.

There are reports that Toure has Cubans in his personal body guard because he mistrusts his own people.

Castro and his charismatic lieutenant in exporting revolution, Ernesto Che Guevara, who helped forge the Cuban political link to Africa in 1965 before going to Bolivia to his death, began preaching the need for a Third World "common front to fight against imperials" almost from the beginning of their own revolution.

★ ★ ★

"The ghetto feeling that the American quarantine and the heavy dependence on the Soviet Union imposed on Cuba's leaders has to be understood," says a French official who lived in Cuba in the mid-1960s. "They had to find a way to break out."

Their successful guerrilla war and the defiance of the United States facilitated contracts with African revolutionary movements and governments that had just wrested their own independence from colonial powers.

Castro's apparent inability to back up his bombast with action sharply undermined his credibility in the Third World, however. He found few defenders at the Algiers nonaligned summit when he was openly attacked by Cambodia's Norodom Sihanouk and Libya's Muammar Quaddafi as a false revolutionary prophet.

Any Soviet restraints that may have existed were clearly lifted in Angola, where Moscow's and Havana's objective appear to have coincided in saving the Marxist-oriented Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola from defeat and then awarding the movement a military victory over its rivals.

Castro's deep plunge into Africa and the Soviet willingness to risk detente over Angola have stunned pro-Western African countries and their European friends.

In France, officials confide that concern about the possibility of Cuban troops moving against the white-minority governments controlling Rhodesia and Southwest Africa was an important factor in France's haste to recognize the Popular Movement and, presumably, to gain some leverage over "a rapidly deteriorating situation in which we do not know the intentions of the Cubans."

Bonn has reacted by holding up small separate foreign aid packages that were to be granted to Cuba and Angola this year, and is pushing for an important joint Common Market aid package that might influence the Popular Movement's decision on asking the Cubans to stay or leave.

The primary effort by Washington and by Common Market members to get the Cubans out centres now on friendly African states in the Organization of African Unity, informed sources report.

Intelligence sources report that there has been no growth in the 11,000-man Cuban expeditionary force in the past two weeks, but they have not detected any signs of Cuban withdrawals.

★ ★ ★

The Angolan expedition is a sharp departure from the decade-old Cuban involvement in Africa because of its size, visibility and use. The Cubans fought as co-ordinated infantry and tank units. Intelligence sources say the Cuban troops engaged in few direct clashes with white South African units and remain an intested element in widening the conflict in southern Africa.

The swift success in Angola has overshadowed the long-standing and varied nature of Cuban ties to revolutionaries in the Third World.

Algeria's former President Ahmed Ben Bella provided the Cubans with their first important window on Africa in 1962 by going ahead with a visit to Havana after calling on President Kennedy in Washington. He said he would adopt "Castro-style" socialism.

Guevara, under fire from the Soviets and ostensibly at odds with Castro, sat out much of the first three months of 1965 in Algeria and built up strong ties to African nationalist movements, especially the anti-Portuguese guerrilla forces fighting in Angola, Mozambique and Guinea-Bissau.

Guevara's whereabouts for much of 1965 remain a mystery. Most of his biographers accept that he secretly spent several months inside the eastern region of the former Belgian Congo, now Zaire, helping leftist guerrillas. Cuban exiles were employed by the CIA to help the central government in that conflict.

There are also indications, however, that he may have visited areas of Angola controlled by the Popular Movement and that Cuban military help date from then.

His visits to Conakry and Brazzaville certainly paved the way for the sending of military advisers and agricultural experts to those two former French colonies, where unstable regimes have been the targets of repeated coup attempts by local rivals.

About 300 Cuban military advisers are now in Conakry. The smaller number of advisers assigned to Brazzaville appear to have been reinforced by logistical experts during the Angolan war to handle the large transport operations of men and material mounted by the Soviets.

By the late 1960s a force of at least 200 Cuban officers and technicians operating out of Conakry were deeply involved in fighting alongside Soviet-armed African nationalists against the Portuguese colonial army in Guinea-Bissau.

New Light on the Ice Age

By Walter Sullivan

NEW YORK — Contrary to longstanding assumptions, it apparently snowed very little at the height of the last ice age, 18,000 years ago.

This has been indicated by an ambitious effort by scientists from a number of institutions to reconstruct the global climate of that period.

It appear that when the ice sheets began to form, some 80,000 years ago, they grew rapidly. But as they spread, their effect on atmospheric circulation was such that the world became increasingly arid.

As one participant in the scientific project put it, perhaps within ice sheets' growth patterns were the seeds of their own destruction.

The project is known as CLIMAP, for Climate Long-Range Investigation Mapping and Prediction. Its headquarters is at the Lamont-Doherty Geological Observatory of Columbia University in New York City. The findings, published as two reports in the March 15 issue of the journal Science, covers only one stage of the project, initiated in 1971.

No attempt is made to assess what caused the ice ages or what the future may bring. The findings are a "snapshot" of the world as it was 18,000 years ago, showing how circulation and temperature patterns of the air and oceans differed from those of today.

Another "snapshot" is planned of the world as it was between the last two ice ages, 120,000 years ago, when the world was warmer than today. These and other projected "snapshots" should help explain why the changes took place.

★ ★ ★

This new line of attack, according to Dr. John Imbrie, professor of geology at Brown University and a former CLIMAP director, is for the first time converting historical geology into a mathematical science.

The climate of 18,000 years ago has been reconstructed from evidence in the sediments (on land and at sea) and in the Greenland ice layers laid down at that time. Pollen reveals the contemporary vegetation of a region and hence its climate. The remains of small surface-dwelling sea animals show how warm surface waters were. Deep-dwellers reveal how frigid lower layers of the sea became.

One of the major surprises has been the limited cooling of the world oceans during the ice age. On the average the temperature was only 4.1 degrees Fahrenheit lower than today. Some areas cooled more. According to Imbrie, it appears from samples drilled from the Greenland ice that in the last 120,000 years the climate was never much colder than 18,000 years ago.

It has long been assumed that the most important ingredient of an ice age was heavy snowfall. Yet the study has shown that global precipitation 18,000 years was 15 per cent lower than today. Stable low pressure systems that would have produced heavy snows seem to have been far removed from the ice sheets.

This, it was noted, should not be so surprising for there is very little precipitation in the heart of Antartica today. The lofty ice sheet there makes for very dry weather, and when ice covered large northern areas as well, the whole world was dry, with the apparently local exceptions of the rains that filled Great Salt Lake to brimming and moistened parts of North Africa in the "pluvial" periods.

The Greenland ice samples show rapid accumulation when the ice age was beginning and very little thereafter. It may be that only along the advancing front of the ice was there sufficient snowfall to seed it significantly.

One proposal by the CLIMAP group is that the marked cooling by more than 10 degrees of equatorial surface waters caused by the upwelling of frigid waters, may have had a major effect on world climate. The warm water of that region today is a major source of evaporated water in the atmosphere.

Chinese Still Using The Ancient Abacus

By ROSS H. MUNRO

TIENTSIN — Any Westerner who needs a reminder of the changes wrought in his everyday life by computers and data-processing would do well to wander into one of the bigger branches of the Bank of China.

In a huge, central room he will see long, double rows of desks and, flanking them scores of men and women leafing through pile upon pile of paper and bending over abacuses and old-fashioned mechanical adding machines.

In China's drive for agricultural and industrial modernization, there are many goals which enjoy higher priority than the automation of clerical work. At a branch of the Bank of China in downtown Tientsin, automation is off to a slow and fitful start partly because the Chinese-made electronic calculators provided to the bank don't do the job.

"In some calculations we still use the abacus," said Wu Yuan-chuan a self-assured bank executive whose English was good enough for him to occasionally interject with his own translation of what he had just said.

"We also use some electronic calculators. We have some Chinese-made electronic calculators but the ones being used are from Japan." No details on what was wrong with the Chinese calculators were forthcoming but Wu hastened to add that the bank will use its Chinese-made calculators in the future.

The banking system could be in danger of being swamped by old-fashioned paperwork because recent reports in China's press indicate a rapid expansion is taking place in individual savings, retail sales and domestic commerce in general. This bank in Tientsin deals mainly in international transactions, in facilitating imports and exports in the highly industrialized Tientsin area. Wu said that "our work has been developing fast" and will continue to do so in the future.

Wu described himself as simply a member of the staff but, as he talked about the bank, he conveyed the strong impression of a self-confident, in-charge executive. The bank was built several decades ago — when Tientsin was still a treaty port — by a Yokohama banking company and Wu received us in what obviously was once the boardroom.

The political line he espoused during our conversation was faultlessly proletarian yet he still managed to seem completely at home amidst such hopelessly bourgeois artifacts as dark and elaborate wood panelling and a marble fireplace.

Brainy Scheme for Idle Hands

By ROBIN CLARKE

Clarke is a regular contributor to the New Scientist, where the following article first appeared.

LONDON — I've espoused a good many causes in my time. Not long back I was convinced that if we rid the world of the nuclear terror, its evils would vanish overnight.

Then I got hooked on the extraordinary nastiness of chemical and biological weapons.

After that came the environment, the pigheadedness of scientocrats, the need for the self-sufficiency, and the glory which alternative technology — particularly windmills and solar roofs — could bring to our seedy old lifestyle.

As I grow older (which seems to happen with monotonous regularity) my enthusiasm for these causes is not actually diminished. It's just that I seem to find new ones whose urgency as global problems is even greater than the pressing problem with which I was wrestling last year, or last week.

However, I am now proud to be able to announce that I have at last isolated Global Problem Number One. The sickness of the world, it is now clear, dates from the idea that half of mankind should work with its hands while the other half sits on it arse using its brains.

The net result of this piece of social idiocy is that the second half — the executive one — soon becomes exceedingly ill. It suffers from piles, which lead on to obesity, thrombosis, heart disease, varicose veins and a chronic shortage of breath, which combined with nicotine poisoning, cause death or early retirement.

And during his long illness at the desk, the executive becomes totally out of touch with the real facts of life.

He forgets the difference between a grommet and a sprocket, becomes unable to change even a wheel on his car and pays out an enormous fortune to an army of workers to repair his leaking taps, replace his gale-torn slates and generally ensure that other than lifting a knife and fork the executive hand remains far from spanner, hammer and plasterer's trowel.

Thus all the executive has to look forward to is illness and bankruptcy.

Meanwhile, the other half has not fared much better. Bound forever to the municipal ditch, the plowed field, or the factory floor, their trade is learned in the first year, sometimes the first month. Thereafter they are required to repeat what is already known.

This would be bad enough were it not for the stream of new directives issuing from the executive's office as to how their job might be better done.

As the executive has never actually done the job — if indeed he even remembers what a ditch, field or factory floor looks like — these directives do no more than complicate an already tedious situation. And although the worker can look forward to a long and healthy retirement, his brain by that time has so atrophied that the pleasures of books and similar intellectual pastimes are forever denied him.

In its infinite wisdom, the 20th century has found the answer to this age-old problem. Education. If the would-be worker can be shoved at a sufficiently early age through any institution of higher learning, he can justly claim to be a brain man, not a hand man.

According to the current utopia, all men will one day be executives, having passed, probably at the age of eight, through an advanced course at technical college or university.

Happily, I have now been able to spot the flaw in this scheme of things. Our ditches will go uncleaned, our fields unplowed and our factories unmanned. Instead of there being 1½ million out of work, there will be 60 million. Even the executive will be clobbered, for there will be no one to manufacture his desk.

I am one of the few people I know fully qualified to pontificate on this problem, having successfully solved it at a personal level. I spend half my day at my desk writing words of wisdom such as these for avid readers, and the other half binding, cleaning ditches, plowing fields, and generally maintaining the wellbeing of my family, which now includes 29 ewes (pregnant), one sow (also pregnant), one cow, one calf, three ducks, 42 hens, three dogs, three cats and two children.

When I am returned in the next election as Prime Minister for the Hand-Brain Reform Movement, I therefore intend to pass immediate legislation requiring every person to work half the day with his hands and half with his brain. Admittedly, this will give rise to a few minor social changes.

All doctors will be put out of work and hospitals closed. All gymnasia, health resorts and the more stupid sports will be made illegal, for they will no longer be needed to keep the executive body in something approaching trim. The wearing of both blue collars and white collars will be banned, and instead a striped blue and white version will be made available at all.

The trades of bricklayer, plumber, plasterer, electrician, lathe operator, municipal workman, farm laborer and a few others will also disappear. The Trades Unions, with whom I have not yet had the long and fruitful discussion which I feel sure these matters will engender, will have to reorganize. Indeed, they may not even be needed.

And such is the beauty of this social scheme that retirement will be at death, when life stops, hence saving the country the cost of a state pension plan.

Finally, individuals will of course be free to choose whether they spend the morning working with their hands and the afternoons with their brains, or vice versa.

Now I must go and finish plastering the larder.

PORT MEN HOPEFUL

The Canadian Press

Officials from Canada's major ports are generally optimistic that the volume of goods shipped this year will increase from the depressed level of 1975.

A recovery from the recessionary economic conditions at home and abroad combined with a more tranquil domestic labor scene were expected to return shipments to the more favorable 1974 levels.

The most optimistic predictions come from Vancouver, Canada's most active port; the most negative expectations from Montreal, the third busiest port. Sept-Iles, Que., in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, likely will remain Canada's second busiest port in terms of tonnage due to a large volume of iron ore shipments.

Increased shipments of asbestos and pulp and paper products, which number among Canada's leading exports, were expected to swell volume at many ports. Lengthy strikes had occurred in both industries during 1975, seriously reducing shipments.

In Vancouver, Michael Mulholland of the port manager's office said the spring and summer shipping season was expected to be good.

He was optimistic wheat sales to China and the Soviet Union would be forthcoming and trade with Korea, Japan and Hong Kong would improve by the third quarter.

On the labor front, Mr. Mulholland expected it would be "clear sailing all the way," because the longshoremen's agreement is good to the end of 1976.

The total 1975 volume at Vancouver — 39 million tons — was comprised mainly of grain, coal and sulphur. About two million tons of general cargo was shipped.

At Nanaimo on Vancouver Island, port manager John Dunham said he expects a gradual but solid increase in tonnage this year. Lumber shipments should rise because of a rejuvenation of the housing industry in the United States, he said.

The Hudson Bay port of Churchill, Man., is anticipating a good year for grain shipments but a serious reversal in another of its major commodities, Alberta sulphur.

The port handled almost 100,000 tons of Alberta sulphur last year and almost 50,000 tons in 1974. Edmund Guest, executive director of the Port of Churchill Development Board, said it appears there will be no sulphur shipments this year, partially because of increased rail freight rates.

Cecil Smith, Progressive Conervative member of Parliament for Churchill, has predicted 35 million bushels of grain may be shipped through the port this year to surpass the record 25.9 million bushels set in 1971.

Can Pac Eyes Resources Growth

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian Pacific Ltd. said Tuesday in its 1975 annual report that the effectiveness of the federal government's inflation program is still to be tested.

But the report adds: "Despite the handicaps it imposes on business, the business community is supporting the program in the hope that it may encourage greater realism in the demands that are made on the economy."

Canadian Pacific says inflation will continue to be a major threat to economic stability, although "there is widespread agreement that the performance of the Canadian economy and the economies of Canada's trading partners will improve in 1976."

The company said the most favorable propsects for growth in its 1976 income lie with Canada's natural resource and real estate activities.

While the outlook may improve later in the year, the company said, it appears that steel, base metals and fertilizers will do well to match their 1975 performance.

"If the forecasts of moderate economic growth are realized, all the transportation operations except ships should do better."

Canadain Pacifc reported a consolidated net income in 1975 of $17.9 million, or $2.40 a share, compared with restated net income of $194.4 million, or $2.67 a share in 1974.

Lower earnings for CP Rail, CP Air and CP Ships were due primarily to depressed economic conditions and continuing cost increases.

Other factors which contributed to reduced earnings were strikes in the Canadian pulp and paper and asbestos industries, port strikes in British Columbia, the St. Lawrence River and in the United Kingdom, as well as the continuing large surplus of oil-carrying vessels.

Net income from CP Rail was $31.7 million, compared with restated income of $44.6 million in 1974. The decrease was primarily due to a drop in traffic combined with the impact of cost increases.

The economic recession, together with a series of labor disruptions resulted in a decline in freight traffic volume despite large increases in grain and coal movements.

Sharply lower rates of traffic growth and inflationary pressures on costs combined to give CP Air its first loss in 13 years. The loss amounted to $6.4 million, compared with a profit of $2.5 million in 1974.

Net income from CP Ships of $14.6 million was $4 million lower than in 1974. Earnings from the container operations of Canadian Pacific Steamships Ltd. fell $5.2 million and income from Canadian Pacific Bermuda Ltd. was up $1.2 million.

Continued growth in income from CP Investments in 1975 was attributable mainly to oil and gas, coal mining and real estate activities and the consolidation for a full year of results of The Algoma Steel Corp. Ltd.

Cominco Ltd. had lower income, mainly due to soft markets for lead and zinc.

The natural resource and other activities controlled by Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd. was provided by transportation, telecommunications and miscellaneous activities.

INCO Seeks New Name

TORONTO (CP) — International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. says it will ask shareholders at its annual meeting April 21 to approve a change in the company"s name to Inco Ltd.

The company said in its annual report that the proposed name "more accurately reflects the increasingly diverse character of Inco's activities and adopts the name by which the company has been familiarly known for many years."

The company said it is optimistic about the long-term outlook for the nickel industry.

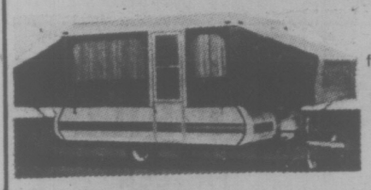

"We have gone ahead with important investments in Canada and elsewhere."

It said nickel production this year is expected to be greater than the 460 million pounds produced in 1975 but below the record level of 510 million pounds in 1974.

Fresh Kilometric Blast for Weatherman

Who has seen the wind? Not even the weatherman.

But he has seen and borne the brunt of change in Canadian standards due to metric conversion and he'll be taking the rap again Thursday when wind velocity will be expressed in kilometres.

Weather offices across the country will see their last mile Wednesday when they stop reporting atmospheric data in miles per hour and offshore disturbances in miles distant from the coast.

Metric conversion in Canada was pioneered in the public eye by Environment Canada when it began stating temperatures in degrees centigrade and precipitation in centimetres a year ago.

The April 1 move is a middle step toward total conversion to the metric system in weather reporting in Canada.

Although the wind speed, distances and barometric readings will be expressed in kilometres per hour (km-h), kilometres (km), and kilopascals (kpa), for all general purposes, weather offices will retain the use of knots per hour for aviation and marine purposes at least for the present.

Since knots is the expression of velocity in terms of nautical miles, it is already an international unit and for flyers and mariners it may remain so. But that's for the metric commission and international discussions to work out.

Locally it is felt few individuals will be bothered by the conversion to metrics because only wind velocities are common to published and broadcast forecasts. However, the weather office notes, there are meteoroligical buffs who like to keep their own records and they will be inconvenienced for a while.

The metric commission leaves it largely to citizens to adjust themselves to the new system: there will be no effort by the climate data centre or pilot briefing office to convert metric readings back to the English system. Total immersion is the best learning technique, the government believes.

But look at it this way: people who learn about wind velocity in metric terms will have no trouble adjusting their driving habits to kilometres per hour when highway signs are changed next year.

For comparison a light wind will be up to 20 km-h; moderate 21-40; strong 41-60; gale 61-90; storm 91-115, and hurricane 115 plus. And that's a few categories less than in the Beaufort scale now in use.

EX-RCMP MAN GUILTY

MONTREAL (CP) — Former RCMP constable Robert Samson was found guilty Tuesday of placing a bomb at the home of a supermarket executive, but was acquitted of a second charge of making the bomb.

A Quebec Superior Court jury of nine men and three women, which failed to reach a unanimous decision Monday, announced its decision after nearly 14 hours of deliberation.

Samson's lawyer, Maurice Hebert, said the conviction would be appealed. The charge of placing a bomb carries a maximum 14-year sentence. Making a bomb is punishable by five years imprisonment.

Samson, 31, a seven-year veteran of the RCMP, paled as the jury foreman declared him guilty of planting the bomb that exploded outside the home of Steinberg's Ltd. president Melvyn Dobrin July 26, 1974.

At Herbert's request each member of the jury was polled individually to confirm the verdict.

I nacquitting Samson of the second charge, the jury was following a direction by Justice Peter Shorteno who said Monday that Crown prosecutor Jean Morin had failed to prove the charge.

Mr. Justice Shorteno set April 15 as a tentative sentencing date for the former RCMP security and intelligence officer and ordered him held in custody. Samson had been free on bail.

Serious Shortage Of Foster Homes

There's a serious shortage of approved foster homes in the capital region for children ranging from birth to 10 years old, Bernice Packford, social worker in charge of placement, department of human resources, reported today.

"The situation isn't improving," she said. "We have at present a total of 255 approved foster homes, representing a net loss of 75 families over the past five years. We are not keeping pace with the expanding population."

She observed between Oct. 7, 1975, to January, 76, a total of 144 children came under the care of the department of human resources.

A minimum of 30 approved foster parents are now urgently required to take care of single children and two or more children, she said.

"Apart from that we need gifted people who can care for handicapped children such as partial blindness and hard of hearing."

She cited as example three boys — Paul, Harvey and Ken — as in need of foster parents.

Paul is 13. He is good looking, fair and slender. His main interest is building models. He likes pottery and seems to have artistic talents.

Harvey, 9, is interested in natural history — birds, bugs and fish. He is keen on flying kites.

Then there is Ken, 10, who takes an active interest in sports.

"We have as many girls as boys," Packard said.

She noted a course on fostering is being held on April 6, at 7:30 p.m., Junction Centre Building, 1627 Fort Street, to help interested families learn more about fostering.

"We hope interested people will turn out," she said. "We need all the selp we can get."

Thousands Flooded

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — Thousands of persons have been left homeless in a flood which has cut off the port city of Beira from the rest of the country, Radio Mozambique said Tuesday. The broadcast, monitored in South Africa, said helicopters and rubber boats were being used to rescue persons trapped on roofs and in trees.

Cats Pad Lead; Swing to Regina

JEFF McDILL
. . . strong effort

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

It doesn't take much to get Jeff McDill moving.

"A talk" is one of the things that apparently inspires the winger — Victoria Cougars' leading goal-scorer during the regular Western Canada Hockey League season.

The goals haven't been coming with the regularity that might be expected but McDill was able to supply worthwhile contribution Tuesday when the Cougars defeated Regina Pats 5-2 at Memorial Arena to grab a solid advantage in their first-round playoff series.

Victoria, which won the series opener 3-1 Sunday, now has four points in the playoff which will be settled in favor of the first team to score eight.

The playoff continues tonight with the third game in Regina, the fourth Friday and the fifth, if needed, on Saturday. If additional games are needed, they will be played at Memorial Arena next Sunday and Tuesday.

But the manner in which the Cougars have handled the Pats in the first two games stirs a growing suspicion the Victoria club has designs on a short series.

McDill's performance Tuesday heightened that suspicion.

The 19-year-old scored 55 goals in Victoria's first 67 games but hasn't connected in the last seven, including both playoff contests.

The six-game scoreless run worried coach Pat Ginnell. He had a "quiet talk" with McDill before Tuesday's game. The scoreless streak stretched to seven, but Ginnel was extremely pleased with McDill's performance.

McDill set up two goals, was unfortunate in not scoring at least one, and was one of Victoria's most robust body-checkers. Cougars' obvious edge in checking did much to wear down the Pats and help Ginnell's charges to a comfortable victory.

"Even though he didn't score, Jeff had a great game," said Ginnell. "We need his leadership because this Regina club isn't going to roll over and play dead.

"I was worried when he stopped scoring. But if McDill plays like he did tonight, I won't worry."

McDill and linemates Jim Gustafson and Curt Fraser packed the greatest punch for Cougars. Gustafson scored his third playoff goal and Fraser connected twice.

Mike Will and Gregg Anderson also scored for Victoria while Rob Tudor and Keith Hertz pumped in Regina's goals, both in the third period and after Pats' coach Bob Turner benched one of his most seasoned lines.

Regina's line of Drew Callander, Jon Hammond and Brian Festerling sat out most of the third period. The unit's shoddy defensive work, allowing Gustafson and Fraser to score second-period goals that boosted Victoria into a 4-0 lead, upset Turner.

"It's a little upsetting to bench veterans like those three, and have your younger players out-score Victoria 2-1, as we did in the third period," said Turner.

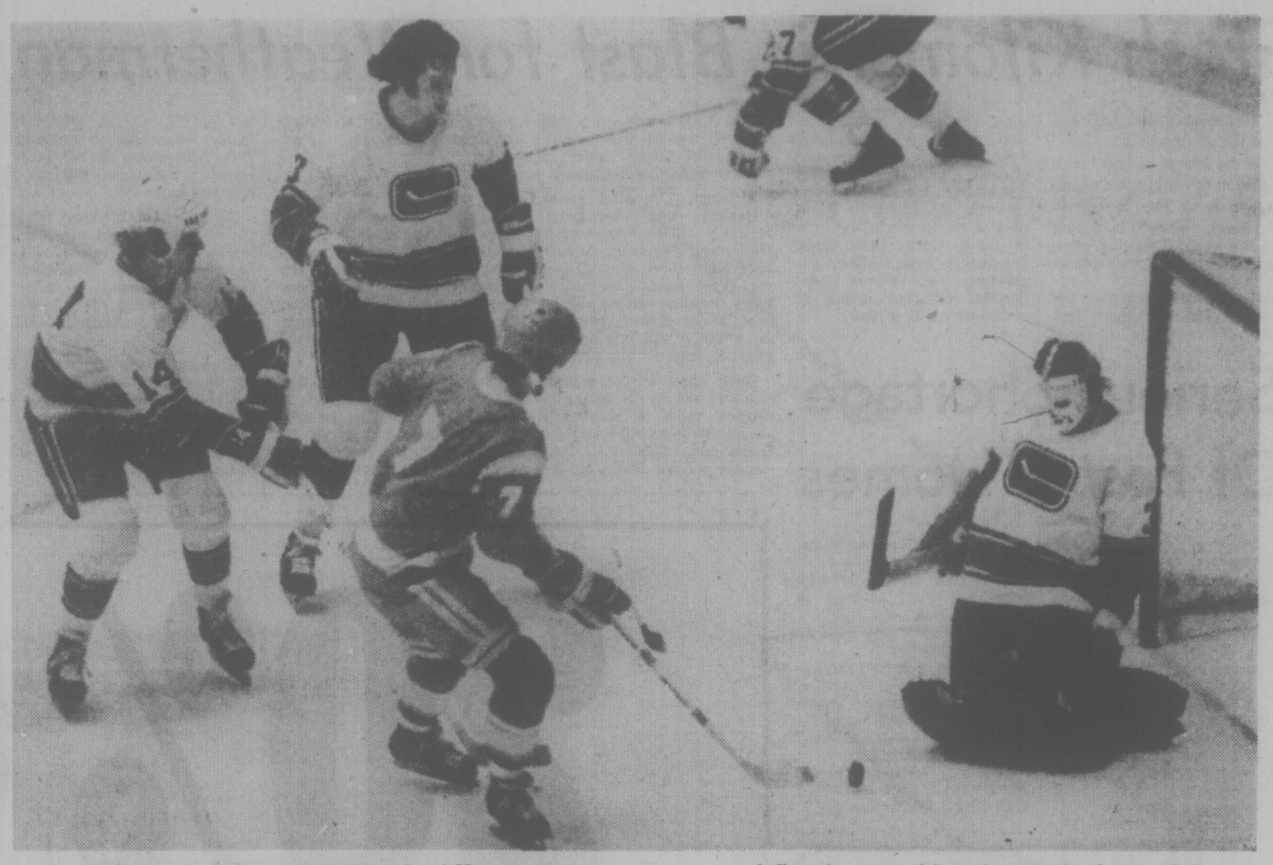

Turner, however, feels the Pats "will make a series out of it when we get back to Regina."

If that's their aim, the Pats will have to start scoring goals. They managed only three in two games, and the credit has to go to Victoria goalkeeper Murray Bannerman and his defence.

Tigers, Blades Move on Top

By The Canadian Press

The first round of Western Canada Hockey League playoff action got under way for four teams Tuesday night, with Medicine Hat Tigers, playing without their top-scorer, and Saskatoon Blades taking wins in the best-of-seven matches.

Medicine Hat beat Edmonton Oil Kings 5-1 in Medicine Hat and Saskatoon took a 9-4 home-ice win over Lethbridge Broncos.

At Kamloops the Chiefs edged Winnipeg Clubs 6-5 to push the Chiefs' lead to 2-0.

Medicine Hat played without league-leading scorer Don Murdoch who was injured in a brawl against New Westminster Bruins in the last game of the regular season Sunday in Vancouver.

The 88-goal scorer is also expected to sit out tonight's second game.

Murdoch is recovering from eye injuries. He has eight stitches over his right eye, which is swollen shut, and two stitches on the other side of his face, hampering vision in his left eye. He was released from hospital and his doctor said his condition was not serious.

Defenceman Cliff Lane fired two goals for Medicine Hat with singles going to Tom Bast, Morris Lukowich and Ron Areshenkoff. Wayne Babych scored the only Edmonton goal.

Bernie Federko scored three goals to lead Saskatoon to the victory over Lethbridge.

Federko, who won the league's scoring race for goals and assists, scored a short-handed goal in the second period to break open a close game. Other Saskatoon

SASKATOON (9) — Bernie Federko 3, Bill McNaught, Blair Chapman, Fred Williams, Rick Smith, Wes George, Bruce Hamilton. LETHBRIDGE (4) — Rick Peter, Steve Tambellini, Doug Johnston, Grant Eakin. Attendance: 2891.

EDMONTON (1) — Wayne Babych. MEDICINE HAT (5) — Cliff Lane 2, Morris Lukowich, Ron Areshenkoff, Tom Bast. Attendance: 3094.

Phil Confused by Canucks

By The Canadian Press

Going into Tuesday night's game against California Golden Seals, the Canucks were only one win out of sole possession of first place in the National Hockey League's Smythe Division and Maloney figured his club would come up big in front of a home crowd.

But Vancouver had to score a pair of goals with less than two minutes remaining to salvage a 4-4 tie against the Seals, last-place club in the Adams division.

The Canucks now are tied with Chicago Black Hawks for the lead in their division. Chicago has three games remaining and the Canucks two.

In other games, Boston Bruins also came from behind to tie Buffalo Sabres 4-4; St. Louis Blues dumped Minnesota North Stars 5-3, Washington Capitals won their 10th game of the season, 5-3 over Detroit Red Wings and Los Angeles Kings outgunned Kansas City Scouts 8-6.

Discussing his team's poor performance, Maloney said Chicago coach Billy Reay and himself "must be the only guys in the league who can't figure out what is going on."

"It seems so often that one team will go into a tailspin, but the other team is powerless to take advantage of it. I don't know what the problem is."

Don Lever and Dennis Ververgaert scored goals in the second-last minute of play to give the Canucks their tie.

Mike Walton and Bob Dailey completed Vancouver's scoring, while Seals' marksmen were Charlie Simmer, Al MacAdam, Wayne Merrick and Fred Ahern.

After their win in front of a surprised hometown crowd, Capitals' coach Tommy McVie said his club did all right in the game—and in the fights that delayed the contest 25 minutes.

Eighty-six minutes in penalties were assessed after a third - period brawl emptied both benches.

Mike Lampan scored two unassisted goals to lead Washington, with a pair also being added by Gerry Meehan.

Jean Ratelle collected his 34th goal and a pair of assists to top the 100-point mark for the second time in his career in leading the Bruins to their 19th consecutive game without a loss on home ice.

Rene Robert, Rick Martin and Gil Perreault scored for the Sabres.

Two goals by defenceman Bruce Affleck lifted St. Louis to its win over Minnesota. Rookie Tim Young scored his 17th goal of the year to give the North Stars a brief lead early in the game.

Tommy Williams scored three times in the Kings' win over the Scouts, the 24th consecutive game without a win for Kansas City. The Scouts are now within one game of equalling the NHL record of 25 games without a win set by Washington earlier this season.

The win moved the Kings into second place in the Norris Division, one point ahead of idle Pittsburgh, which has 80 points.

Tonight, New York Islanders play the Rangers in Madison Square Garden, Pittsburg is in Montreal, Toronto Maple Leafs visit Detroit, Los Angeles plays the Blues in St. Louis and Kansas City is at Chicago.

RICK JONES REMAINS IN SERIOUS CONDITION

NEW WESTMINSTER — Rick Jones of Victoria, former quarterback for Oak Bay Farmer Construction of the Vancouver Island Juvenile Football League, remained in serious condition this morning in the Royal Columbian Hospital.

Jones, who was a starter last season for Simon Fraser University Clansmen, was injured along with gymnast Senise Holst of White Rock in a car accident Friday in Burnaby.

Miss Holst regained consciousness Monday but Jones, who sustained neck injuries, is still unconscious in the hospital's trauma ward.

Jones also played basketball for Mt. Douglas Rams prior to graduating from high school in 1974.

Red-Hot McAdoo Got Braves Flying

By The Associated Press

Buffalo Braves rode the hot hand of Bob McAdoo to a 93-83 victory Tuesday night over Boston Celtics and moved into sole possession of second place in the National Basketball Association's Atlantic Division, one-half game ahead of idle Philadelphia '76ers.

McAdoo hit his first four shots en route to a 29-point performance and got the Braves off to a flying start.

It was 49-40 at half-time and the Celtics, who have clinched the Atlantic Division crown, played most of the second half with their top five players— John Havlicek, Dave Cowens, Charlie Scott, Jo Jo White and Paul Silas—on the bench.

Havlicek, Cowens, Scott and White hit on only 12 of 49 shots.

In other NBA games Tuesday night, Phoenix Suns defeated New York Knicks 113-97, Cleveland Cavaliers downed Houston Rockets 95-86, Milwaukee Bucks edged Atlanta Hawks 130-126 in overtime, Portland Trail Blazers nipped Kansas City Kings 114-113 and Golden State Warriors beat Chicago Bulls 94-84.

Jim Hunter Wins

ST. SAUVEUR, Que. (CP) —Jim Hunter found himself in the unfamiliar position of winning a second slalom in two days Tuesday when he registered an easy victory in the final event of the Spring Series ski competition.

Hunter, primarily a downhill specialist, easily outdistanced fellow national team member Ken Read to win the two-run event in an aggregate time of 89.90 seconds. Read was timed in 91.16 for the two runs.

On Monday, Hunter and Read finished one-two in the first slalom event on the two-day program.

Americans dominated the woman's slalom again Tuesday as April Girard of the U.S. national team topped the field in 100.82.

Numbers Now Names For New NFL Clubs

NEW YORK — Tampa Bay's John McKay called it "just another day of recruiting."

Seattle's Jack Patera called it "a numbers' game."

But the coaches of the National Football League's two expansion franchises finally have some players to put into their new uniforms.

Now it's a matter of seeing if these players can get together, become teams instead of individuals and maybe win a few games.

Patera, referring to the 26 teams that gave up the players to stock the Buccaneers and his Seahawks, said:

"When you start looking at the people you're going to put up for expansion, you have to decide whether to let a veteran go in order to keep a young one. Depending on your depth, it's a numbers' game you get into."

The two teams now have 39 players each. More will come next week when the NFL conducts its annual college draft.

Each of the 26 veteran teams was permitted to protect 32 players in all. Each time a player was picked from the available list, that team was permitted to pull back another player and protect him. Eventually, each old club gave up three players.

Among the "name" players picked by Tampa Bay was running back Anthony Davis, who last fall signed a multi-year contract with Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League.

Davis played for Southern California Sun of the World Football League last season after starring for McKay's University of Southern California teams.

Also picked by the Florida team were McKay's son, J.K., a wide receiver with University of Southern California, Oakland running back Harold Hart and tight end Bob Moore, Miami linebacker Doug Swift (who says he's retiring to enter medical school), Kansas City safety Jim Kearney and Buffalo defensive end Pat Toomay.

Seattle gobbled up Baltimore linebacker Mike Curtis and running back Bill Olds, Miami tackle Norm Evans, Los Angeles linebacker Ken Geddes and cornerback Eddie McMillan, Pittsburgh defensive back Dave Brown and Detroit tight end John McMakin. The Seahawks also picked the only two quarterbacks—New England's Neil Graff and Gary Keithley of St. Louis.

Kamloops Hunter Survey Yields a Few Surprises

OUTDOORS
stewart lang

An article by Murphy Shewchuk entitled Profile of a B.C. Hunter in the current issue of B.C. Outdoors magazine raises a number of interesting questions over the establishment of management priorities within the provincial fish and wildlife branch.

The branch has a fantastic rapport with outdoorsmen within organizations such as the B.C. Wildlife Federation but on the whole hasn't received much input on a regular basis from the vast majority of people who don't belong to a specific group.

Shewchuk's topic concerned a survey of hunters conducted by members of the Kamloops region branch staff in 1975 and released this spring.

Some of the results are startling and similar "preference" studies might be useful in other areas of the province.

The Kamloops hunter:

—Prefers hunting with companions but would rather hunt alone than miss the opportunity.

—Has little use for bowhunters and sees no reason for establishing special seasons for those who prefer this method of hunting.

—Prefers the meat and recreational experience gained from hunting (with leanings more toward the meat) and isn't particularly interested in trophies.

—Feels a slight reduction in the number of hunters would relieve his feeling of overcrowding and recommends, in descending order, establishing alternate-year seasons on certain species, mid-week openings, limited entry hunts and higher entry fees.

—Prefers to hunt in cool weather with new snow to aid tracking and recovery of the animal as well as to reduce meat spoilage.

—Feels logging roads have eroded the hunting experience by making access too easy and considers off-road vehicles such as snowmobiles, trail bikes and four-wheel-drives a disruptive element.

—Considers moose foremost on the list of game animals he prefers to hunt, followed in descending order by deer, grouse, duck, goose and pheasant.

—Prefers to hunt mature males or yearling males (in that order) with cows, does, calves and fawns receiving lesser attention.

—Believes bull and cow moose and doe deer should be limited to one per hunter but is less convinced that one buck deer should be the bag limit.

—Wants a constant opening date.

—Disapproves of party hunting, where a group shares a game tag.

—Would turn to fishing first, followed by photography and wildlife observation if denied the opportunity to hunt.

Although I disagree with Shewchuk's assumption that this profile can be applied to all hunters in the province, it demonstrates a real need for similar surveys in the other regions.

There will be a few changes in the Kamloops region regulations as a result of the survey.

One thing should be kept in mind, however. The opinions in the survey, including some of those outlined above, sometimes don't correspond with biological fact.

Fortunately management decisions, unlike political manoeuvres, are usually made on substantiated data.

But the opinions, rather than providing specific guidelines, could be used to erect a framework for the rules which would be geared to the wants and needs of a larger segment of the population.

NIBBLES: Just received the hatchery stocking list for 1974 from the branch . . . Lakes stocked with cutthroat on the Island were Dougans, Maple, Quamichan and Santa Maria . . . Did you notice the editorial Dams Without Blueprints which appeared in these pages earlier this month . . . It made a good point of outlining the tremendous loss of wildlife and fisheries values through construction of the Mica Dam on the Columbia River . . . But it went on to say that if the environmental study had been made prior to construction, rather than after the losses had been sustained, "sharp-pencilled negotiators could have demanded greater compensation from the U.S. for the downstream flood control benefits the dam provides." . . . Mitigation for fish and wildlife losses is never satisfactory . . . There is no way all the money in the world can buy back the values submerged by one of these ill-conceived projects . . . I can only hope the environmental study on B.C. Hydro's latest escapade — a $1.2 billion dam near Revelstoke on the Columbia — will have a bearing on whether the dam is actually constructed . . . I fear, however, it will become merely a mitigation ploy.

Boxers, Royals Tangle Tonight

London Boxing Club and Cosmopolitan Royals, both of the premier division, clash tonight at Royal Athletic Park in the first Jackson Cup quarter-final match scheduled over the next few days in the Vancouver Island Soccer League.

Kickoff time is 7:30.

In other quarter-final play on Saturday, Victoria West of the premier divison and UVic Norsemen, the sole surviving second-division squad, meet at 12 noon at UVic while UVic Vikings and Gorge Molsons, both of the premier division, play at 2:15 p.m. at Royal Athletic Park.

Oak Bay of the premier divison visits Courtenay, a non-league up-island entry in the competition, in the other quarter-final Sunday.

Highlighting local play Sunday will be an exhibition match pitting Vancouver Island Selects against Vancouver Whitecaps of the North American League at 2:30 p.m. in Royal Athletic.

Third Major League Answer to Problem?

TAMPA, Fla. (CP) — There has been speculation that the National League might trade its consent to inter-league play to the American League in exchange for rights to the Toronto area into which the junior baseball circuit has voted to expand in 1977.

While Montreal Expos are among the most fervent advocates of a National League team in Toronto's Exhibition Stadium, they are, ironically, opposed to making a deal through the inter-league play issue.

"I know why I'm against it," Charles Bronfman, Expos' chairman of the board, said of inter-league play Tuesday. "I think there comes a time in sports where you have too many teams coming in too infrequently.

"It's like hockey—when we were kids, we'd go to a hockey game and have a passion, one way or the other, for everybody on the ice. Now you go and you don't know the players' names, what they look like, who are the good guys and the bad guys. You can't identify."

Prior to the 1967 expansion that doubled the size of the National Hockey League to 12 from six teams, each club played every other team 14 times in a 70-game schedule.

Fans appreciated the flavor, filling the six NHL rinks to better than 98.75 per cent capacity. In rinks such as the Montreal Forum and Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens, sellouts were the rule and possession of hockey seats was a mark of distinction.

Now, with 18 clubs coming in twice or three times a season before the playoffs, even those storied hockey halls sometimes are dotted with vacant chairs.

Currently, each major-league baseball team meets its divisional rivals 18 times, nine at home and nine away, during the season for 90 games, and plays clubs in the opposite division of its league 12 times, six and six, for 72 more games and a 162-game schedule.

Assuming for the sake of argument that the major leagues continued to number 24 teams, a 161-game schedule could be generated by each team playing every other a total of only seven times during the year. If the schedule was weighted to provide more divisional or league games, inter-league contests would have to be reduced to perhaps four token meetings.

Bronfman said the concept of three regional leagues originated some years ago by president Walter O'Malley of Los Angeles Dodgers, may prove to be the solution.

Assuming 24 major-league clubs divided into three leagues designated East, Central and West, each team could play its divisional foe 12 times for 96 games and all other teams four teams for 64 games and a 160-game schedule.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Breaking into list of winners in Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest for first time is Marge Kostek, who captured women's fivepin award during 24th week of 13th annual competition. Marge earned weekly award and berth in Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs with 837 series at Town and Country Lanes as she rolled games of 301, 239 and 297 in Breakfast Club League.

Bantam Braves Grab Title

SIXTH STRAIGHT WIN

Saanich Braves defeated Quesnel 10-3 Tuesday to clinch the provincial bantam hockey championship with one day remaining in the eight-team, round-robin tournament in Nanaimo.

The victory extended Braves' record to 6-0 heading into today's game against Nanaimo Clippers, who are second with a 4-1-1 record.

McPherson Winter Club of Burnaby and North Kamloops have 4-2 records and went into today's final round with hopes of winding up in second place.

Torrie Robertson and Daryl Coldwell scored two goals each to spark the Saanich attack while singles were added by Jim Michaels, Randy Wickware, John Newberry, Gary Sam, Brian Goodwin and Phil Varcoe.

In other Tuesday games, Kitimat rebounded from a 6-3 defeat by North Kamloops to humiliate Trail 11-3. Trail also absorbed a 14-1 pummelling at the hands of Burnaby.

Meanwhile, Kamloops defeated Vanderhoof 13-3 and then beat Quesnel 5-2 to remain unbeaten in the provincial midget championship in Quesnel.

Kamloops and Burnaby are both unbeated with 2-0 records, Castlegar and Prince George are 1-1, Oak Bay and Venderhoof are 1-2 and Kimberley is winless in two games.

And, in the B.C. pee wee tourney at Merritt, co-leaders Kamloops and Burnaby tied 6-6 Tuesday to remain undefeated in four games.

Third-place Powell River stayed one game back of the leaders with a 5-2 win over Nelson.

Nolan in Form

By The Associated Press

If New York Mets can't come to terms with 1975 Cy Young award winner Tom Seaver, perhaps they can trade him to Cincinnati Reds for 1976 Cy Young winner Gary Nolan.

What, you didn't know Nolan had won the '76 Young Award?

Oh, it won't be announced officially until after the season but pitching coach Larry Shepard of the Reds has set that as a goal for Nolan.

"Last year, I wanted Nolan to be comeback pitcher of the year," Shepard said. But Seaver won that along with the Cy Young. "In my book he was."

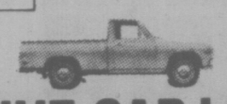

"This year, my goal for him is the Cy Young Award."

Nolan's outing Tuesday didn't disappoint Shepard. The 28-year-old right-hander pitched three scoreless innings, allowing two hits and fanning three, as the Reds got home runs from Ken Griffey, Ed Armbrister and George Foster and trimmed Philadelphia Phillies 7-1.

In Tuesday's other exhibition games, Boston Red Sox beat St. Louis Carinals 6-3, Los Angeles Dodgers outslugged Baltimore Orioles 13-8, Pittsburgh Pirates beat Detroit Tigers 3-1, New York Yankees defeated the winless New York Mets 6-4 in 10 innings, San Francisco Giants edged Oakland A's 10-9, Milwaukee Brewers beat Cleveland Indians 4-2, California Angels blanked San Diego Padres 4-0, Texas Rangers defeated Atlanta Braves 4-1, Chicago White Sox shaded Kansas City Royals 3-2, one Minnesota Twins squad downed Montreal Expos 5-3 but the other lost to Houston Aeros 5-3 and Chicago Cubs defeated Arizona State University 5-1.

Island Lacrosse Schedule Set

Nanaimo Timbermen will host Vancouver Burrards in the Western Lacrosse Association season opener on April 30 while Victoria fans will have to wait until May 11 to see the Shamrocks in action against the New Westminster Salmonbellies according to the official schedule released today.

Each of the five teams will play a 24-game schedule with each team meeting the other four teams in three home and three away games.

Burrards will return to Kerrisdale Arena for their home games this season. Coquitlam will play at the Coquitlam Sports Centre and Salmonbellies at Queen's Park Arena.

Nanaimo and Victoria schedules follow.

April Events Open Net Year

Entry forms are now available at most clubs for two April tournaments which kick off the Vancouver Island Lawn Tennis Association season.

The Easter junior tourney is scheduled April 16-19 at Island Indoor Tennis Centre and the First Chance closed tourney for Island players will be held April 24-25 in Nanaimo.

Juniors from many B.C. centres as well as some from the United States are expected to enter the age-class junior event.

Entry deadline is April 10 for the junior event and April 21 for the First Chance.

In Island Tennis League play at the weekend, Island Indoor moved to the top of both and men's "A" and "B" divisions, Racquet Club moved into a tie for top spot in the women's "A" division with Oak Bay, and Langford took over the women's "B" division lead.

Island Indoor topped Oak Bay 5-3 and the University of Victoria scored a 7-1 decision over Beacon Hill in men's "A" play while Island Indoor bounced Langford 7-1, Beacon Hill dropped Glen Meadows 6-2, Oak Bay topped Racquet Club 6-2 and Saanich and Cowichan played to a 4-4 deadlock in men's "B" encounters.

Racquet Club defeated Island Indoor 6-1 in the only women's "A" game while in the "B" circuit, Langford edged Saanich 4-3, Oak Bay downed Island Indoor 5-2 and Glen Meadows nipped Racquet Club, 4-3.

Alberta Firemen In Tie for Lead

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Don Nelson of Calgary and Howie Brazeau of Fort Smith, N.W.T. were the only undefeated teams after four rounds in the 17th annual Canadian Firefighters curling championships Tuesday.

Standings after four rounds were Alberta 4-0; Northwest Territories 3-0; Northern Ontario, Southern Ontario and Saskatchewan 3-1; Manitoba and British Columbia 1-2; Quebec and P.E.I. 1-3; New Brunswick 0-3; and Nova Scotia 0-4.

Oilers, Toros Fail Chance to Move Up

By The Canadian Press

Edmonton Oilers and Toronto Toros played Tuesday night as though they didn't care which team makes the World Hockey Association playoffs.

Both teams lost—the Oilers 8-3 to Quebec Nordiques and the Toros 6-2 to Calgary Cowboys— to leave the Oilers four points in front of the Toros in the chase for the final playoff berth in the league's Canadian Division.

San Diego Mariners edged Houston Aeros 4-3 in Tuesday's only other game.

Coach Joe Crozier of the Cowboys said he was surprised the Toros, who still have three games in hand, came up with such a feeble effort.

"They didn't come up the way you think they should have for a last-place club needing a win so badly," he said.

Crozier said the score would have been more lop-sided except for the outstanding play of Toronto goalie John Garrett.

The Oilers spotted the Nordiques a 5-1 lead in the first period and Quebec's Rejean Houle was astounded at Edmonton's indifferent play.

"Edmonton played as if they did not want to get into the (playoff) series," said Houle.

Real Cloutier scored his 54th and 55th goals during a Nordiques' first-period rally. Chris Bordeleau also had a pair of goals for the Nordiques, with Marc Tardif, Florent Fortier and Houle scoring the others. Frank Spring, Ken Baird and Bob McAneely were the Edmonton scorers.

Crozier scoffed at charges by Toronto president John F. Bassett that University of Minnesota centre Warren Miller had been signed illegally by the Cowboys.

"Get serious," Crozier laughed. "The Toros need to win hockey games . . . not protest over one young man."

Ron Chipperfield scored his 40th goal of the season in the second minute of the third period to break a 2-2 tie. Rookie Derek Haas, Bob Leiter and Rick Jodzio scored later in the period to wrap up the win.

'Money' Major Issue

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Holdout pitcher Tom Seaver met with general manager Joe McDonald of New York Mets Tuesday and came away without signing a 1976 contract.

"The terms are still unsatisfactory," said Seaver, as he prepared to pitch in the Mets' exhibition game against New York Yankees.

Seaver, who made $170,000 last year when he won his third Cy Young Award, is asking for a three-year contract at about $800,000. The Mets are agreeable to the three years but have offered him something less than $200,000 a year.

"The major issue," said Seaver, "is money."

The Mets were reported ready to trade Seaver to Los Angeles Dodgers for pitcher Don Sutton and catcher-outfielder Joe Ferguson on Monday with the deal lacking only Sutton's approval. As a 10-year veteran, the Dodger pitcher has the right to veto any trade in which he is involved.

"The LA talks are still going on," said McDonald. "Sutton indicated that if he were traded, he would prefer an American League team because of the designated hitter rule that allows pitchers to complete more games. But he also indicated he could be satisfied by the New York Mets."

KUHN CALLS FOR TALKS

NEW YORK (AP)—Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn intends to meet with Chub Feeney, president of the National League, and Lee MacPhail, president of the American League, over the tangled Toronto expansion situation, a spokesman for major-league baseball said Tuesday.

Feeney has asked Kuhn to delay the American League's announced expansion to Toronto for 1977.

Stoesz, Town, Sankey Join National Team

OTTAWA (CP) — A 12-day training camp for the Olympic men's basketball team opens here Wednesday before the team travels to the United States for a series of exhibition games.

National coach Jack Donohue will have two former national team members at the camp along with 10 players from the Pan-American Games team.

They are Ken McKenzie, 24, a forward from Port Coquitlam, B.C., who spent the winter playing for a club team in the top basketball league in France and Ted Stoesz, 26, of Winnipeg who played with the nationals in 1971-72.

Stoesz played with Winnipeg St. Andrews Super Saints who won the Canadian senior "A" men's championship in Victoria on Sunday as did Bob Town, another national team player.

Derek Sankey, who played for Victoria Scorpions, is also on the national team as are Rommell Raffinm, Bob Sharpe and Cam Hall.

They join team stalwarts such as Jamie Russell of Burlington, Ont., Bill Robinson of Chemainus, B.C., Phil Tollestrup of Raymond, Alta., Martin Riley of Winnipeg and Lars Hansen of Port Coquitlam.

Four to a Room Two Too Many

MONTREAL (CP) — Yvan Dubois, mayor of Montreal's Olympic Village, says "authorized officials" in Britain have never complained regarding accommodation for their athletes at the Summer Games.

He was replying to a statement by Arthur Gold, secretary of the British Amateur Athletic Board, that Britain's athletes might live outside the village during the Games because of unsatisfactory arrangements.

Gold said Sunday that competitors would likely have to sleep five to a room and said he regarded more than two as "unsatisfactory at a time of intense nervous tension." (Village officials said there would be no more than four to a room.)

"We have never received any official complaints from authorized officials of the National Olympic Committee of Great Britain regarding accommodation of their athletes this summer," said Dubois, director-general of the village for the Olympic organizing committee.

"I have had many meetings with officials of the British committee and they have expressed their satisfaction with lodging accommodation from the outset."

MALE PLAYERS CLAIM SEX DISCRIMINATION

FERGUS FALLS, Minn. (AP) — Two men students say they are being discriminated against because they can't try out for the women's softball team at Fergus Falls community college.

Gene Bjorklund, 20, and Randy Ogren, 19, say they'll pursue their demands.

"It's no joke or we wouldn't have taken it this far," Ogren said.

The two said federal laws prohibiting sex discrimination in education require that they be allowed to play because the school has no men's softball team.

Hal Collins, dean of students, said the college has a baseball team for men. He added that no women have asked to play on men's teams.

Janet Bids for the '500'

CHICAGO (AP) — If all it takes is confidence to make it at the Indianapolis 500, Janet Guthrie has no problems.

Janet, who admits "it'll be no mean trick" to qualify for the 500, is the first woman to be entered in the Indianapolis 500.

"I realize it will be difficult to qualify," said Janet, 38, who earned a degree in physics at the University of Michigan. "But I wish everyone wouldn't be so concerned about my stamina."

She rattled off numerous races in which she has competed, including endurance tests against men. She was first in class in 1970 at the Sebring 12-hour endurance race. She won the 1973 North Atlantic Road Racing Championship and placed second in the NARRC series in 1974.

Last year Janet was first over-all in the Vanderbilt Cup races at Bridgehampton, Long Island, in which she competed with 27 men.

At Indianapolis she will team with Dick Simon and they will drive turbo-charged Offenhauser-powered championship cars built by veteran designer-builder Rolla Vollstedt.

Simon started racing some 13 years ago and has competed in the Indy 500 for the last five years. His best finish was 13th in 1972.

Janet, described as "tall, slender and feminine" in brochures passed out at a news conference Monday, has been racing for 13 years and has competed in more than 120 races.

She prefers to ignore the men-versus-women aspect and says once drivers don helmets and uniforms there should be no distinction between competitors.

"I've always thought I was lucky to have been born in a country and at a historical moment when women were free to do as they pleased," Janet said.

Liverpool Wins Leg At Barcelona

BARCELONA (Reuter) — Liverpool of England defeated Barcelona of Spain, 1-0, Tuesday in their first-leg match of the European Football Union Cup soccer semi-finals.

John Toschack scored the winning goal in the 13th minute.

The visitors continued to press their attack in the second half and dominated most of the action while the home team drew boos from the crowd of 70,000.

Caps to Continue

VANCOUVER — Northwest Vancouver Caps will continue on the hockey playoff trail when they meet the Alberta Junior "A" League winner in a series starting April 10.

Caps captured the Pacific Coast Junior League playoff crown by defeating Vancouver Junior Canucks in four straight games.

Points Fund, Pro-Ams On Canadian Golf Tour

MONTREAL (CP) — A $5,000 special points fund for Canadian golfers has been added to the format for the 1976 Canadian professional tour that encompasses seven provincial open tournaments, it was announced Tuesday.

In addition to the normal prize money available for each tournament, sponsors of the tour will donate the $5,000 and the Peter Jackson Cup to the over-all winner.

The $5,000 prize will be split among the top three finishers at the end of the tour. Distribution will be based on points awarded for tournament-to-tournament performance.

The winner will take a $2,500 share, plus a place on Canada's World Cup team. He will have the winner of the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association championship as a partner for the world event.

The over-all tour runner-up will receive $1,500 and $1,000 will be set aside for the No. 3 finisher.

For the first time since the tour's inception, all tournament stops will be preceded by a pro-amateur even with $1,500 in prize money set aside for the professionals and prizes worth $500 for the top amateurs at each.

As in 1975, the Ontario, Quebec and British Columbia opens will carry $20,000 purses and the Atlantic, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta tournaments will be worth $15,000 each.

This year's Canadian Open is scheduled for the Essex Golf Club at Windsor, Ont., July 22-25 and offers $200,000 in prize money, while the CPGA championship will be held at the St. Charles Country Club in Winnipeg July 8-11 and is worth $50,000.

Venues and dates of the seven provincial opens are:

Ontario—Mount Hope Golf and Country Club, Hamilton, June 18-20.

Atlantic—Belvedere Golf and Winter Club, Charlottetown, June 25-27.

Quebec—Sorel-Tracy Golf Club, Sorel, July 2-4.

Manitoba—Elmhurst Golf and Country Club, Winnipeg, July 30-Aug. 1.

Saskatchewan—Holiday Park Golf Club, Saskatoon, Aug. 6-8.

Alberta—Red Deer Golf and Country Club, Red Deer, Aug. 13-15.

British Columbia—Site to be announced, Aug. 20-22.

Another Overflow Entry List For Island Open Golf Tourney

One thing hasn't changed about the Vancouver Island Open golf tournament.

The rush to participate in the Island's major match-play tournament continues to make it one of the most popular events on the golf calendar.

More than 200 entries were received for this year's tournament, and once again the highest handicapped players had to be drawn out in order to cut the list down to the limit of 164.

The 164 starters, which includes most of the top amateurs and professionals on the Island, will tee off Sunday at Uplands in an 18-hole qualifying round.

The low 32 scorers qualify for the championship and an additional 32 players will make it into the handicap division.

Among the entrants is defending-champion Grant Milliken of Gorge Vale. In addition, 16 professionals — including former champions Bill Wakeham of Cowichan, Earl Davies of Gorge Vale and Norm Boden of March Meadows—are entered.

George Murphy, winner of the handicap crown last year, is listed among the amateur starters, who also include Cec Ferguson, Bob Hunt, Al MacLeod, Bob Beauchemin, Carl Schwantje and Jim Rutledge.

TOLLER CRANSTON

Toller Has a Secret

HAMILTON (CP) — Toller Cranston, the six-time Canadian men's champion figure skater and bronze medalist at last month's Winter Olympics, says he's in the middle of negotiations that could lead him into a different skating career.

"I am in the middle of something but it is not finalized," the 26-year-old Toronto skater said in an interview with Don Lovegrove of The Spectator.

"Everyone is sort of speculating," he said of rumors that he has quit amateur skating and has already signed a pro contract in New York. He admitted only that he has been to New York and that he is negotiating.

If the deal is completed, he said it would lead him into an "unorthodox, unique approach to a career," confirming his earlier statements that he would never join one of the big ice shows.

If his new career does not materialize, there is still the possibility he will make one more attempt at the world amateur crown which next year will be up for grabs since 1976 champion John Curry of Britain has announced he plans to turn pro.

Cranston, an artist who keeps busy with oil paints and canvas when he's not skating, said he is sure he will continue skating in some capacity. "Skating is in my blood. I will never give it up. Just how I skate, as an amateur or a pro, remains to be seen."

Nuclear Submarine Is a Big Monster

You are looking at the Trident Monster.

That's what leaflets told hundreds of Victorians who this morning watched or took part in a demonstration march from Beacon Hill Park to the Parliament Buildings.

The march, featuring a giant symbolic representation of a missile-carrying submarine, was in protest of the construction of the Trident nuclear base 60 miles south of Victoria in Bangor, Washington.

The watchers saw a conglomeration of bamboo poles, rope and black plastic and were told that they were looking at a 550-foot-long monster — exactly the same size as the nuclear submarines.

But what about a look at the people behind the Trident Monster?

The leaflets told those who read them only that the march was led by the Pacific Life Community. What, then, is the Pacific Life Community?

In trying to get a breakdown on an organization, usually you look for the leader — the president or chairperson. But the PLC has no leader, no specific chairperson. And that's interesting, to start with.

"We rotate spokespeople and try to do as much sharing as possible," explains Jim Douglass of the Vancouver PLC group. "The whole philosophy of the Community is exploring non-violence as a way of life and the way we achieve this non-violence is by as much sharing as possible."

Members of both the Victoria and Vancouver Communities share their fears of a nuclear attack on the Pacific Northwest with American PLC groups in San Francisco and Seattle. The four groups meet regularly and discuss ways of fighting — with nonviolence, of course, — the Bangor Trident base.

"We're a trans-national community," says Douglass. "Trident is threatening our entire life on this globe. It will be the most destructive system ever devised by anyone. It's on the border so it's an ideal opportunity for a transnational campaign. It would be just perfect if this violent thing could be stopped by nonviolent means."

Boosted by the great success non-violent demonstrations and public pressure had in stopping the Vietnam War, the PLC has already gone on the peace warpath.

Today's demonstration was only one of several already held.

Community members, joined by the Bangor-based Concerned About Trident movement, have held three demonstrations at the base itself. In one, they ran into a little trouble when they went over the fence and planted a symbolic garden to show that the land being used for military purposes could be used instead for growing food to feed people.

In December, seven community members, including two from Victoria, went on a cross-Canada trek, campaigning against the Trident base. They gathered more than 10,000 signatures in support and presented the petition to External Affairs Minister Alan MacEachen and Prime Minister Trudeau.

As recently as this month, though Defence Minister James Richardson made it clear that the federal government will make no protest to the United States. He said the base was essential.

But the PLC people, many of whom admit to being longtime activists who aren't afraid to fight laws, nonviolently, or go to jail, are undaunted.

Ideally, they would like to see the federal government say Canada does not support Trident. Eventually, they would like to see the Strait of Juan de Fuca declared a nuclear free zone.

Demonstrators carry Trident 'monster' with black flags each representing a warhead

In the mean time, they will continue putting their point across and hope someone listens. Today they met with the NDP caucus and Thursday the PLC people will put on their slide show entitled "From Trident To Life" for the benefit of the Socred caucus.

It is, at the moment, greatly concerned about Trident, but the Pacific Life Community goes deeper than that.

Explain two Victoria members, laborer Jim Hennebury who came from Montreal and student soon-to-become teacher John Tomlinson an American with a Quaker background who has been in Canada six years, "The Community is working on all social concerns." As well as Trident and its effects, these concerns include "political awareness, sexual discrimination awareness and Third World awareness."

"In our meetings we use a lot of interesting techniques — some people call it re-inventing the wheel," laughs John. "We set up a group decision-making process, with an agenda prepared in a creative fashion. And we don't take any action unless we reach agreement by concensus.

"It's extremely creative and invigorating . . . that no one person has to take charge of a meeting."

And as we part, there's an invitation to "come along one night and sit in on one of our sessions."

Thanks John. I'd like that.

B.C. People 'Expendable'

Catholic Bishop of Victoria Remi de Roo today joined Pacific Life Community in condemning the Trident nuclear missile base being built at Bangor, Washington.

A statement from the bishop was read at noon in front of the provincial legislature during a protest rally organized by Pacific Life Community to generate awareness of the submarine base's aggressive purpose.

The bishop said he expressed alarm to the prime minister a year ago, joining with others to ask for Canada's intervention in Washington, D.C. to stop the escalation of nuclear force.

"Since then the project has developed from 10 submarines to 30. The implications are that the total population of the lower B.C. mainland is considered expendable in the event of nuclear attack," De Roo wrote.

He noted the cost of building the base just 60 miles across Puget Sound from Victoria could better be spent solving part of the global food problem or to produce new energy sources.

"Hungry people learn from us that the domination of other countries by military power and terror is more important than a just society where nuclear warfare would be out of the question," he said, calling for others to protest "this disastrous project."

"Silence on our part makes us accomplices to this warlike gesture."

Canadians and Americans should direct themselves to more effective involvement in the cause of social justice — "for there can be no true peace without a foundation on justice."

Family's Aged Mutt Gave Fire Alarm

A deaf 15-year-old mongrel named Twinklestar has been credited with saving his two owners from harm when fire broke out in the night at their Saanich home.

A spokesman for the Saanich fire department said today Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Keel were awakened at about 11:30 p.m. Tuesday by the sound of their dog barking.

Keel told firemen he knew something was wrong as Twinklestar is stone-deaf, partly lame, weak-eyed and seldom — if ever — barks.

He went downstairs to investigate and when he opened the kitchen door he discovered the room full of smoke.

While his wife called the fire department he tried to extinguish the blaze which was confined to a cupboard under the sink. An eight-week-old pup also owned by the Keels was overcome by smoke and died.

"Twinklestar's sure getting lots of loving today — I'll tell you," Mrs. Keel said in an interview today. "Her teeth are getting soft but we'll see that she gets the best. . ."

Mrs. Keel said Twinklestar, a poodle-pomeranian cross, was a Christmas gift puppy from her son.

Damage to the house, located near the Central Saanich boundary, was estimaed at $2,000.

Flu Deaths Hit at Random

Number of deaths among elderly patients at Saanich Peninsula Hospital has jumped from the usual two or three a month to 13 this month, with flu seen as a contributing factor.

At the same time, the random pattern in which flu has hit this winter continues, with only the peninsula hospital reporting an unquestionably higher death rate among eight hospitals queried.

Dr. Allan Arneil, regional health officer, said Tuesday the here-and-there pattern has been reflected throughout the winter, with absentee rates at some schools high while others remained at normal.

While attendance figures at schools appear to be swinging back to average, Arneil said the flu is still appearing among adults, some of whom have had two or even three bouts.

"I wouldn't like to give the all clear yet as far as flu is concerned."

Arneil said flu among hospital patients tends to push the mortality rate up in two ways, first through directly related diseases like pneumonia, and then by reducing a patient's resistance to unrelated conditions.

The 75-bed peninsula hospital provides long-term care for mostly elderly patients and administrator John Stevens said Tuesday it appears at least eight of this month's deaths were flu-related. The hospital earlier stopped patient visiting for two weeks because of flu.

At Gorge Road Hospital, where there are 300 extended care beds, administrator Bill Morrison said the flu appeared to hit staff harder than patients. He estimated there have been two or three flu-related deaths in recent weeks.

George Harrison, administrator for four hospitals operated by the Juan de Fuca Hospital Society, said the average death rate of about 14 a month in the 320 extended care beds has remained unchanged.

Spokesmen at Victoria's two general hospitals say that only about eight deaths among patients in close to 1,000 beds at Royal Jubilee and Victoria General can be related to the flu in the past couple of months.

While the general effect of flu has been higher than usual this winter, Dr. A. A. Larsen, provincial epidemiologist, said the outbreak is still within the "usual" picture.

ESCAPERS TOOK WRONG RIDE

An escape bid by two young inmates at the Jordan River detention camp Tuesday ended as they hitch-hiked on the West Coast Road — they got a lift from a corrections officer.

Sooke RCMP said today Gary Allan Smith and Christopher Ward Ingalls, both 18, were picked up at 3:30 p.m. only four hours after they had been reported missing.

A corrections officer driving to work spotted the pair walking beside the road about three miles from Jordan River and four miles from the camp.

The two, drenched by heavy rains in the area Tuesday afternoon, had apparently been trying to hitchhike.

"They got a ride with the wrong person," a camp spokesman quipped today.

The youths have been transferred to the more secure penal premises on Wilkinson Road. Charges of being unlawfully at large will be laid, Tim Thimson, acting director of Wilkinson Road jail said.

So far this year five inmates have walked away from the Jordan River camp.

Ask The Times

Q. Queen Elizabeth is the queen of Canada: why then is the standard carried on the car of the lieutenant-governor of B.C. — the queen's representative here — the Union Jack and not our Canadian flag? — M.J.

A. It has nothing to do with the flag of Canada at any given time. Long before the adoption of the maple leaf ensign the queen's standard for each province was determined to be the Union Jack, containing the coat of arms of that province in the centre, to be used by lieutenant-governors. The queen's personal standard is used when she visits in person.

Red Tape's in the Black

They're called the bureaucrats.

In local government they are the people who supervise and manage, who write reports and sign letters, who implement the policies established by their elected bosses — the mayors and aldermen.

They inhabit carpeted offices with comfortable chairs, where they are waited on by attentive secretaries.

They draw up plans and concepts, rules and regulations. They collect money from the rest of us under an impressive variety of taxes, levies, imposts and licence fees.

They're the cause of a great deal of frustration; the butt of much sarcasm, anger and abuse.

But — and it's a big but — there are compensations. It's a steady, pensionable job, reasonably free of ulcer-causing anxiety and tension.

There are often evening meetings to attend but by and large it's a nine-to-five sort of pattern with at least an hour off for lunch plus morning and afternoon coffee breaks.

And besides, the money isn't bad. Compared with many other jobs, in fact, the money isn't bad at all.

Predictably, as the table indicates, the city of Victoria pays its senior officials higher salaries than those paid by its municipal neighbors. In almost every case a Victoria bureaucrat receives significantly more than his counterparts in Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt.

Without drawing any conclusions whatever but merely to satisfy idle curiosity, let's see what other facts the table reveals:

The 10 highest-salaried officials in the city will receive this year, even if they are paid only 1975 rates with no increase, a minimum of $329,948. As one mill in 1976 will produce $239,074, that means more than one and one-third mills of this year's expected tax levy of around 50 mills (or more than 2.5 per cent of the individual's tax bill) will go to pay these officials.

Seven Victoria officials earn more than $30,000 a year and 12 earn between $25,000 and $30,000.

In Saanich two officials top the $30,000 mark, while Oak Bay and Esquimalt have only one official each in that rarefied salary bracket.

The four municipal engineers will receive a total of $124,235.

The four treasurers will get $108,034.

The four police chiefs — Esquimalt chief Arthur Burton also doubles as fire chief — will be paid $116,580.

In Victoria the police chief gets $3,048 more than the fire chief. In Saanich the difference is $3,900 between the chiefs' salaries. But Oak Bay pays its police and fire chiefs the same ($24,000).

The eight most senior staff in the Victoria engineer's department at City Hall are paid a total of $226,096.

Taxpayers of Victoria, Saanich and Oak Bay fork up a total of $9,074 per month in salaries to their respective municipal administrators: Jim Bramley, Bill Tremayne and Stewart Fleming.

All fascinating facts, no doubt, but they don't provide any answer to the central question: Are our bureaucrats worth these salaries?

The answer to that is virtually impossible to establish, buried as it is in a mass of complex factors including professional competence and qualifications, past experience, productivity and value judgments on the responsibilities of the job in question.

But, even if the non-union professionals don't emulate their CUPE colleagues in heavily emphasizing the "parity" argument in salary increase submissions, some comparisons are drawn and the going rate for the jobs does have relevance.

Where, then, do we look for such comparisons?

Although the city's personnel director cites a number of similarities between Victoria and Burnaby, a glance at the urban population structure of Canadian cities shows that nowhere is there any real counterpart to the balkanized web of municipalities in Greater Victoria.

Singling out the specific case of Victoria itself makes rough comparisons a little easier, however. The city's estimated population as of Jan. 1 this year was 70,000, and it is the hub of a metropolitan area inhabited by some 230,000 people.

Notwithstanding a number of demographic differences, one of the closest parallels can be drawn with Kitchener, Ont.

Kitchener has a city population of 130,000; its "twin," Waterloo has another 50,000; and together they form part of a metropolitan area comprising seven municipalities and a total population of some 275,000.

Kitchener has 1,102 employees on the city payroll. Victoria has about 750 permanent staff plus another 200 "casual or temporary" employees engaged for specific events at the Memorial Arena, for summer parks jobs and so on.

Comparing six of the highest-paid Victoria officials with their Kitchener counterparts shows that three are paid less but the other three are paid more. And one of the employees in the latter category gets a lot more than he would doing the same job in the Ontario city.

At $35,664 a year, planning director Geoff Greenhalgh receives $5,528 more than his opposite number, who is paid $30,136.

Fire Chief Eric Simmons is paid $2,710 more than the Kitchener fire chief; city solicitor Jakob de Villiers $1,162 more than his counterpart.

But the following three officials are less well paid than their opposite numbers (annual differential in brackets):

City manager Jim Bramley ($2,680); comptroller-treasurer Mason Sheldrick ($3,518); engineer John Sansom ($1,254).

Comparisons with conditions south of the border are probably pointless, because of the significantly lower cost of living (and hence salaries) in the U.S.

Even so, it's surprising to note just how wide the gulf is between Victoria bureaucrats' salaries and those currently paid by the administration of a slightly smaller sized town in Washington.

Bellevue, Wash., with a population of 66,000 and metropolitan-area population of 119,000, employing 530 personnel, pays most of its department heads about the same as deputies and senior assistants at Victoria City Hall.

All seven Victoria officials in the $30,000-plus group receive substantially more than their Bellevue counterparts.

Planner Greenhalgh, engineer Sansom and solicitor de Villiers each receives $9,192 more.

Manager Bramley enjoys the smallest differential in the group, and even his salary is $3,120 more than the Bellevue manager receives.

Aggregating the seven salaries, we find that it costs Victoria $45,828 a year more than Bellevue to employ these officials. The respective totals: Victoria $242,580; Bellevue $196,752.

Ambulance Drivers Close to Contract

Provincial ambulance drivers are nearing settlement of their first master contract with the B.C. government since it took over ambulance services in the province almost two years ago.

The 425 members of the ambulance drivers local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees are expecting final Treasury Board approval of the first contract "soon", said George High, a member of the local's bargaining committee.

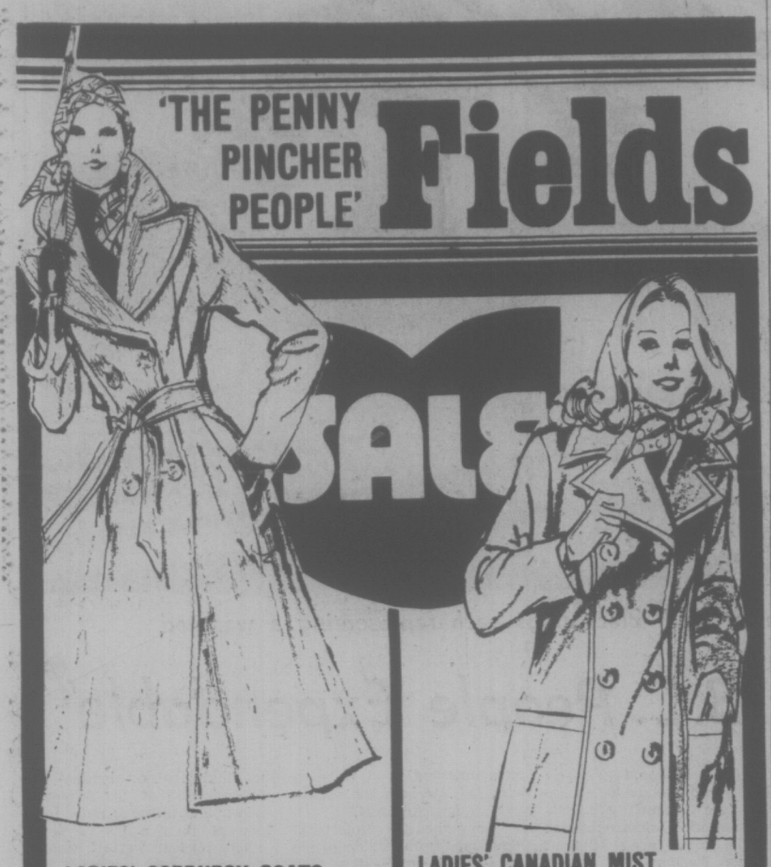

The local, which represents all drivers, including those in Victoria, employed by the Emergency Health Services Commission, was certified as the bargaining unit in June, 1974.

Actual bargaining began in August, 1975, and a final contract was hammered out about three weeks ago and approved by the union and the Public Service Commission.

But the contract must have treasury board approval before provisions, including pay raises, take effect.

Orange Merangue a Treat

MARY MOORE

In appreciation of some pamphlets I mailed to her, Mrs. Keith H. mailed me sone of her favorite recipes. Among them was one for an Orange Meringue Pie which intrigued me for I had just returned from sunny orange land.

Because I had Temple oranges on hand I used them when testing this pie and it was lovely. One of the different features is that pieces of orange pulp are added to the filling. Notice too that I have given you a different recipe for the pastry crust which is very easy to handle.

Be sure to make this pie. It is a beauty.

ORANGE MERINGUE PIE
(deep 9")

Pastry:

2 c. unsifted all-purpose flour
⅔ c. lard or shortening
⅔ tsp. salt
1 small egg yolk
1½ tsp. vinegar
3 tbsp. PLUS 1 tsp. cold water

Filling:

Grated rind 2 large oranges (2 tbsp.)
Juice from 2 large oranges (see below)
Hot water (see below)
Membraneless sections from 1 large orange
¼ c. cornstarch
2 tbsp. flour
⅞ c. sugar (first amount)
½ tsp. salt
2 eggs — yolks and whites separated
1 tbsp. lemon juice
2 tbsp. margarine
¼ c. sugar (second amount —for meringue)
⅛ tsp. cream of tartar (for meringue)

To make pastry cut the lard or shortening into the flour and salt until size of peas. Combine the egg yolk, vinegar and water and add to flour mixture stirring with a fork. Pack between your palms and roll out on lightly floured board to fit deep 9" pie plate. Trim and flute edge. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. about 8 to 10 minutes. Do not overbake.

To make filling, in heavy pot mix thoroughly the cornstarch, flour, sugar and salt. Measure the orange juice squeezed from the 2 oranges from which you have grated the rind. I had nearly 1 cup. Make orange juice up to TWO cups by adding hot water. Add it and grated orange rind to flour mixture in pot and cook stirring until THICK. Mix a little of the hot mixture into the egg yolks in a cup and return to pot along with orange pulp and stir 3 minutes over medium heat. Remove from heat and add lemon juice and margarine and mix. Pour into baked pie shell.

Nover with meringue made by beating together until stiff 2 egg whites and ¼ cup sugar and cream of tartar. Mound attractively all over filling. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. 10 minutes until attractively tinged with gold.

This pie should be made three or four hours before cutting to be sure it cuts neatly. Pronounced "great!" If you care to just before serving decorate top with a few more orange sections dipped in sugar.

Baggage Limits Spreads

OTTAWA (CP) — Enforcement of new regulations for hand baggage carried onto aircraft has been extended to Vancouver, Edmonton, Calgary, Winnipeg, Ottawa, Halifax and Mirabel (Montreal) international airports effective March 29.

Bags and parcels carried on by passengers at these airports must be no more than 20 inches long, 16 inches wide and nine inches deep, the transport department and the Air Transport Association of Canada said Tuesday in a joint announcement.

The enforcement program has been in effect since January at Montreal's Dorval airport and at Toronto's Malton Terminal 2. By July 1, most other Canadian airports will be included in the program.

All hand baggage must be stowed under seats to avoid possible injury to passengers during turbulence and permissible dimensions were determined accordingly. Baggage not meeting the size limit must be checked.

Nutritious, Tasty, Eggplant Underrated

HILDA BEASTALL

Eggplant fruits are unknown to many Canadians although as easily grown as tomatoes in areas of hot summers. Here we must use a glass topped portable coldframe, or just a wooden box with an old window glass on top. With this we trap sun heat to last a few hours longer on cool summer nights.

The shiny deep purple fruits are lovely to look at while growing. When we buy them in March as an end-of-winter boost to daily fare they are imported produce but still goodlooking.

According to one listing of vegetable nutrients, eggplant contributes significant amounts of minerals as well as small ratings of vitamins and a little protein, even after cooking. Combined with a green vegetable, or many fresh green herbs, and canned tomato (in winter) cooked eggplant results in an unusually tasty dish of food values.

Purchased with the typical shiny smooth skin, it may be assumed the eggplant is reasonably fresh and the skin will be tender enough to leave on the fruit when cooking. Texture of the fruit is somewhat like mushroom when cooked lightly, and like the mushroom, relies to some extent on other ingredients for enhancing its own fugitive flavor.

There is little waste in a fresh eggplant. Only the stem end where the dried calyx is attached, needs removing. Wash the surface of the fruit with cold water; dry gently with a soft dish towel, and it is ready to prepare in a number of appetizing ways.

The only way most people know, when asked if they like eggplant, is that of cooking in butter or oil until tender and slightly brown. So here is that simple method.

Browned Eggplant

Slices of eggplant ¼-inch thick
Salt
Flour to coat
Oil or margarine
Wheat germ
Onion finely chopped
Finely chopped mint, parsley

Wash eggplant and dry; cut into ¼-inch slices crosswise. Sprinkle with a little salt; coat with flour and wheat germ.

Heat oil in pan; cook onion for two minutes until clear. Push to one side.

Brown eggplant slices in the hot oil, first one side then the other. Sprinkle with finely chopped parsley and mint while second side browns. Cover and simmer gently for five minutes until tender.

Remove to heated plates, sprinkle with paprika and serve.

Next is a more ambitious taste treat, using more vegetables and serving on hot wholewheat bread. Thick slices of a bought wholewheat loaf heated through are very good.

Savoury Eggplant

4 eggplant slices, ½-inch thick
Salt
¼ cup wholewheat flour
2 Tbsp soy oil or soft margarine
1 Tbsp. finely chopped onion
1 Tbsp finely chopped celery with leaves
1 tsp chopped chives
½ tsp chopped mint leaves
4 small whole canned tomatoes

Wash and dry eggplant. Cut into ½-inch slices crosswise. Sprinkle with salt and coat with flour. Cook in hot oil until tender and browned each side. Remove to heated plate and keep warm.

Add remainder of oil (or a little more) to pan. Put in onion, celery, chives and mint. Cook gently for three minutes. Add whole tomatoes with a little juice. Stir in just enough flour to thicken the pan juices; simmer, without breaking tomatoes, but stir sauce a little to keep it smooth.

Place hot eggplant slices on warm buttered bread; place a tomato in centre of each; pour sauce over each serving. Serves 4.

To make a pleasant supper or lunch dish, combine eggplant with eggs and serve with steamed brown rice and millet with plenty of cooked green beans (canned in winter).

Luncheon Eggplant

1 eggplant, diced
Oil or soft margarine
3 small eggs
Parsley, or kale tips
Thin sliced wholewheat bread, heated.

Wash eggplant; peel with swivel blade peeler; and dice. Cook gently in oil until tender. Beat eggs lightly and pour over eggplant. Sprinkle generously with chopped parsley and kale tips.

Cover; remove to very low heat for 3 minutes; do not boil.

Serve on thin heated bread each topped with a cheese slice.

Sprinkle with paprika. Serves four.

Eggplants are a special favorite in southern France, where they are used more imaginatively than we normally do here. A French type salad using cooked eggplant makes another attractive lunch.

Eggplant Salad

1 eggplant
½ tsp lemon juice
1 tsp. chopped chives
½ cup finely chopped celery and leaves
½ cup finely ground cashews and peanuts
¼ tsp salt
1½ Tbsp oil
1 tsp. vinegar
Few grains sugar
Green lettuce leaves
3 hard-boiled eggs
Paprika

For this recipe, wash and peel eggplant thinly. Dice in half-inch pieces. Cook gently in very little boiling water and the lemon juice to keep from discoloration. When fork tender, drain and cool. Keep liquid for soup.

LOW FIBRE DIET DANGEROUS

TORONTO (CP) — A British surgeon says a switch from white bread to 100-per-cent whole wheat might do as much for the health of Canadians as getting everyone to quit smoking.

Dr. Denis Burkitt, here to address a two-day nutrition conference ending Tuesday, said in an interview that a shortage of fibre now is considered as serious as a shortage of an essential nutrient.

"Soon it may hold as much weight as the term calorie does in terms of our dietary well-being.

Fibre comes chiefly from plants — grains, seeds and leafy vegetables. Dr. Burkitt ranks whole wheat flour, bran and potatoes as among the best and cheapest sources.

"Over the past 300 years, the life expectancy of a middleaged man has hardly increased despite advances in overcoming childhood diseases and infectious epidemics," he said. "The greatest single change in our eating habits has been the reduction of dietary fibre.

"We are suffering today because we have neglected and thrown out fibre. We thought we could do without and we feed it to the donkeys."

Dr. Burkitt said plant fibre is not broken down by digestive juices and helps bring regular bowel movements. There is evidence that it influences both the absorption and excretion of cholesterol and bile acids.

He said a lack of fibre might play a role in the development of gallstones and coronary heart disease.

Put whipped cream or dessert topping on top of a satisfying, hot cup of chocolate or natural Ovaltine, the Good Food Drink. Ovaltine is made with wholesome, nutritious ingredients. Fortified with iron, niacin and Vitamins A, B_1 and Vitamin C.

Mix eggplant in bowl with chives, celery, nuts and salt.

Blend oil, vinegar and sugar; combine lightly with salad.

Serve on green lettuce, using hardboiled egg to decorate. Sprinkle with paprika. Serves 4.

Finally a recipe that needs to be finished in the oven for about 45 minutes so should be reserved for an occasion when baking is done in same period to save on heating cost.

As with stuffed peppers and other stuffed vegetables, the oven heat blends flavors into a delectable whole.

STUFFED EGGPLANT

½ eggplant, split lengthwise
2 Tbsp. oil
2 Tbsp. chopped onion or green chives
¼ tsp. salt
3 whole canned tomatoes
1 Tbsp. chopped parsley
1 tsp. chopped fresh mint
2 slices Mozzarella cheese

Half an eggplant for 2 servings fits into a casserole; 2 halves need a small roaster.

Carefully scoop out the pulp, leaving ½-inch wall in the skin. Chop pulp and pat into pan with oil, onion or chives, mint and parsley. Cook on gentle heat until eggplant is almost soft.

Add cut-up tomatoes, and salt. Pile into eggplant shell. Place in casserole (or 2 halves in roaster), cover and place dish in shallow pan of boiling water into fairly hot oven, 190 deg. C., for 45 minutes. Remove lid, lay slices Mozzarella cheese on top and serve hot with circles of cooked carrot and green peas. Serves two (or four).

Mint does something special to eggplant flavor, but be cautious with it. Nuts add a pleasant texture. Paprika adds a warmth of color as well as flavor.

Little touches such as these will make even unknown foods acceptable to those of the family who are difficult to convert from the familiar.

Pork Hocks Something to Grunt About

By TINY BENNETT

Porks hocks are among the tastiest parts of the hog, are always cheap and subject to much confusion in most cook books.

I bought some recently at 58 cents a pound and looked them up in some cook books to see what other cooking writers had to say on the subject.

In James Beard's American Cookery I found reference to pig's feet, pig's knuckles and pig's hocks, as if there were three parts to the lower leg instead of two. Maybe different parts of North America have different names but this is confusing since in fact there are the feet, also known as trotters and the hocks, the next part up that is thicker and meatier.

Beard gives a recipe for Pig's Knuckles and Sauerkraut that I call Pork Hocks and etc.

Hocks vary in size but average about two pounds including skin and bones. The hock is usually sold sawn in half but with the skin still joined, as this makes them easier to handle during cooking. The ones I bought at 58 cents were very cheap and usually one has to pay from 68 cents to 85 cents a pound.

Now to the cooking.

Like all pork cuts, hocks should be well cooked, slowly on low heat, in order to bring out the full flavor.

They can be baked in the oven and will be improved if first they are gently poached in stock for a minimum of one hour. However my own special recipe calls for cooking in liquid on top of the stove and this is quite simple and troublefree.

TINY'S OLD-STYLE POACHED HOCKS

Hocks contain quite a weight of bone which adds to their flavor, and while they vary a great deal in size, a rule of thumb is to allow one whole hock for each adult. You will need a large pot and it makes for easier handling if you separate the halves.

Place the severed hocks in the pot, cover with cold water and having made this measurement, remove the hocks, set the heat high and add the following:

One large onion stuck with two whole cloves, one crushed clove of garlic, one stalk celery, 12 crushed whole peppercorns, one tablespoon salt, sprig of fresh parsley or one tablespoon dried parsley leaves, one teaspoon thyme, and two ounces wine, cider or malt vinegar.

Bring to a rolling boil, lower the heat and simmer covered for 30 minutes. Add the hocks, skin intact, bring back to the boil, cover and reduce the heat so the poaching liquid barely shimmers on the surface. Large pork hocks need three hours and smaller ones about two to become tender.

The idea is to use the lowest possible heat and give enough time for them to become tender and flavorful without breaking apart.

They can now be lifted out, skinned and served hot with cabbage, poached potatoes, poached baby onions or little beets.

Personally I prefer them with sauerkraut, so when they are tender, I remove them, get another pot, put half a large can of kraut on the bottom, add hocks and wieners, cover with the rest of the can and heat until all is bubbling hot. A delicious additional flavor treat is to add a cup of white wine, dry sherry or dry vermouth to the kraut pot and dust with a generous sprinkling of caraway seeds.

Since I am the only one in my family who enjoys sauerkraut, I make up my own dish from the cooked hocks while the rest of the family has them plain.

Hocks cooked in the rich poaching liquid can also make a superb meat mould to be served cold.

To do this, the hocks are removed, the liquor strained coarsely to remove the vegetables and then carefully through cheese cloth to remove every speck of herbs and spices. The liquor is then set onto a rolling boil to reduce by one-third and to concentrate the jelly qualities.

The hocks are then skinner, boned, cut thin and chilled in the fridge.

When the liquor is reduced, it too is chilled until the fat forms a hard layer that can be removed. And before the liquor goes solid, put some in a really frigid mould, add a layer of meat then cover with the stock. Next put in a layer of thinly sliced hard-cooked eggs and a layer of stock, then thinly sliced stuffed olives or pickle and a layer of stock.

Chill to firm between each layer before adding the next, building up meat-stock, pickle-stock-egg-stock-olives-stock, until the mould is filled or the meat is used up.

Chilled thoroughly, at least overnight, you will end up with a rich meat mould that can be served cold with a salad or cold with boiled potatoes and green vegetables. It makes a fine buffet dish and has that wonderful inducement of being quite inexpensive.

For hearty eaters, the stock can be reduced, the hocks skimmed, with bones left in, and then put into a serving bowl, covered with the stock and chilled to be served later with the rich jelly clinging to them.

EDAM SANDWICH BALANCED LUNCH

School lunches present a problem for busy mothers. Sandwiches are the obvious and easy solution. But now we are so much more nutrition-conscious, doubts arise.

Is a sandwich a balanced meal? Well, it all depends on the filling. Canada's Food Guide recommends servings of protein, dairy food, cereal and fresh fruit or vegetables to balance a meal. This combination of Edam cheese, combined with iron-rich sardines, goes on whole wheat bread.

By adding fresh fruit or a few carrot or celery sticks, you can pack a hearty, tasty and nutritious school lunch which is still easy to prepare.

At home, the filling adapts well for a delicious open-face sandwich which can be toasted under the broiler.

Shredded Edam
Mayonnaise
Hard cooked egg
Sardines
Lettuce
Whole wheat bread

Moisten cheese with just enough mayonnaise to make it spreadable. Spread two pieces of buttered bread with cheese mixture. Top one with layer of sardines and slices of hard cooked egg. Cover with crisp lettuce leaf and second slice of bread. Cut in half. Wrap in plastic wrap. Makes an excellent lunch bag sandwich. Serve with a pickle kabob and crisp vegetable sticks.

For open-face sandwich: spread one slice of bread with cheese mixture. Arrange sardines on cheese; top with egg slices and a pickle fan.

1 cup shredded Edam blended with ¼ cup mayonnaise makes enough spread for 4 sandwiches.

Let Dad Swing

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old boy with a problem. My father is 51. He and my mom are separated, so Dad moved into a singles apartment, and now he is a changed person. He let his hair grow long, he wears strange clothes and beads, and he doesn't even look like my dad anymore.

The majority of the people who live in his complex are in their 20s and 30s, and my father must think he fits right in with them, which he doesn't. People must think he is going through his second childhood.

I want to tell him how stupid he looks, but I don't want to hurt him. How can I put it to him gently that he is making a fool of himself? — EMBARRASSED

DEAR EMBARRASSED: Underneath the long hair, beads and those "strange clothes" he's still your father. There is no way to tell him "gently" that you think he's making a fool of himself, he has the right to change his lifestyle to suit himself, and it's not your place to judge him.

DEAR ABBY: Referring to your answer to STUMPED concerning his employee's bad breath and B.O.: Since he is a key employee, I would suggest that his employer take him aside, compliment him on his good work, then say, "I have noticed certain symptoms in you that could be a clue to a health problem. Your breath is unpleasant at times, and you have body odor. I want you to see our physician as we are concerned about the health of our better employees. Naturally, we will pay for the examination."

If he is truly a "key" employee, the money will be well spent, and a doctor is in a much better position to tell him about personal hygiene than his boss is. There also could be something wrong with him—teeth low-grade infection or something else.

Many companies require annual physicals for employees at company expense. The boss should tell the MD about the problem in advance so he can take this into consideration before the examination. — AMATEUR PSYCHOLOGIST

DEAR AMATEUR: You do all right for an amateur—or even a professional. Your approach was better than mine.

INDOOR GARDEN

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP
(c) 1976, Los Angeles Times

Dear Lynn and Joel:

Recently, I read in one of your columns that you and an astrologer friend had come up with "birthplants"—plants for each sign of the zodiac. I'm a Pisces, and I'm wondering what my birthplant is.—T.L.

Dear T.L.:

We call it our "Horto-Scope," and the birthplants were selected because they share the same traits as their signmates. As a Pisces, you're gentle, sensitive, unlucky and most especially need someone to love and care for you. Your plant has to be something special, so it's the Aralia Elegantissima, a beautiful plant that looks like, well, frankly, marijuana. Alas, it's another one of those glamor plants that's probably going to lose most of its lower leaves no matter how much good light and humidity you can supply indoors (outside, it'll grow just as easily as that "weed" we mentioned above). The Elegantissima is hard to resist because of its tall, feathery, graceful look, but unless you're an exceptionally strong companion—a typical Pisces trait—you might not have the greatest luck in the world with your birthplant. In future columns, we'll run down the rest of the birthplants, so for those of you who were born, keep reading!

Focus on Nutrition in Newfoundland

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — A long-recognized need for better nutritional education in Newfoundland is being realized in a program currently in its first year at Memorial University.

The 3½-year course in nutritional science is offered by the department of biochemistry in conjunction with Acadia University of Wolfville, N.S.

"The need is there," said Margaret Brosnan, co-ordinator of the program. "We're at the stage now where we're happy if we can hire one nutritionist for a hospital, and we need five."

Graduates of the course will hold an honors degree in science which will qualify them as nutritionists or for further training as dietitians.

Dr. Brosnan said nutritionists are needed in hospitals, food service industries, communities, food processing concerns and in the teaching profession.

A recent Canadian nutrition survey showed Newfoundland to be in just as bad nutritional shape as the rest of the country but Dr. Brosnan said the survey ignored certain areas of the province and the true picture is worse.

With the highest food costs and lowest incomes in Canada, consumers here "need to know a lot more than they would in, let's say, Toronto."

The nutritionists currently working in Newfoundland were trained with different standards and life-styles in mind.

"They try to apply Ontario nutritional education . . . and it just doesn't work."

Dr. Brosnan said it is hoped that students who graduate from the course offered here will stay in the province.

Dr. Charles Bigelow, head of the biochemistry department, said there is a need at present for 60 nutritionists and 20 dietitians in Newfoundland but "we don't want to overdo it."

"There's a limited market, after all. I think we can saturate the Newfoundland market by graduating 10 a year."

Each individual accepted into the program is a third-year student who takes a basic science course that year and special courses in food sciences for the next two years.

The third program year is spent at Acadia University, after which the students return here to do one semester of research work with, Dr. Brosnan hopes, emphasis on community nutrition.

"The program we offer gives the students both academic and specialized training," she says.

The program co-ordinator says Newfoundland desperately needs research in nutrition.

"With the federal government cuts in spending on health, preventive methods become all the more important and nutrition is one of the cornerstones of preventive methods."

'OLD TIMEY BAND' AT NORWAY HOUSE

Mad Jack and the Black Label Boys are comin' to town Saturday night.

It's not, as it sounds, a wild bunch of Old West hillbillys come to shoot up the town, but a folk group scheduled to perform at Norway House, 1110 Hillside at 8 p.m. Saturday.

The band is made up of Bob Bovee, Pop Wagner, Bob Douglas and Mary Duschenes and is described as an "old-timey string band" with fiddle, banjo, mandolin, guitar, autoharp and harmonica.

The Norway House concert is sponsored by the Victoria Folklore Society.

Nursery School For Disabled

TORONTO (CP) — A nursery school which opened last September represents a major breakthrough in situating such a facility for retarded children within the public school system.

Briarcrest, according to a spokesman for the Metro Toronto Association for the Mentally Retarded (MTAMR) provides an opportunity for retarded youngsters to attend school in their community and be part of the school environment of other neighborhood children.

Lina Sisto, whose four-year-old son Michael attends Briarcrest, said she's seen an improvement in her son since he started at the school five months ago.

"He can pick up a small glass and drink and he's not nearly so sloppy," she said. "He'll pick up his toys and put them away, or arrange them and then be able to put them all back in the box. The children really improve at Briarcrest."

The program looks after children from two to four-years-old and, says Shirley Des Islet, chairman for the pre-school education committee of MTAMR; its effectiveness has already been proven.

The school has four rooms where 16 students learn gross motor skills such as climbing, riding trikes and kicking a ball.

They also master fine motor skills when they learn to use their hands in order to play with table toys and the social skill of feeding themselves.

There are two teachers, two assistants and between 10 and 12 volunteers working with the children.

Freda Hansah, director of the pre-school education program, is a registered nurse. She is an ex-volunteer who has taught mentally retarded children.

"We combine our problem with home visits in the afternoon," she said. When children go to the school, part of their assessment includes working through a checklist of skills an average two-year-old learns and masters from birth.

"This includes things like dressing themselves, or perhaps drinking from a cup," she said. "When we find a youngster has missed one of these steps, then we have methods to help them learn whatever it is they've skipped."

She said that the methods, usually a matter of following a simple sequence of steps, can also be taught by parents.

"Some of the visits made to children's homes in the afternoon are a follow-up when we can show parents how they can extend their children's learning process when they're not at nursery school."

Mrs. Hannah hopes that in future a parent program can be developed so that families can become mutually supportive and also raise money for needed equipment.

Italians Unearth Ancient Tablets

ROME (AP) — A team of Italian archeologists has found what it claims is the oldest vocabulary in the world, written on clay tablets 4,300 years ago. More than 15,000 of the tablets were found in the royal palace of Ebla, a city that flourished in northern Syria around 2,400 years before Christ, expedition leader Paolo Matthiae said Tuesday. The inscriptions are in a previously undiscovered Semitic language closely related to Hebrew, he said.

HOT HOME-MADE BREAD FROM FREEZER

Nothing equals the taste of hot homemade bread dripping with butter or spread with your favorite jam or honey. It isn't always convenient to bake bread when you need it, so your family and friends may seldom get to savor the mouth-watering product. You can solve this unfortunate situation though by preparing the bread or rolls partially or completely when you do have time and freezing them for later use. Food Advisory Services, Agriculture Canada offers some advice on how to freeze and thaw unbaked, partially baked or completely baked bread and rolls.

To freeze unbaked white bread and rolls, make the dough (see recipe) but use 2 packages of active dry yeast and 2 teaspoons of sugar to activate the yeast. Complete the method to the end of kneading, then cover the dough and allow it to rest for 20 minutes. Shape the dough into loaves or rolls, place on greased baking sheets and brush them with melted fat. Cover and freeze them until firm (about 1 hour), then wrap the loaves in freezer bags or aluminum foil and return them to the freezer. The dough can be stored for as long as one month at 0 deg. F. to bake a loaf, remove it from the freezer, place it in a greased pan and brush it with melted fat. Cover the loaf and allow it to thaw in the refrigerator for about 16 hours. Remove the loaf from the refrigerator, leave it covered and allow it to rise in a warm place until it has doubled in bulk (about 1 hour). Bake as you would for fresh dough.

To freeze "brown and serve" rolls, prepare the dough as above but after the second rising shape the dough into individual rolls or pan rolls. Place these in greased pans and brush with melted fat. Bake at 275 deg. F. until they are cooked in the centre but are still pale on the outside (about 15 minutes). After cooling them, wrap the rolls in freezer bags or aluminum foil. These will store up to two weeks at 0 deg. F. To prepare the rolls for serving, thaw them at room temperature (45 minutes for individual rolls and 60 minutes for pan rolls). Place the individual rolls on a greased baking sheet and bake at 375 deg. F. for 10 minutes. Place pan rolls in a greased baking pan and bake at 375 deg. F. for 15 minutes.

To freeze baked bread and rolls, first cool them and then package them in freezer bags or aluminum foil and place them in the freezer. These will store for up to 2 months at 0 deg. F. To thaw, leave them unwrapped at room temperature for about 1 hour for rolls and about 2½ hours for bread.

Salad Burgers

(Makes 6 servings)

¼ pound mushrooms, sliced
¼ cup finely chopped onion
1 medium tomato, diced
⅓ cup sweet pickle relish
Dash garlic powder
Salt and pepper
1½ pounds lean ground beef
1½ cups shredded lettuce
3 hamburger rolls, split and toasted

In medium bowl, combine mushrooms, onion, tomato, pickle relish, garlic powder, ½ teaspoon salt and dash pepper. Stir until well combined. Shape ground meat into 12 thin patties; sprinkle with salt and pepper. Place a rounded tablespoonful of relish mixture in centre of 6 patties. Top with remaining patties. With fork, press edges to seal.

Place patties on rack in broiler pan. Broil hamburgers 3 to 4 inches from heat source, 5 minutes on each side or until of desired doneness. To remaining relish mixture, add lettuce and toss. Place burgers on roll halves. Top each burger with about ½ cup salad mixture. Eat with knife and fork.

★ WHITE BREAD AND ROLLS

1 teaspoon sugar
½ cup lukewarm water
1 package active dry yeast
1 cup hot milk
½ cup lukewarm water
3 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon salt
3 tablespoons shortening
5½ to 6 cups all-purpose flour

Dissolve 1 teaspoon sugar in ½ cup water and sprinkle yeast over top. Let stand 10 minutes. Combine next five ingredients, stir until shortening melts and cool to lukewarm. Stir in yeast mixture. Gradually beat in 3 cups flour.

Work in remaining flour to make soft dough. Turn onto board and knead until smooth and elastic (8 to 10 minutes).

Shape in ball and place in greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover and let rise in warm place until double in bulk (about 1½ hours). Punch down, divide in half, cover and let rest 10 minutes.

Shape into two loaves and place in greased 9x5-inch loaf pans; or shape into rolls and place in greased baking pans for pan rolls or in greased muffin tins for individual rolls. Brush with melted fat. Cover and let rise until double in bulk (about 1 hour). Bake loaves 30 to 35 minutes, pan rolls 20 to 25 minutes and individual rolls 15 to 20 minutes at 375 degrees F. Makes 2 loaves or 1½ to 2 dozen rolls.

Vegetables For Dessert?

The idea of serving vegetables for dessert is not new nor strange. Who hasn't tasted a carrot or tomato cake, or even a carrot pudding at Christmas time? And what about pumpkin pie?

Dessert complements any good meal. When planning a dessert, appearance and taste are very important, but the nutritive contribution should not be forgotten. It can make up for the lack in vitamins and minerals of the preceding course and provide the carbohydrate needed to meet the energy needs of the body. Milk or egg-desserts also complete the daily requirement of protein.

Desserts must be chosen in relation to the main course. Thus a light meal indicates a more substantial dessert whereas a heavier meal calls for a light dessert.

Winter vegetables such as carrots and rutabagas have all the needed elements to join the dessert family. That's why Food Advisory Services of Agriculture Canada have developed recipes which utilize these two vegetables. The "Spiced Carrot Cream" is a delightful custard made with mashed carrots, milk and eggs, expertly spiced and garnished with whipped cream. The "Carrot and rutabaga pie" is very attractive — its richer color and velvet-like texture will certainly please everyone.

Pork, Avocado Burritos

4 (4-oz.) cans green chilies
2 (16-oz.) cans tomatoes, stewed
4 (10-oz.) cans water
1½ c. cubed pork
Red chili peppers (as hot as you like)
1 pkg. flour tortillas

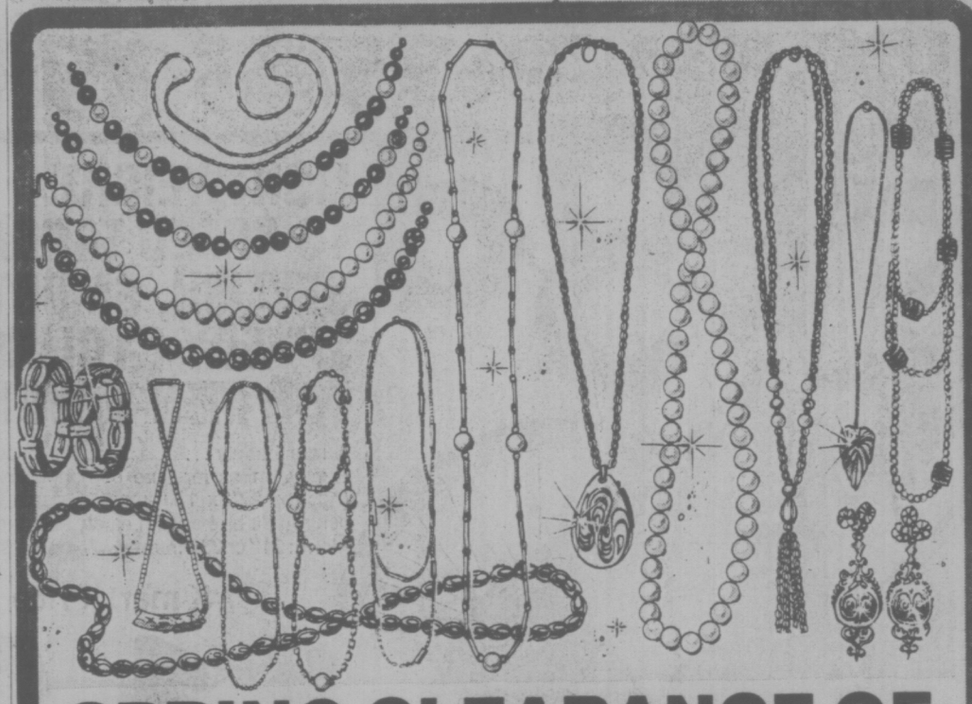

TOPPING

Mashed 3-5 ripe avocados
Shred ½ head lettuce
Dice 2-3 tomatoes
Shred 1 c. Tomano cheese

Brown pork, then add tomatoes, water and chilies; let simmer covered for 1½-2½ hrs. Add peppers if desired. Also add more water when needed. When ready to serve, thicken mixture with flour (to avoid lumps, mix a little hot water to flour, then add to mixture). Heat up flour tortillas, then fill with mixture and add topping. Roll up and cover with cheese and pork mixture. Serves six.

For Those Who Like Them: A Trio of Oyster Dishes

By WILLIAM RICE
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A new menu filled with oysters? While I know of no dessert containing oysters (though the English developed a practice of ending formal meals with savories such as the oyster concoction, angels on horseback), a trio of oyster recipes at hand suggest a meal's progression.

The passionate admirer of oysters might start with some on the half-shell, accompanied by a dry still white or champagne, move on to sherry with the soup and perhaps assay a red Loire with the steak. As for the asparagus dish: Taking the sum of its ingredients, no concoction this side of a chili dog would prove less hospitable in the company of wine. Serve it apart.

Actually, European gourmands of the pre-First World War era — probably the only ones who would take up such a challenge — strongly disapproved of cooked oysters and would have rejected the menu out of hand. For us today any one of the recipes might add to a meal. Furthermore the seasonal incongruity of matching oysters with asparagus is no more. The asparagus arrives earlier in the spring (from afar) and the oysters stay later.

ASPARAGUS WITH OYSTER SAUCE

Serves 6 to 8.

4 shallots or scallions, finely chopped
1 clove garlic, finely chopped
2 tablespoons butter
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
½ to 1 teaspoon curry powder
¼ cup dry sherry
1½ dozen oysters, finely chopped, and their liquor
1 cup sour cream
Cayenne pepper
Lemon juice
3 pounds asparagus, cleaned and tough bases broken off

Melt butter in a frying pan. Saute shallots and garlic until softened but not brown. Add salt and curry. Stir for 30 seconds. Add sherry and boil until liquid is reduced by half. Lower heat, add oysters and stir for 1 minute. Add sour cream, stir; then taste and adjust seasoning with cayene, lemon juice and salt.

Set aside and prepare asparagus (or prepare them concurrently) by simmering in salted water in a wide frying pan for 8 to 10 minutes, or until just tender.

Drain asparagus well. Place on warm individual plates and cover with sauce (reheated if necessary). Serve at once.

OYSTER AND SPINACH SOUP

Serves 10 to 12.

1 pint shucked oysters and their liquor
1 bag (10 ounces) spinach, washed and thick stems removed
6 cups well-flavoured chicken stock
1 cup half and half
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
Hot pepper sauce to taste

Heat stock in large saucepan or medium pot. Add spinach and cook over low heat for 3 or 4 minutes, until spinach softens. Add oysters and poach an additional 3 to 4 minutes. Puree mixture in a blender in two or three batches, pouring puree into a fresh saucepan. Add cream and heat through without boiling. Season with salt, pepper, nutmeg and pepper sauce before serving.

STEAK WITH OYSTER SAUCE

Serves 6 to 8.

2½ to 3-pound sirloin, edges scored
2 dozen (or more) oysters and their liquor
1 cup bearnaise sauce (Hollandaise made on a base of chopped shallots and tarragon cooked in vinegar)
Salt, pepper and lemon juice to taste.

Prepare steak for broiling (or baking). Make bearnaise now or, depending on your confidence, while steak cooks. If made ahead, set over hot, but not boiling, water.

While steak cooks, poach oysters in a saucepan until edges curl. Remove oysters and keep warm. Reduce juices by a third, then blend into bearnaise. Season with salt, pepper and lemon juice and spread on serving platter. Top with sliced, cooked steak and scatter oysters over all.

TUNA FLIPS

Filling:

2 6½ oz. cans Clover Leaf Flaked Albacore, drained.
4 slices bacon
¾ c. condensed cheddar cheese soup.
1 tsp. horseradish
1 tsp. instant minced onion dash pepper

Fry bacon until very crisp, drain on absorbent paper and crumble. Combine all ingredients.

Pastry

1 c. butter or margarine, softened
1 c. shredded medium cheddar
2 c. flour
½ tsp. salt
2 drops tabasco

Cream butter and cheese, add flour and seasoning and mix thoroughly. Shape into a ball and chill at least 3 hours. Roll out very thinly and cut into 2½" squares. Put 1 heaping tsp. of filling on each square. Fold pastry over and pinch the edges. Prick flips with a fork and bake at 450 F for approximately 10 minutes or until light brown.

Feel free to substitute other seafoods for the tuna.

Lamb Cabbage Rolls

1 medium cabbage (about 3 pounds)
1 cup finely chopped onion
2 tablespoons fat
1 pound minced lamb
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
3 cups cooked rice
2 cups tomato juice
2 tablespoons butter

Core cabbage. Remove and save coarse outer leaves. Almost cover cabbage with boiling water. Cover and simmer until leaves are soft and almost transparent (about 20 minutes). Remove whole leaves and if necessary continue simmering until all leaves can easily be removed.

Split large leaves in half removing centre rib. Saute onion in fat until transparent. Add meat and seasonings and brown. Combine with rice. Place ¼ cup filling on each cabbage leaf.

Fold rib side of leaf over filling, fold ends over and roll up to enclose filling. Place some coarse leaves on bottom of baking dish followed by layer of cabbage rolls. Sprinkle with salt and pepper.

Repeat to make two or three layers of cabbage rolls. To make sauce, heat tomato juice with butter. Pour over cabbage rolls and cover with remaining coarse leaves. Cover and bake at 350 deg. F. until cabbage is tender (1½ to 2 hours).

Makes about 32 cabbage rolls, eight servings.

Industry Born

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — In 1873, a farmer's wife here sent for two seedless orange trees from the United States department of agriculture. She planted them near her kitchen door and watered them with dishwasher. The two trees adapted themselves to the California climate and within a few years an industry was born.

MPs Stall Gun-Curb Bill

WIDER PoW BOOST URGED

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs Tuesday welcomed a government bill to provide special benefits for about 5,000 former prisoners of war but urged inclusion of escapers and evaders in the bill.

Angus Maclean (PC-Malapeque) said in the Commons the estimated 500 prisoners of war who escaped and servicemen who evaded the enemy should be included under the bill.

"After all, everybody who served knows one of his obligations was to try to escape," he said as debate on the bill began.

Under the legislation, most former prisoners of the Japanese in the Second World War who are married will be entitled to an extra $320.33 a month in benefits.

Married veterans who were prisoners in Europe will be entitled to as much as $128.13 more a month.

The legislation follows months of Opposition pressure to adopt a Commons veterans affairs committee unanimous report last June.

It is expected to get speedy parliamentary approval.

The bill, expected to cost $10 million a year, covers both armed forces personnel and civilians captured during the Second World War and the Korean War.

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government's gun control legislation was stalled in the Commons Tuesday as rural Conservatives fought to have proposed rifle and shotgun controls modified.

They spoke on a motion by Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) to have the gun-control sections removed from the government's peace and security bill and sent to committee for study.

The motion, now in second reading, received support from rural Conservative and Social Credit members, who echoed sentiments from fish and game and similar clubs in their home ridings.

Peter Masniuk (PC—Portage) maintained that New York's restrictive gun laws aren't reflected in its homicide rate.

He said Switzerland, which requires able-bodied men to have and be able to use military rifles, has a low rate of violent crime.

"Guns don't kill people," Masniuk said. "People kill people."

There were too few shootings in Canada to justify a scheme that would require anyone who bought a gun or ammunition to get a licence first, he said.

Liberal members disagreed, citing an incident last May at a Brampton, Ont., high school, where a teacher and student had been killed and 13 students injured by an 18-year-old classmate who then shot himself.

Liberal member Ross Milne (Peel-Dufferin-Simcoe) noted that 7,500 Ottawa high school students also signed a petition after a similar shooting in November in which a student, who later killed himself, mortally wounded two others at his high school with a shotgun pruchased from a cut-rate department store.

Milne said the high-school shootings were exceptional only in carnage.

A Brampton teacher had found in a survey seven similar incidents involving guns at area schools.

Canadians are buying guns at the rate of 1,370 a day, he said.

Gun ownership was approaching that of the U.S., where handguns account for a high homicide rate, especially in states where guns are come by easily.

Rifles figure strongly in Canaadian homicides although the use of handguns, which would be harder to buy legally if the proposed law is passed, is increasing.

Milne countered Conservative arguments that the gun laws would oppress the innocent by saying ownership is a privilege, not a right.

As the Commons debated the peace and security bill, the Senate legal affairs committee resumed scrutiny of the bill's parole sections.

Claude Bouchard, vice-chairman of the National Parole Board, told the committee that 750 of the 6,457 paroles in effect last year were forfeited or revoked. About 1,500 of some 9,000 paroles had been revoked or forfeited in 1972.

PAY BILLS PUSHED

OTTAWA (CP) — Senators rushed two bills through final reading Tuesday, giving the government authority to spend about $6 billion, including payrolls for the country's federal public servants.

Amid queries from Conservative senators and MPs down the hall in the Commons about banks refusing to cash employee's cheques because the government was not authorized to spend the money, the bills were whisked to third reading.

They were to get royal assent later in the day.

The interim supply bill grants the government about $4.8 billion in advance to pay bills for the fiscal year starting Thursday.

THAT LOAN FOR LOCKHEED:

It Doesn't Need MPs' Approval

By MARGARET PITON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The government is currently in the process of arranging $300 million in bridge financing for Lockheed Aircraft Corp. to build 18 long-range patrol aircraft.

A spokesman for Lockheed said Tuesday he expects some financing arrangements will be concluded within the next few days.

The financing will apparently involve a bank loan guaranteed in some way by the government.

Under terms of the Defence Production Act, loans or advances can be made to or guaranteed for defence contractors, by order in council.

This means the government could commit itself to make or guarantee a $300 million loan to Lockheed without even a parliamentary debate, and Canadians could find themselves helping to bail out a financially-troubled and scandal-ridden foreign company.

Close to $300 million of the subcontracting involved in this contract with Lockheed is expected to go to Canadian sub-contractors, and there are supposed to be substantial spin-off benefits for Canada.

But it is questionable that this is worth the price tag that could result.

How did Canada get into this mess?

The history is long and complicated, originating with a government decision last November to purchase 18 Orion long range patrol aircraft from Lockheed.

The government maintains that the Lockheed planes are superior to a similar patrol aircraft built by Boeing Aircraft.

The original cost of the aircraft was estimated to be $950 million, and this has now escalated to over $1 billion.

There was an initial production of the planes, the Lockheed official said, with each side assuming the other would pay it.

He noted that aerospace firms never finance their own military contracts, and that progress payments are normally made by the purchaser during the term of the contract.

However, Defence Minister James Richardson Tuesday quoted from a letter sent by a high Lockheed official last summer, when the shortfall first became evident, saying the idea of Lockheed arranging its own financing "has merit and would receive a positive response."

Whatever the truth in this dispute, somebody is going to have to come up with the money.

Richardson said the government guarantee of a bank loan would probably involve assigning Lockheed's rights to payment under the contract to the banks, so the government itself wouldn't be liable for the money.

Whether Lockheed and the banks will agree to this is open to question. Even if they do, which seems unlikely, Lockheed will have to get approval from the Emergency Loan Guarantee Approval Board in the U.S. to contract further debt.

Lockheed has been financially troubed for years, since well before stories of its bribery practices surfaced.

It currently has about $600 million in loans outstanding, $195 million of which are guaranteed by the U.S. government.

The initial guarantee of loans to Lockheed aroused great controversy in Congress in the early 1970s, and there is a possibility Congress could force the company to adhere to a strict repayment schedule which would force Lockheed into bankruptcy.

However, a Senate Banking Committee official discounted this possibiity.

He noted the accelerated repayment schedule was to be used as a club to force Lockheed to reveal information about its foreign bribes, and since the company has agreed to co-operate there isn't much danger of Congress imposing a fast repayment schedule.

NET PROFITS DOUBLE

BURBANK, Calif. (Reuter) — Lockheed Aircraft Corp. announced Tuesday 1975 net profits nearly doubled those of 1974.

But the aerospace giant expressed concern about the "greater uncertainty" facing its important L-1011 Tristar commercial plane program.

It said new uncertainties about the program, considered crucial by many aerospace analysts for the company's survival, were caused by depressed industry conditions and its own bribery scandal.

Lockheed's 1975 profits rose to $45.3 million from $32.2 million in 1974. Total sales showed only a slight increase to $3.4 billion from $3.3 billion in 1974.

Profits for 1975 would have been even higher but the corporation made an accounting change in connection with its Tristar orders.

Sales of the Tristar jets declined to $559 million last year from $811 million in 1974, and Lockheed said it did not receive a single firm Tristar order in 1975.

Lockheed predicted its Tristar operating losses in 1976 will be higher than last year's $103.8 million.

Utter Shambles Claims Tory

OTTAWA (FP) — Canada's venture into ultra sophisticated long-range patrol aircraft faced increasing turbulence in Parliament Tuesday as Opposition parties probed into grounded contract negotiations.

Conservative defence critic Allan McKinnon described contract negotiations as "an utter shambles.". New Democratic Party leader Ed Broadbent said it was obvious the government had "bungled."

The problem is Lockheed Aircraft Corporation's need to borrow some $300 million for bridge financing to float the company until Canada's payments for 18 Orien aircraft start in about two years.

As opposition members fired dozens of questions Defence Minister James Richardson acknowledged that his department was aware last November that Lockheed needed the approval of the U.S. Emergency Loan Guarantee Board and 24 creditors before it could incur further debt.

The minister told the Commons he had seen evidence to that effect in writing.

However, he insisted, his department had been told by Lockheed negotiators that the restraints could be overcome and the necessary financing could be obtained.

Opposition leader Joe Clark asked if Lockheed had not advised the Canadian government that it owed $595 million and could not incur new debt without approval.

"The Lockheed Corporation on earlier occasions and again at the last negotiations indicated they had these types of problems," Richardson said.

"They also indicated they would solve them and that they could provide the financing for which we were asking. We were under no doubt about that, they could provide the financing," he added.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

On the face of it, West made a perfectly normal lead against South's doubled game contract in today's deal. As it turned out, however, this normal lead enabled South to fulfill his contract.

SOUTH
♠ J 7 6 3

◇ K 10 9 7 3
♣ 8 6 2

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Dbl.	2 ♠	3 ◇
4 ♠	5 ◇	Pass	Pass
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡.

West didn't dwell too long in selecting his opening lead: he made the normal lead of the heart king. When the dummy came into view, he quickly shifted to the ace of clubs, and at trick three continued with the club queen, dummy's king capturing the trick. A heart was then ruffed with the ten of diamonds, after which dummy was entered via the diamond queen. A third heart lead was now ruffed with the king of diamonds, West's ace falling. The board's queen of hearts had just been promoted into a winner.

Dummy was not re-entered via the ace of trumps (picking up East's last trump en route), and on the queen of hearts South discarded his remaining club. With East's ten of hearts being played on this trick, dummy's nine of hearts became the only heart left in the deck. Declarer then trumped dummy's last club with his diamond king, and claimed his contract.

In retrospect, and perhaps as a rationalization, closer analysis would have guided West to an opening club lead. Dummy was reasonably certain to have length in hearts, for when a player makes a take-out double over a major suit opening bid, he usually has support (length) in the other major suit. If this were true on this deal, then it might be vital to establish and cash club tricks before dummy's heart suit would become established.

Actually, if West had held the K-Q-J-x of clubs instead of the A-Q-J-x, an opening club lead would have been correct.

If West lays down the club ace at trick one, he can always shift to hearts if dummy shows up with a weak, shorter heart holding. In the actual deal, as the dummy is observed, West would naturally continue clubs, and the defenders would then cash two club tricks and one heart without any trouble, and defeat South's game contract.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, April 1

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Hold tight to belongings. Schemes may be afoot to relieve you of valuables. Know it and be ready for unusual procedures. Friend who is well-meaning may also lack patience. Partner or mate acts in eccentric manner. Maintain balance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Study Aries message. Sudden decisions, actions could be on agenda. Cycle is high — be flexible without scattering your efforts. What appeared an ironclad agreement could be "called in" for review. Be familiar with legal technicalities.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Slow pace — you need additional information. You're not being told complete story. Get glimpse behind scenes. You may want to do some reviewing, revising and talking. Be direct, frank — say what you mean and let key people know your needs.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Friend might want more than friendship. Meaning will become strikingly clear. This is no time for flirtation — others tend to be vulnerable and to take you seriously. If you're just "playing," review the "rules". Be ready for quick change. Deal with Gemini, Virgo persons.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Home adjustment is emphasized. Accent on security, career and ability to communicate with professional superior. Taurus, Libra and Scorpio figure prominently. Check costs. No one intends to give you something for nothing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Philosophical concepts are emphasized. Look beyond the immediate. Become more aware of potential. Write, publish, advertise and distribute. Travel plans may be altered. You may have taken too much for granted.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Money is in limelight. You make inquiries and get answers. You start organizing priorities. Facts are on the line. Capricorn, Cancer individuals could be very much in picture. Cash flow impediment can be corrected.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Lie low; play waiting game. Refuse to be rushed into affixing your signature to any document. Time is on your side. Mate or partner may be moving too quickly. Build on solid base — or expect to fall. Serious, important relationship is tested. Be a keen, mature observer.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may feel others are being subdued, too quiet, subtle for your current taste. You learn now that others can be envious, can resent some of your original ideas. Key is to be independent without being arrogant. Whatever you do, be sure that your own style is paramount.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Conserve, collect — be positive about what you want to do and how to do it. Key is to gather data, to analyze it and to be positive about material at hand. Cancer individual figures prominently. Romantic involvement gets "tangled."

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): You may be asked to decide which course should be taken by business associate. Your own involvement is more serious than it appears on surface. Key is to be flexible, to raise sights, to welcome contacts, ideas. One you respect is having an off day.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Trips, agreements with relatives could be "called off." You could be temporarily frustrated. Key is to keep sense of humor. Be experimental, not foolish. Be generous, not extravagant. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently.

IF APRIL 1 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are creative, independent, arrogant, original, passionate. Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. You are inventive, a pioneer, not every person's cup of tea but very attractive to opposite sex. July should be your most significant month of 1976, a year which sees you starting a project, cutting loose of past and falling in love.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"Look, Dad," said Dan, holding out a sheet of paper. "I just figured out something about Aunt Eva's age and our three ages. Mom's and yours and mine. If you add its two digits to the reverse of the age you get double the age, and that goes for all four."

Greg looked. "You mean the two digits in reverse order," he commented. "That's quite a gimmick."

What were the four ages?

Thanks for idea to D. Hall, Aurora, Ontario.

Large Firms Get Most Gov't Aid

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal Industry Minister Don Jamieson told the Commons finance committee Tuesday that large corporations have been getting more than their share of government aid for modernizing plants and research and development activities.

He made the statement to Norm Calik (L — Ontario) who said the qualifying requirements for various grants and incentives often exclude smaller companies.

Cafik said many of the larger companies receiving government assistance are foreign-owned. He asked that more money be made available to smaller and Canadian firms.

Jamieson replied that a current government review of approaches to productivity includes an assessment of methods used in approving government grants.

The question is whether the government should be reinforcing the success of some companies or taking greater risks by giving aid to firms starting out, he said.

The minister said that during the last few years, larger companies have been getting a "disproportionately large percentage" of the aid.

Jamieson said a review of the department's incentive programs aimed at improving productivity soon will be submitted to cabinet.

Max Saltsman (NDP — Waterloo-Cambridge) said all previous incentive methods for improved industrial efficiency had failed to correct Canada's abysmal productivity performance.

He suggested the government consider outlawing the use of foreign trade marks on many consumer goods as prelude to rationalizing industrial production in order to improve efficiency.

Canada's industries are patterned after the U.S. model where a number of product lines are produced by each company's plant operating under a different trade mark or trade name. This impedes productivity in the smaller Canadian economy, Saltsman said.

Eliminating the use of many of the trade marks would remove the incentive to produce a full range of products under each brand name and would help clear the way for a rational system whereby each plant would concentrate on a single product line, Saltsman said.

He said rationalization of industries would reinforce the healthy trend towards sales of products such as appliances by major department stores under their own name. That would be more efficient and better for the consumer.

DECISION

Ottawa, March 25, 1976
The Canadian Radio-Television Commission announces the following decision.
Decision CRTC 76-162
LAKE COWICHAN, MESACHIE LAKE AND HONEYMOON BAY, BRITISH COLUMBIA—751537200
Lake Video Service Ltd.
Application for renewal of its broadcasting licence for its cable television broadcasting undertaking serving Lake Cowichan, Mesachie Lake and Honeymoon Bay, British Columbia expiring March 31, 1976.
Decision: APPROVED
The Commission renews this licence from April 1, 1976 to March 31, 1979 subject to compliance with the Cable Television Regulations which will come into force on April 1, 1976 and subject to conditions to be specified in the licence. This period will enable the Commission to consider the renewal of this licence at the same time as those of other cable television licences in the region.
Consistent with section 11 of the Regulations, the licensee must reserve a channel for community programming and advise the Commission of its proposed distribution. In this regard, the Commission has noted the licensee's intention to develop community programming when it is economically feasible to do so.
The Commission has taken into consideration the interventions concerning the carriage of the PBS station, KCTS-TV channel 9 Seattle and will give early consideration to an application for its distribution should the licensee determine that the reception and distribution of this signal is technically feasible and economically practical.

CCF Organizer MacNail Dead

VANCOUVER (CP) — Charles Grant MacNail, one of the organizers of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation (CCF) and former MP and British Columbia MLA has died in hospital. He was 83.

MacNail took part in the CCF Regina founding convention in 1932 and later set up an auto dealership in the Vancouver area.

He was elected to Parliament in 1935 but was defeated by James Sinclair, father-in-law of Prime Minister Trudeau, in the Liberal sweep of 1940.

In 1941 he was elected to the B.C. legislature. He served two terms as B.C. president of the CCF, several terms as provincial secretary and managed many federal campaigns in B.C.

Following his defeat in the 1945 provincial election, he served as executive assistant to presidents of the International Woodworkers of America.

MacNail was born in Ontario and wounded overseas during the Second World War.

He later served for two years as chairman of the Employment Services Council of Canada.

FM—CLOSED CIRCUIT AUDIO SERVICES ON CABLE TELEVISION

The Commission's Cable Television Regulations and Policy Paper released on November 26, 1975 and December 16, 1975 respectively require, for the reasons set out therein, that the carriage by cable television undertakings of closed circuit audio services not presently authorized by the Commission be discontinued. The Commission appreciated that this policy would affect many existing closed circuit audio services involving ethnic and student programming which have been carried by cable television undertakings for some time, but it believed that acceptable alternatives could and should be developed.

In giving further study to these problems, the Commission has concluded that more time is necessary to allow for the orderly development of alternative solutions which will reflect the principles set out in the Regulations and Policy Paper. Consequently, the Commission has decided to extend the time within which compliance is required relating to the carriage of present closed circuit audio services until March 1, 1977. As of the date, all such services carried by cable television systems must be provided by persons licensed by the Commission.

In considering the development of acceptable alternatives, the Commission is prepared to consider a new concept, and suggest that cable television licensees may wish to apply to establish a community audio F.M. channel, similar to the community video channel which is required by the Regulations and Policy Paper, to enable the provision of a variety of audio services to the communities they serve. The programming on such an audio channel should reflect the cultural and linguistic diversity of the population served by the licensees. Such programming should generally conform to the principles outlined in the Commission's Policy Paper for the community video channel and should not contain advertising. It is felt that ethnic groups can derive unique benefits from the proposed cable television community audio channel which can be provided by licensees of the Commission without affecting existing off-air broadcasting services.

New proposals conforming with the above and with the new Cable Television Regulations and Policy Paper should be submitted to the Commission at the earliest date.

Guy Lefebvre,
Secretary General.

Taxi Driver: Gloss Instead of Clarity

A Movie Review by Nora Hutchison

Taxi Driver, Martin Scorsese's new film, is about psychic pain and disorder, indifference and total commitment, survival in the urban war zone. The atmosphere is dark and brooding, heavy with suppressed sex and violence.

Scorsese restricts the story's focus to a two-character study — New York City, and a taxi driver called Travis Bickle (Robert De Niro). Travis drives after dark because he can't sleep anyway, and he negotiates the city with his eyes half shut, loathing the shabbiness, the scummy night people, the neon glare. Travis can't adapt to the night world and its inhabitants, the whores and pimps, the dealers, the crazies who carry knives in thier pockets or more dangerous weapons in their minds, but he can't survive the daylight world either.

Travis hates New York with an almost Biblical rage. He is obsessed with the filth in the streets, the human garbage, the decaying buildings. He keeps a journal in which he records fumbling notes, and bits of poems, cloaked in the jargon of pop-psychology. Travis writes about cleanliness and morality, about America and fresh-faced girls.

There's little to know about Travis except that he's full of anger, but it's enough — we can feel his fury. There are suggestions of combat duty (a scar on his back) and a strict upbringing, but no one ever asks him to fill in the details.

Travis is totally dislocated; he can't fit into any acceptable pattern of society. His cabby friends joke and shoot the breeze, warn each other about the dangerous sectors of town, and help each other out of rough spots, but Travis never unwinds long enough to ease into the group. He can't accept their acceptance of the city. When he tries, haltingly, to explain to the Wizard that the city has strung him out too far, and that he's afraid of what he might do, the older cabbie doesn't understand what he's talking about.

Travis falls for Betsy (Cybill Shepherd), a political campaign worker whose cool blond looks and tailored dresses signal purity and exclusivity. He watches her for days, behind the plate glass windows of campaign headquarters, and then seizes his nerve, and goes in to meet her. She's curious about this inarticulate, highly charged creature, and they connect, briefly. He woos her with one of the oldest lines in the book — "I can see that you're a lonely person" — but he doesn't know how to treat her on their first date, and she refuses to have anything more to do with him.

The whole affair is a pathetic irony. Betsy may be lonely but Travis's life is completely empty and he's burning with the pain and despair of it. Travis wants to touch someone so badly and to be needed that he makes all the wrong moves. When he tries to help a 12-year-old prostitute escape from her pimp, he reminds her of the fun she's missing with her family and school friends. The baby whore just looks at him in astonishment — nothing that he knows or can say has any meaning for her.

Travis' frustrations make him sicker. The only relief will come from some cathartic explosion, some exhaustion of his rage. He goes into rigorous training like some ascetic commando preparing for a holy war, and when the violence comes, it's climatic and releasing. The bloody trail he leaves behind him is his only way of expressing himself, of breaking down the city's indifference.

Scorsese's film is a reminder of American film noir — those dark, expressionist melodramas of the 1940s, set in hostile urban environments where the city's steam belches up through the manholes, and the fire hydrants sprinkle water over the burning pavements. In Taxi Driver, the images are jagged with neon angles and unquiet shadows. The city is a stylized killing ground, and its inhabitants are macabre creatures engaged in a ferocious dance of death.

Taxi Driver is loaded with powerful images, but the screenplay works in too few dimensions. It's too easy to conclude, for instance, that violence is the cure for frustration. Mostly, though, the movie needs the same crude energy that informed Scorsese's first film about New York — Mean Streets. Taxi Driver's energy is professionally instilled — paid for by the hour — and not really felt. Clarity and tone have been sacrificed for gloss.

CAR POOL STUDY PLANNED BY CITY

Victoria officials are going to investigate the possibility of encouraging car pools as one way of easing the traffic problem in the downtown area, Ald. John Hayes told city aldermen Tuesday.

Hayes, chairman of the traffic and transportation committee, said the city must start acting on its own initiative because it looks increasingly obvious that little or no help with transit improvements can be expected from the provincial government.

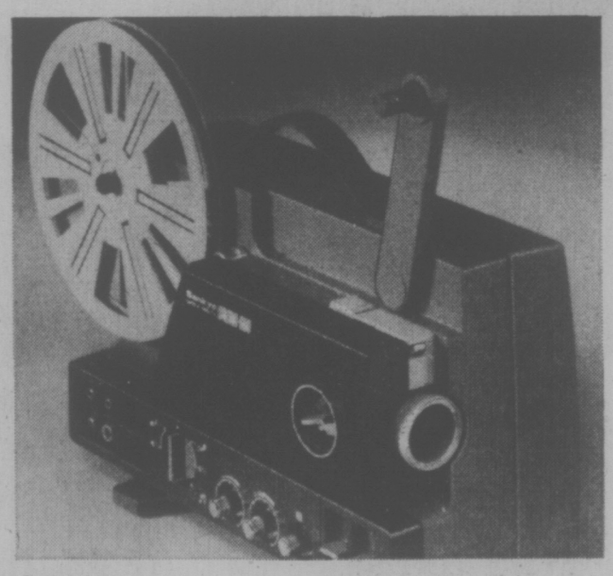

Hayes said he and traffic engineer Derek Wild will visit Seattle next week to study the car pooling system in that city.

ALL THAT GLITTERS . . .

CARSON CITY, Nev. — A man who mines gold as a hobby says he tried to make his automobile payment with it, but the company wanted paper.

Robert Roloff, who took the gold from the Yuba River in Northern California, said he tried to convince the company representative gold is legal tender.

"He didn't disagree but said it would be against company policy to take payment in that form," Roloff said. Tuesday. "He wouldn't take it."

He said he drove to Reno to make the $174.35 payment, which was due on his vehicle.

"I didn't have cash, so I took about an ounce and a quarter of gold I had scopped out of the river," Roloff said.

"In Nevada City (Calif.), we used gold to buy groceries and gasoline."

"The man was nice about it, but told me he didn't know the value of gold. I told him currency is based on gold, and the paper dollars he wanted would bring 41 cents each. He said 'That's right, but I can exchange them easily.' "

Roloff contacted state officials and received only limited support.

State commerce director Mike Melner said "gold coins may be legal tender, but not raw gold."

"The point here is that the agreement was that payment would be made in dollars, and dollars are something different from raw gold," Melner said.

WASHINGTON — Judge John Sirica, in an opinion written at his home where he is recuperating from a massive heart attack, has refused to grant a new trial to former White House chief of staff H. R. Haldeman.

Haldeman, sentenced to a prison term of 30 months to eight years for his role in the Watergate cover-up, had argued that he should be given the new trial because of improper contacts between members of the sequestered jury in his case and unauthorized third parties.

Male Nurse In Scuffle

VANCOUVER (CP) — A male nurse has been disciplined for the way he handled a male patient in a scuffle that occurred at Riverview Hospital in Coquitlam March 21, Dr. William Macfarlane, the hospital's acting executive director, disclosed Monday.

Dr. Macfarlane, who would not identify the nurse or outline the penalty imposed in the disciplinary action, said he had reached a decision after carrying out a full investigation into the incident.

Dr. Macfarlane said the evidence indicated the patient "initiated the attack on the nurse" and an "altercation" followed when the nurse took action to restrain the patient.

Race with Death Lost

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A dying policeman who fought a long and desperate struggle to provide a pension for his wife and four children has lost — by 16 days.

Officer John Orlando, 38, died of leukemia Monday, 16 days before he could qualify for a one-third salary death benefit by serving 10 years.

Orlando remained on duty even though his head was hairless because of chemotherapy treatments and his uniform hung loosely on his six-foot frame.

His last shift was Saturday night, keeping order among fun-seekers and tourists crowding Fisherman's Wharf. Orlando went home vomiting. The next morning he went to hospital where he died.

Fellow officers had attempted to pool their sick benefits, each officer donating a day to Orlando's credit, but the retirement board ruled such pooling was illegal.

"He dragged himself to work each day," said officer Mike Hebel. "It was a valiant effort."

Instead of the one-third salary, Orlando's wife Vera and their children, Ana Marie, 13, Christine, 12, Mike, 11, and Paul, 7, were entitled to a death benefit of only $1,000.

Old Rivalries Now Forgotten

LONDON—John Diefenbaker and High Commissioner Paul Martin, old political rivals, entertained guests at a formal dinner Tuesday night with a bit of friendly banter.

Diefenbaker, 80, is here to make a speech today before the Canada-United Kingdom Chamber of Commerce and to receive the insignia of Companion of Honor from the Queen Thursday.

At the dinner, in the high commissioner's Mayfair residence, Martin recalled the days when he and Diefenbaker had contested with each other across the floor of the House of Commons.

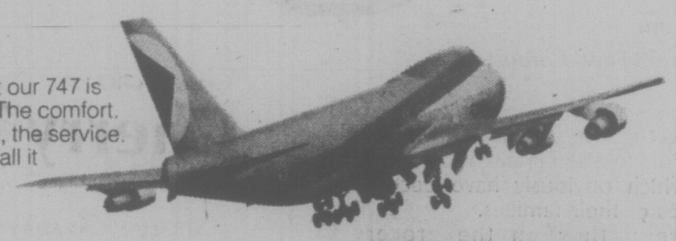

Diefenbaker, in turn, said that when he was Conservative prime minister, Martin a Liberal member whose constituency included Windsor, Ont., was the shadow agriculture minister.

"Paul was the only farmer from Ouellet Street in Windsor who aspired to be a minister of agriculture," Diefenbaker said.

Before The Judge

Two Victoria area men charged jointly Tuesday in Victoria provincial court with possession of a shotgun for a purpose dangerous to the public peace were remanded to today for possible choice by Judge William Ostler of a trial date.

John Glendon Flett, 25, address not known, chose trial in provincial court and pleaded not guilty while Frank Woodrow Richards, 29, of 523 Rithet, deferred his choice and plea until today. Flett also pleaded not guilty to a two-count Firearms Act charge of possession of a loaded firearm in a vehicle and failure to produce a permit.

★ ★ ★

Prosecutor Peter Birkett told Ostler that bail hearings could not be held because, he said, both men had been on parole and proceedings to revoke their paroles had begun. That issue also was put over until today.

(Police said two men were arrested at 2 a.m. Tuesday on a parking lot near 2852 Douglas and a weapon, shells and other items were seized.)

★ ★ ★

Prosecutor Nicholas Lang entered a stay of proceedings on a joint Saanich charge of armed robbery against Victoria area residents Kenneth Charles Moran, 27, and Brian Hamilton Watson, 27, both address not known, and Penny Margarite Moran, 25, of 2634 Millstream.

The charge had been laid after a $677 holdup Sept. 21, 1975, at Capital Super Foods Ltd., 5121 Cordova Bay Road, in which a shotgun was seen by store staff. A preliminary hearing had been set for June 1.

"I am satisfied at the present time that they (the charge) should not proceed," Lang told Ostler.

Court time June 29, July 8 and 9 and Aug. 3 was set aside for preliminary hearings and trials resulting from narcotics charges against three persons.

Blair Gordon Birch, 27, of 889 Cloverdale, and Jack Leon Case, 34, of 914 Inverness, are charged jointly with trafficking in marijuana March 11 in Saanich. Birch and Steven James Glover, 23, of 1495 Fort, are charged jointly with trafficking in marijuana March 22 in Saanich.

Case is charged alone with trafficking in marijuana March 22 in Saanich and possession of marijuana at the same time for the purpose of trafficking. Birch and Glover are charged separately with possession of marijuana March 22 in Saanich. All are on bail until the hearings.

Anthony David Lowe, 23, of 360 Gorge, was fined a total of $300 by Ostler following a plea of guilty to a six-count Unemployment Insurance Act charge of making false statements in 1974 in claiming benefits.

Prosecutor Malcolm McMicken said Lowe claimed he did not work March 17 through June 18 when he actually worked every second week. The overpayment was $420.

Defence lawyer Kenneth Walton said Lowe is now on unemployment insurance again, receiving $212 every two weeks — but $152 is being taken off every second cheque until the $420 is repaid. Ostler allowed Lowe to pay the $300 fine at a rate of $25 a month starting April 15.

Ostler refused bail for Jack Wayne Rouault, 19, of 1023 Esquimalt, one of three persons facing a joint charge of armed robbery of $160 one week ago tonight from an employee of Mac's Convenience Store, 3624 Shelbourne, Saanich.

The order also applies to a charge of theft of about $135 the same night from Brownies Recipe Fried Chicken, 1205 Esquimalt, against Rouault and a second person already out on $1000 bail. The third person named in the Saanich charge is to have a bail hearing Friday.

★ ★ ★

Bail was also rejected by Ostler for George Alex Charlie, 22, address not known, on a Victoria charge of a break-in with intent Saturday at Evelyn's Cafe, 788 Yates. He chose trial in provincial court, pleaded not guilty and had his trial set for April 20.

Drink-and-drive fines Tuesday:

Harold Deane Jamison, 50, of 3907 Raymond South, fined $385 after pleading guilty to a Victoria charge of impaired driving Nov. 28, 1975; Lorne Oliver Tyre, 28, Port Moody, fined $250 after pleading guilty to a Sidney charge of driving Nov. 11, 1975, with a breath-analysis reading of more than .08 per cent, and Peter Sparks, 40, of 10217 Bowerbank in Sidney, fined $325 after being found guilty of impaired driving in Sidney Nov. 7, 1975.

CAREER SALES TRAINING

Recent changes in market conditions demand a professional approach to the selling of real estate. Tight money trends can limit sales for those who lack the tools of the progressive real estate company. Block Bros., western Canada's largest realtor, will train you in modern professional marketing methods that are a proven success.

Management opportunities arise from time to time within the company and the training offered to our staff is an asset competing for those positions.

If real estate is your career, our training methods can assist you in reaching your goal.

Telling the Daffs from Tulips

The spectacular display of spring flowering bulbs continues for weeks with a bewildering assortment seen only in milder coastal climates.

Approaching spring bulbs as we did the early tulips (Monday Times, March 29), through the eyes of newcomers to this area, we note even the daffodils look different than expected.

Those depicted and written about by artists and poets of the 1800's had a certain airy fairy golden look about them quite different from the majority we are likely to see in modern gardens.

We believed the trumpet daffodil to be known by sight at least by all who live in the northern hemisphere, yet this is not necessarily true as came to my attention when a visitor from Northern Saskatchewan asked me about "these yellow lilies."

I thought it was a joke but soon found the question to be deadly serious. The man had never in his life seen a daffodil.

Not only are there yellow trumpet daffodils of all sizes up to five inches in diameter, but pure white ones even larger ("Broughshane" measures five and a half inches across).

Others may have a bright yellow trumpet backed by a pure white perianth; or be a pale sulphur yellow throughout.

Turning to other daffodils perhaps we should first say that all kinds belong in the plant genus called Narcissus which is divided into 10 sections according to their general habits.

Those having large spreading cups in place of trumpets are even more beautiful, and again may be either shades of lemon and yellow with white, or bright orange perianth with intensely scarlet cups.

In this section of large cupped narcissi was found the first pink daffodil, one having a slender shell-pink trumpet. I have felt this should have remained in the first section with the trumpets but professional daffodil classifiers decided otherwise.

Small cupped varieties are in still another section; they are smaller in their parts but some have intense orange and orange-red cups.

Next comes a section with double flowers.

These may be all yellow or all white; or yellow with much fiery orange doubling or white with orange doubled centres.

Several divisions of Narcissus are devoted to those with more than one flower to a stem, usually opening more or less at the same time. Many are of good size, making a fine display with up to six flowers on a stem.

Colors follow the normal range from white to orange, with bright red confined to edges or rims.

During the last 20 years have come hybridizing breaks to give the best shades of pink yet.

Still it has been confined to the trumpets of such varieties as "Roseworthy" and "Troubador".

These pink daffodils trace their parentage to the old "Pheasant Eye," pure white with a flat fiery red eye for a crown. This has been known as Poet's Narcissus, botanically Narcissus poeticus.

Seldom seen except in early spring shows are so-called orchid flowered or Collarette types and split-cup types. These are of great interest to newcomers not familiar with development along daffodil breeding lines.

It is to be hoped that some of these fine varieties will be seen this year.

Among daffodils as among tulips, a number of shorter stemmed and smaller flowered species are seen during the season. These begin to show in February, and some of the latest are still with us at the end of April.

Regular narcissus coloring of yellow and pure white is found spread throughout the species.

With use expanding to planters and tubs on balconies, sundecks and patios, these spring flowers — daffodils and tulips — with their beginnings in centuries far back have a place in today's and tommorrow's world.

'Devil at Work' –Was It LSD?

WASHINGTON (WP) — A new study of the 1692 Salem witchcraft scare has concluded that those who saw "the devil at work" in the colonial Massachusetts village might have been on an LSD trip caused by contamination of their daily bread

That's the theory developed by Linda Caporael, a graduate student in psychology from the University of California at Santa Barbara, and outlined by her in the April issue of Science magazine.

In her view, the villagers who swore to seeing "diabolical deeds and distempers" — testimony that caused 20 of their neighbors to be executed — might have been under the influence of a fungus parasite that scientists call Claviceps ("club-headed") purpura ("purple").

Its short name is ergot, and it can infect grains such as rye and some strains of wheat. Within the purple cockpsurs of the ergot fungus are several almaloid drugs, including one called ergotamine.

If ergotamine is accidentally baked in an oven with dough, it is transformed into lysergic acid diethylamine, the hallucinogen commonly called LSD. In fact, the Swiss scientist who discovered and purified LSD in 1943 used as his raw material the ergot fungus.

Caporael thinks that what happened in Salem in 1692 might well have been an outbreak of ergotism (long-term ergot poisoning) caused by the fungus infecting the rye grown by Salem viallagers and milled by them into flour.

She is not without precedent for her theory. There have been several recorded cases of villages in Europe suffering mass outbreaks of hysteria, and many scientists believe that some were due to ergot poisoning. Once ergotism possibly changed the course of European history.

That was in 1722 when Peter the Great of Russia marshalled his Cossack armies on the Volga delta to sweep through the Causasus and drive the Ottoman Turks out of Europe. But, on the plains of Astrakhan in cenral Russia, an outbreak of ergotism — from infected rye flour supplied to the troops — paralyzed his armies with hallucinations and muscular convulsions, and resulted in approximately 20,000 deaths.

James Trager, in his book, "The Great Grain Robbery," claims that Soviet fear of ergotism caused them to refuse in 1972 to buy American spring wheat, because it is susceptible to ergot infestation. Instead, they insisted on purchasing far more expensive winter wheat, which is more resistant to ergot.

In applying the ergot-poisoning theory to Salem, Caporael relies primarily on circumstantial evidence. She begins by noting all the other explanations for the events that began when a group of young girls apparently became "bewitched," leading to the infamous "witch hunt" round of accusations, trials and mass executions (19 by hanging and one with the victim being pressed to death between stones).

Caporael rejects the various explanatins — ranging from simple fraud through allegations of political motives to mass hysteria — as inadequate. She then discusses the possibility of a physiological reason and concludes that, if that were the case, ergotism seems the most plausible answer.

To buttress her theory, she notes that the growing conditions for rye in the Salem area were of the type in which the ergot fungus flourishes, that early colonists reported that rye used for forage made cattle ill with unknown diseases and that several of the "bewitched" villagers owned or lived in proximity to growing fields, where the likelihood of fungus contamination was most acute.

Caporael's most intriguing piece of evidence is her assertion that the accusations of witchcraft broke out in earnest after a Barbados slave named Tituba was asked to concoct a "witch cake" to determine whether sinister forces were present in the neighborhood.

The cake was made from rye meal and the urine of the afflicted girls, and Caporael writes: "This concoction was fed to a dog, ostensibly in the belief that the dog's subsequent behavior would indicate the action of any malefic magic."

"The fate of the dog is unknown," she continues. "It is quite plausible that it did have convulsions, indicating to the observers that there was witchcraft involved in the girls' afflictions. Thus, the experiments with the witch cake initiated succeeding events . . . until the making of the cake, there was no suspicion of witchcraft and no reports of torturing apparitions."

"From these details," Caporael concludes, "a picture emerges of a community stricken with an unrecognized physiological disorder affecting their minds as well as their bodies . . . without knowledge of ergotism and confronted by convulsions, mental disturbances, and perceptual distortions, the New England puritans seized upon witchcraft as the best explanation for the phenomena."

Lost Boat Crew Gives Wrong Site

Wrong directions given by the crew of a fishboat that ran aground Tuesday in the Alert Bay area resulted in "a bit of a schmozzle", a Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre spokesman said today.

He said the 38-foot Ocean Rambler radioed a distress message at 5 p.m. saying she had run aground in Chatham Channel 10 miles off Minstrel Island.

Rescue facilities were despatched to search the area.

At 6:25 another fishing vessel, the Laugh Two, raidoed she had spotted the Ocean Rambler aground at the east end of Village Island, seven miles on the other side of Minstrel Island.

The Laugh Two sent a and helped the grounded vesandhelped the grounded vessel off the rocks.

Ont. Liberals Support Tories

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Liberal Leader Stuart Smith ended weeks of election speculation Tuesday by announcing his party will support the provincial Conservative government to defeat an NDP non-confidence motion.

The legislature will vote Monday on an NDP amendment to the throne speech and a Liberal sub-amendment. If both amendments were passed, the government would fall.

Red Cross to Help

VANCOUVER (CP) — Judge Darrell Jones, president of the British Columbia-Yukon division of the Canadian Red Cross, said Tuesday the division has offered its services to Health Minister Bob McClelland to help in the immunization program against swine flu.

Builders Making Profits As Olympic Costs Soar

MONTREAL (CP) — Although every aspect of the construction of the main Olympic stadium has surpassed its original budget, not one contractor working on the $600 million structure will lose money, The Star said in a copyright story today.

The contractors will not lose money, The Star said, because the City of Montreal, which signed most contracts for stadium construction, protected the builders with an assortment of escape hatches and guarantees.

The general contractor for the project, Desourdy Duranceau Entreprises Conjoint, has alrtady spent $160 million despite having signed to do the job for half that figure.

But above costs, the $9 million fee, or honorarium, to be given the consortium under the contract's terms, is secure. In addition, the contractors are expected to request extra fees to compensate for increased spending.

The Star story was the fourth in a five-part series on Olympic spending and organization compiled by reporters Claude Adams and Josh Freed. They said other contracts were awarded with a similar philosophy.

Schokbeton Quebec, Inc., a pre-cast concrete maker, was contracted to manufacture all elements of the 34 stadium arches, as well as pillars, and parts of the technical ring circling the sructure.

The contract for that job was for $16 million, but the cost has increased to $42 million.

The job was so large that the city had to pay Schokbeton $600,000 to build a new factory and equip it with special molds. In addition, Montreal agreed to pay the annual salaries of the firm's two ranking executives ($85,000), reimburse all labor, material and transportation costs, and further pay a $5,000 bonus for each day ahead of schedule the project is completed.

A great deal of the $26 million over-run of the Schokbeton job can be attributed to miscalculation. For work not specified in the original contract, Schokbeton stands to collect another $100,000 in fees and president Fernand Bibeau says it is making additional claims because of unforeseen and uncontrollable delays.

The contract for electrical work at the Viau St. parking lot and main heating plant was awarded to Arno Electrique, Ltee., for $2.8 million after it reduced its original $3.5 million bid.

But six months later another $1.5 million was added to the contract.

Some other contracts were awarded on a unit price basis, in which the contractor puts his men at the disposal of Desourdy-Duranceau on a per-hour basis, with a profit margin included.

For example, a welding contract was given to Camil Poulin, Inc., for $700,000. A year later, the price tag increased to more than $3.2 million.

Other contracts outlined by The Star include the hiring of Vibrek, Inc., of Quebec City, to manufacture much of the precast concrete used at the site.

Four months after a $2.4 million contract was signed, Vibrek asked for an extra $1.8 million saying that virtually every cost esimate had been wrong.

Sicotte Ltee. won a $3.4 million concrete erection job without tenders. Today, the project cost has increased by 100 per cent.

Ready to Go Steady? –Not at 14 or 15

TORONTO (CP) — The reasons why pregnant women turn to Rosalie Hall have changed since 1959, says Sister Marguerite Tremblay, 44, who retires next month from her position as executive director of the Roman Catholic maternity home.

"Discretion was the reason 17 years ago," said Sister Tremblay, who plans to return to her community of Misericordia Sisters in Montreal. The girls "didn't want to be seen in their community or they didn't want their parents to know."

Now they are comfortable leaving the home and often are less worried than their parents, said Sister Tremblay, who has helped 2,200 women through their pregnancies since she took charge of the home in 1959.

The 31 women now in the home came there because it provides medical treatment, prenatal care, schooling and "a shoulder to cry on."

"The girls need somebody to accept them at the moment," she said. Staff at the home encourage the residents "to grow through this experience, not to take it too negatively."

Sister Tremblay criticized parents for allowing their daughters to go steady when they are too young. "A girl of 14 or 15 is not ready to go steady."

Routine Check Bares Juvenile Theft Ring

A routine police check of two teen-aged boys in Victoria West Sunday has turned into a major investigation involving a rash of thefts and break-ins.

The Victoria police detective division said Tuesday charges have been laid or are planned against two adults, both young men, and 11 juvenile boys. The bulk of the charges include break-in and theft, theft or possession of known stolen property.

Inspector Norman Bath estimated investigators have checked back on more than 100 crimes since mid-1975 with total value of items taken in those offences estimated at $10,000.

Warrants were obtained to search nine or 10 homes in Greater Victoria and many items have already been seized and taken to the Victoria and Esquimalt police departments for storage.

Another police spokesman said a complete list of persons arrested and charges will not be ready until Thursday or Friday.

"We're getting snowed under with paper," he said.

Two Victoria uniform policemen were driving through Victoria West on routine patrol at 4 a.m. Sunday when they saw two teen-aged boys bicycling and stopped to make a routine check.

The boys saw the constables and fled on foot. As they ran chocolate bars and cigarette packages which filled their pockets began to fall out and the boys tried to pick them up but were caught.

Questioning began later Sunday and the investigation grew until police were talking to dozens of adults and juveniles and checking their crime books back to last summer in Victoria, Esquimalt and even Kelowna.

One adult has been charged in Victoria provincial court with two break-in counts, released on bail and remanded to next week for further hearing. Four boys also have been charged in juvenile court.

Bath said stolen items recovered include building materials, food, automotive supplies, bicycle parts, coins, jewelry, stereo equipment, radios "and tape decks by the thousands."

The detective said investigators had found one young person involved in the case "redid his bedroom" with stolen lumber.

INMATES HAVE STAKE IN FOREST GROWTH

Jordan River minimum security detention centre inmates are doing their bit for the future growth of trees on southern Vancouver Island.

They're cutting cedar stakes for the provincial forest service.

The stakes are used for marking trees and carrying out survival studies on newly planted trees on crown land.

The program, which started a week ago, involves bucking and splitting cedar logs in a logged over area about 11½ miles west of the camp.

The cedar bolts are transported back to the camp where other inmates armed with froes and mallets produce the stakes which are then strapped into bundles.

So far the inmates have filled one order of 200 six-foot long stakes and are working on two other orders, one for 24,000 four-foot-long stakes and the other for 16,000 18-inch-long stakes.

Inmates have tackled the task with enthusiasm, a spokesman said.

Daily production is running about 2,000 stakes.

Between 12 to 16 inmates are involved in the work program. And for their labor they're receiving some remuneration — the normal jail pay which ranges from a low of 50 cents a day to a high of $1.50.

Special Care Classes

There are jobs available for women and men trained to work with the handicapped but a Camosun College course which trains them isn't filled up, its instructor says.

Charlotte March, program co-ordinator and instructor for the special care aide program, said there are still openings in the class which starts April 26.

The 12-month course costs about $375 and March said graduates earn a certificate recognized across Canada.

Field work at Glendale Hospital for the severely handicapped as well as at special community schools, clinics and sheltered workshops makes up a large part of the course.

The program emphasizes helping the handicapped to develop their full potential, she said.

First class started last August and has about 25 students.

"There are definitely not enough people with this sort of training. There are jobs to be had," said March.

Aides starting work at Glendale would earn about $923 a month. Starting wages at some community facilities would be about half that, she said.

"Get those things that really count, just say charge it on your Eaton's Account."

It happens every spring. Lots of new things you really need to buy. Important things for you and your family. The kind of things that just won't wait. But as so often happens, when your need is great, your cash is short.

And that's when we at Eaton's invite you to take full advantage of all the convenient credit privileges of your Eaton's Account.

Large amounts. Small amounts. His amounts. Or her amounts. Now is the time to get those things that really count, so just say charge it on your Eaton's Account.

Shop in person or by phone. With goods satisfactory or your money refunded.

If you don't have an Eaton's Account just fill out, cut out and mail the handy coupon and we'll send you all the details so you can just say charge it on your Eaton's Account.

Instant Shelter in a Suitcase

By AB KENT
Times Staff

When Dick Herlinveaux and his mates drop into a new Arctic research site by plane or helicopter, before they do anything but wave goodbye to their pilot they unpack their suitcase.

Their "Suitcase" is the latest thing in accommodation for the frozen sea, a $4,000 collapsible shelter designed by Environment Canada marine sciences people to suit their special needs while living on the ice during research projects.

The men jump out of the aircraft, unload their 220-pound shelter, which is only about one foot thick when folded, and raise it just enough to crawl inside.

Once there they push up the rest of the structure without being buffetted by the ever-blowing wind until it assumes its full 8-foot square dimensions, with nearly seven feet of headroom.

In three or four minutes they have cover.

Within a few more minutes they have attached an asbestos chimney shield and lighted their kerosene heater to provide a warm environment before they have lost much body heat in the frequently sub-zero clime.

Then they may take a more leisurely approach to setting up the rest of their camp and equipment.

Herlinveaux calls it "instant shelter. The helicopter can leave right away and you don't have to run around looking for poles."

Ice camps have relied on tents, some of the conventional kind and some designed for the far north, but all requiring some kind of separate support system such as poles or metal rods.

The suitcase has telescoping aluminum supports at each corner which remain in place at all times. They hold up a nylon outer shell, insulating batt and inner moisture barrier. There is also an insulated, built-in fibreglass floor.

The suitcase, made in Victoria by Case Existological Labs, is an evolution of six or seven types of tent shelter used by Arctic researchers over the last 15 years.

Because it is panelized it is easier to patch when damaged and is expected to be more resistant to polar bears.

"Polar bears love tents," Herlinveaux said.

A scavenging bear can make short shrift of tent fabric, as scientists and technicians have learned.

He recalls one experience:

"A bear bit into one of our tents, but fortunately he happened to hit an aluminum pole. The guys in the other tent saw the bear sort of feeling his mouth as if to say, 'boy, what did I hit?'." At that point the bear left.

Two suitcases can be joined together by a zipped-in vestibule, allowing one to be used for living quarters, the other for instruments and equipment, some of which may be put to use without going outside.

Shelters have a floor trap that may be opened to expose a patch of ice. The crew then drills and chops its way through the ice to lower their oceanographic meters into the sea below.

Tents are a practical red or other dark color on the exterior in order to take advantage of solar radiation which they absorb to help heat the interior. Inside, they are easy to clean because of their smooth walls.

They were used last season in three Arctic camps and two remain, one in Hudson Bay and one at Resolute.

Handmaiden to the suitcase is a portable kitchen, consisting of an aluminum box that unfolds from a compact 2x3x1½ feet to reveal enough cooking and mess gear for four men. They cook with two-burner oil-fired Primus stoves.

Herlinveaux is an oceanographer who has been visiting the Canadian Arctic since 1949 an is still fascinated by that hostile environment.

"I find it's getting harder each year," he said.

"The first year I went I knew everything. The more I go back, the less I know."

For example, the party last year camped on what it thought to be secure sea ice. Later it was discovered they were moving at a rate of up to 12 miles a day.

"Sometimes I get tired of sleeping on the hard ice. But then I find the young fellows are complaining of the same thing," Herlinveaux said, admitting he's ready to return for the next tour of field duty.

DEMONSTRATING THE LATEST in Arctic shelter, Dick Herlinveaux and his fellow northern visitors now rely on a 220-pound collapsible shelter for protection. The eight-foot square, seven-foot-high structure folds into a one-foot thick "suitcase" as Herlinveaux demonstrates below. (Bill Halkett photos)

YOUTH IGNORING MISSIONARY WORK

OTTAWA (CP) — Today's youth may be too wrapped up in the finer things of life to consider missionary work in Third World nations, a medical missionary from Asia said here.

Dr. James Pedley, an Anglican, said today's young people are unwilling to meet the challenge of missionary work.

"The need is urgent," he said, "There are more than 15 million leprosy victims in the world and 12 million receive no treatment."

While in China in 1935, Dr. Pedley began his medical work with lepers. He then joined the Leprosy Mission in India. After Nepal began welcoming Christian medical teams, Dr. Pedley opened up a program in that country.

Despite the enormity of the problem, Dr. Pedley says, not enough is being done to bring leprosy under control. The effort and money spent on research and treatment was minimal compared with the work being done on cancer.

"I wish to see the day when a vaccine is discovered that will prevent the disease," Dr. Pedley said. "It may be possible to control leprosy within the next 25 years if that were true."

He said he believes education is the key to the problem. Many people don't realize that leprosy can be cured if treated early enough, he said.

Computers Forecast Efficient Designs

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — In the near future, builders will be able to sit down at a screen and construct a home with electrons before getting out the hammer and nails.

Cornell University researchers say their computerized designing system will tell the builder which are the most efficient and economical materials to use to meet the heat requirements of a particular type of house in a particular section of the country.

"Through computerized simulation, energy-use calculations take into consideration such factors as outside temperatures, the location of the house in relation to prevailing winds and sun, house shapes and even the composition of standard building materials including windows and doors," a Cornell spokesman said in a news release.

For existing homes, the device can be used to demonstrate methods of conserving energy.

"The methods are so sophisticated that it is possible within a matter of minutes to tell a homeowner how much energy his house will consume during a party next New Year's Eve and how much energy will be saved by lowering the thermostat settings," the spokesman said. The device would even take into consideration such minute details as the number of persons as sources of heat in the structure.

The system was developed under the direction of Donald Greenberg of the university's program of computer graphics.

Using basic graphics technology developed at Cornell's laboratory, Greenberg and his fellow-workers are able to recreate the design of an existing building or planned structure in a matter of minutes on a cathode-ray tube.

Indian Leaders Praise Native RCMP Constable

HIGH PRAIRIE, Alta. (CP) — Indian elders cried for joy when they saw Constable Bill Bellrose.

While the response to Alberta's eight native RCMP officers hasn't always been that overwhelming, the three in northern Alberta all report smooth sailing after two months on the job.

"The older people seem so proud because I'm a policeman," said Constable Bellrose of the High Prairie detachment, 175 miles northwest of Edmonton. He spends most of his working day on the area's two reserves, Sucker Creek and Whitefish Lake.

"I have the confidence now," said the 32-year-old probationary constable. "I think I'll make it all the way."

Constable Peter Willier, stationed in Slave Lake, hasn't made it to a reserve yet aside from the tiny one inside the limits of the town, 150 miles north of Edmonton. He is doing what he describes as "just routine police work" and has been treated "like any other constable" so far.

A welder and heavy-equipment operator before joining the RCMP, Constable Willier said the natives he has met in Slave Lake are surprised when someone in uniform comes up to them and speaks Cree.

"They're co-operating, at least to my way of thinking. Once I start Cree, they open up."

John Cardinal of the RCMP's St. Paul detachment finds police work exciting. "I was a book-keeper before . . . that's not too exciting."

Constable Cardinal spends most of his time on neighboring reserves, such as Saddle Lake and Kehewin, usually investigating wilful damage and assault cases "and of course anything to do with liquor."

"If they see I'm here, they know they have to tell the truth."

Patrolling on a reserve with a white officer, Constable Cardinal said procedure is for him to enter a home first and address the occupants in Cree, then let his partner in.

"It scares a lot of people to see a police officer . . . but they're getting used to me. People are more at ease."

The three constables, along with five more posted in southern Alberta, graduated from the RCMP training depot in Regina in December and are on six-month probation.

Quake in Turkey

ANKARA (Reuter) — At least seven persons were injured and hundreds of sheep and cattle killed in an earthquake in the eastern Turkish province of Bingol, Turkish Radio reported Tuesday. Reports of the earthquake, which had its epicentre in the small town of Karlikova, were delayed for two days because of communications problems, the broadcast said.

Parks, Boulevards Budget Cut By Council's Snipping Shears

City Scales Win Short Reprieve

After duly weighing the matter, Victoria city council decided Tuesday not to close down its public weigh scales on Store Street for at least three months.

Council's earlier decision had been to cease permitting public use of the scales effective April 1, because the equipment requires expensive upgrading to comply with weights and measures regulations, and the operation loses money.

But this week two local firms requested an extension of the closure date.

Allan Paper Stock Co. Ltd. pointed out that the company plans to have its own scales, but will need about three months to bring them into operation.

Stockers' warehouse claimed closure of the city scales at short notice would have a serious effect on the moving industry in Victoria, and asked for a deferral until alternative equipment is available.

The firm's letter said the weigh scales operated by the provincial department of transport and communications on the Patricia Bay Highway near Elk Lake can't be considered an alternative, because of the distance involved.

Victoria is the only B.C. municipality which still operates public weigh scales, which the city uses for weighing gravel and garbage.

If Victoria's park lawns and boulevards look more shaggy and less green this summer, and there seem to be fewer flowers around, don't blame the city's parks department.

It all boils down to a shortage of cash for lawn mowing, planting and regular maintenance.

When he appeared before city council in caucus Tuesday, parks administrator Cliff Bate dolefully intoned a long series of expenditure cuts which saw his 1976 operating budget trimmed back from $1.97 million to $1.76 million.

Also cut by nearly one-third was a $160,000 capital budget item for various parks programs and improvements.

All the savings had been effected before council even glimpsed the 12-page document, as a result of several budget scrutiny sessions by Bate and parks committee chairman Ald. Ron McKenzie.

The $1,768,598 approved for this year's operating expenses represents an increase of $339,729 or nearly one and a half mills over last year's actual expenditures, which were based on nine months' operation due to the civic strike-lockout.

The obviously unhappy administrator pointed out that the economies will mean a general cut-back in parks maintenance of about 10 per cent.

But Ald. Alf Hood said with more than 72 per cent of the total budget swallowed up in salaries and wages there was no option but to reduce the level of service "and the public has to accept that."

Bate said there will have to be reduced grass cutting, less summer watering, a reduction of about one-quarter in the Beacon Hill Park flower beds, various economies in maintenance on downtown malls and squares and only minimal attention to six park areas.

However, a report to council from McKenzie claimed that the level of maintenance in the city's parks has been "above average" compared with other cities, and the alderman said a 10 per cent reduction could be accomplished without affecting Victoria's aesthetic appeal as a garden city.

Council was told the cuts will mean reducing the permanent parks staff by four or five employees — partially through attrition — and non-hiring of eight seasonal employees.

On a general budget theme, Ald. Bob Wright told council he believes it's not adopting a proper philosophical approach to budgeting, relying as it does on "line by line" scrutiny of proposals advanced by department heads.

Instead, he suggested, officials should be told they could have only "last year's money plus 10 per cent," and it would then be up to them to recommend to council how individual budgets could conform.

But Ald. Murray Glazier considered that argument "simplistic."

"It's like putting the mice in charge of the cheese," he said. "If you put this proposition to the bureaucracy, that it has only a finite amount of money to spend, the bureaucracy would tend to maintain itself if not expand, meanwhile cutting back services."

He said council ran into that problem last week when it tried to cut back on the city's general administrative expenditures, in which staff salaries were the major component.

Slogan Shelters Coming

A Victoria sign company hopes to combine profitable advertising with a form of public service, by installing a number of slogan-bearing bus shelters in various parts of downtwon Victoria.

Wilf Fraser of Seaboard Advertising said Tuesday the idea is already being tried out in Vancouver, and he intends to approach Victoria city council with a similar proposal.

But before contacting the city he is awaiting approval from the management of the Mayfair shopping centre to build a demonstration bus shelter there.

IS PURCHASING CLIPPING CITY?

A Victoria alderman questioned Tuesday whether the city's seven-person purchasing department is overstaffed.

Ald. Ron McKenzie told council's caucus meeting that the size of the department, which buys all the city's needs from paper clips to heavy equipment, doesn't seem to be justified by the volume of goods actually purchased.

A report from purchasing agent Harry Robinson stated the department each year handles about 4,000 requisitions, 5,500 purchase orders, 450 quotations and tenders and 12,500 invoices to a total value of about $3.5 million.

McKenzie noted this produces a buying volume per person of $500,000.

By contrast, he said, the provincial government's purchasing commission in 1974 handled purchase orders to a total value of $127.7 million. With 65 employees directly involved in the purchasing function, this meant an average volume per person of close to $2 million.

City manager Jim Bramley pointed out that the provincial agency deals in much greater volumes of buying, whereas the same effort is required whether 100 or 10,000 items of a particular type are being purchased.

"I am satisifed the department is more than grainfully employed and does an excellent job," he assured aldermen.

Two Islanders Die in Traffic

A 32-year-old Colwood man was one of two people killed in Island traffic accidents Tuesday.

Sooke RCMP said James Wayne Lott, of 565 Heatherly, was pinned behind the steering-wheel of his car and died almost instantly when his car crashed head-on into a tree on Sooke Road just west of Manzer Road.

A police spokesman said Lott, who was alone in the car, was apparently westbound into Sooke at the time of the accident which was reported to police by a passing motorist at 11:58 p.m.

The fatality was the second in Sooke this year. On Jan. 22 Gurnam Singh Basi died when his car left the road near the sawmill west of Sooke and struck a power pole.

In Nanaimo, a 60-year-old Vancouver woman was killed Tuesday in the city's fifth traffic fatality of the year.

Police said Elizabeth Margaret Thompson of Vancouver died when the car in which she was riding was in collision with another car driven by Kenneth Wright of Nanaimo.

Wright and the driver of the other car, Margaret Caldwell of Port Hardy, Mrs. Thompson's daughter, were treated in hospital for minor injuries.

Metchosin Fish Dump Outrageous: Campbell

The dumping of several tons of herring by a Victoria fish processing company was an outrageous act, says the chariman of the Capital Region District.

Jim Campbell says that Oakland Industries had approached the board two weeks ago to ask permission to have the Hartland Road dump kept open weekends to allow the company to dispose of unwanted herring carcasses.

But, Campbell said, the board flatly turned down the request.

He said he had heard no more from the company and thought it has resolved its problem.

He was surprised, he said, to learn the company had taken the fish carcasses to property of its own off Bennett Road in Happy Valley and then dumped them in a 20-foot pit.

"I am surprised because some of the packers have been shipping the whole herring to U.S. processors.

"It sems to me there should be no need for such waste."

Of the 87,000 tons of roughly 870 million herring expected to be caught this year — the largest catch since the herring season reopened in 1972 — less than 15 per cent of the total is used for human consumption. Herring roe will account for about 8,700 tons and finds a ready market in Japan which pays $3,600 a ton for the delicacy. Only a fraction of the milt is sold to European epicureans, and some of the herring is cut into fillets for the herring pickling trade.

The bulk, however, is rendered into fish meal, poor in quality because the herring once caught is stored in a briny solution to firm up the roe.

Larry Duke, federal fisheries inspection officer in Victoria said there was nothing illegal in what Oakland did and called it an isolated case. There have been no other reports of dumping this season.

He said the fisheries department sent out a notice at the beginning of the year to all herring processors in the province instructing them not to dump herring carcasses and offal on land or at sea.

But because of the jurisdictional problems involved in the fisheries department trying to enforce what happens on land, the regulations only proscribe against dumping on, in, or near waters flowing into the sea.

"There is nothing in the regulations prohibiting land dumping per se," he said.

Duke said he could sympathize with Oakland's problems in as much as there is no reduction plant on lower Vancouver Island and it would be inordinately costly for Oakland to build one.

He noted there were only three small plants on the Island — at Crofton, Port Hardy and Tofino — and each was running to full capacity.

In addition the three major reducing plants in Greater Vancouver are plugged because of the heavy season.

Rick Boyd a biologist with the fisheries department in Vancouver said that because of the low profit margin — fish meal sells for between $200 and $300 a ton — reduction plants won't accept herring unless it is delivered to their door-steps.

The processor must bear all cost for shipment and gets little or nothing in return.

Boyd said there was a move on to try to get processors to fillet more of the herring. But even that is fraught with problems for the product is generally considered poor quality because of the high salt content and the lack of fat in the fish which is lost in the production of roe and milt.

Victoria conservationist Howard English said today there was a need to develop a greater utilization of the fish carcasses for food for humans.

He suggested the fisheries department should limit the size of the catch to the processors capacity to fillet.

'Legislation by Exhaustion' As Money Bills Under Fire

The B.C. Legislature, bogged down in debate over money, sat until early this morning as opposition members went on the attack.

The government wants to see early passage of two pieces of legislation, both of which it sees as being vital to immediate needs.

One bill allows the government to borrow up to $400 million. The other would grant the government $1.222 billion — one-third of the proposed annual budget — as interim supply while debate on spending estimates continues.

Opposition members, seeking more information, have balked at both pieces of legislation — and succeeded in tying the House in procedural knots until past 12:30 a.m. today.

The Legislature went past the normal 11 p.m. adjournment after Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy made the unusual motion of having an 11:05 p.m. sitting.

Opposition members, claiming it was a return of the former Socred government's legislation by exhaustion, debated whether the motion was in order until 12:22 a.m.

"This is the height of nonsense to debate a motion to adjourn at 11:05 when it is now 11:13," said Gary Lauk (NDP—Vancouver Centre) at one point.

Speaker Ed Smith eventually called a recess and 15 minutes later Mrs. McCarthy told the House the whips would privately discuss the procedural dispute, allowing the House to resume its normal sitting at 2 p.m. today.

Debate on legislation to borrow $400 million began early in the night sitting with Dave Stupich (NDP—Nanaimo) saying in a two-hour speech the legislation was unnecessary.

"It's a political hoax . . . it's a farce," he said. "It's political revenge against the citizens of B.C."

Premier Bill Bennett said the government needed the money before the end of the fiscal year but later told reporters the money would not be urgently needed for another two or three weeks.

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson said the government has lost control of the house, the whip system has broken down, and the government is doing everything it can to "establish its shaky authority in the house."

Opposition leader Bill King said the government was "reverting to the age of senility when all-night sessions and sessions that ran to all hours of the morning were the vogue."

He said Bennett was trying to prove he was as tough and hard-hearted as his father, former premier W. A. C. Bennett.

Stupich said almost half of the $400 million is to go to ICBC which he said doesn't need the money because it likely has twice that amount in the bank.

Opposition members delayed passage of the interim supply bill with repeated demands for information on the province's financial position.

They repeatedly asked Finance Minister Evan Wolfe what B.C.'s cash position was. The minister said the information would be given later.

Gibson said this wasn't good enough. If Wofe is fit to be finance minister, he should have such information at his fingertips.

Gibson said if the opposition was to approve the interim supply bill, it must know how much the government has in the bank.

Interim supply bills are standard procedure if the government's spending estimates for the coming fiscal year, which begins Thursday, are not approved.

The government brought down the 1976-77 budget Friday but debate on spending estimates for the individual departments won't begin for at least another week.

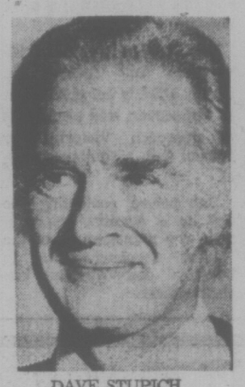

NDP members spent most of Tuesday's question period hammering at the government for an explanation of special spending warrants passed prior to the session.

A total of $145 million in aditional monies above the budget have been granted by the cabinet since the Socreds took power in December and the NDP argues that at least some of the grants were given to artificially inflate the current budget.

By granting money now, prior to the new fiscal year, the government can make the expenditures part of the old NDP budget and not have them dragging on the new budget.

Special warrants can be granted when the house is not in session and cabinet decides there is "urgent public need" for the additional money not allocated in the budget.

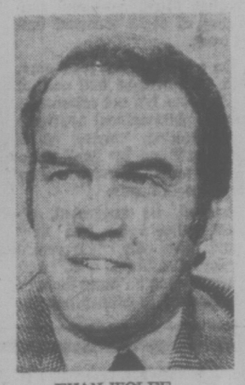

NDP asked about the urgent need for seven different warrants, totalling about $17.19 million, but got no answers.

TWO QUIT IN PROTEST

Two members of the Victoria General Hospital board, appointed by the former NDP government, have resigned in protest over health care policies of the current government.

But both Carol Pickup and Jewel Rodstrom said Tuesday they will try to win back a place on the board through elections at the annual meeting next month.

Pickup, a former registered nurse who was NDP candidate in Saanich and the Islands in the December provincial election, said she is resigning "because in all conscience I couldn't serve as a government representative under Social Credit."

She finished second behind Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis in the election.

Rodstrom, who is a licensed practical nurse, called the increased hospital charges announced in Friday's budget "deplorable" and said they will impose hardship on a lot of people.

Both Rodstrom and Pickup said they were opposed to scrapping of the B.C. Medical Centre, a concept for co-ordinating hospital development on the Lower Mainland introduced by the NDP government.

Pickup's two-year term on the hospital board as government appointee has just expired while Rodstrom's would have continued until August. It was a first term for both of them.

At the annual meeting April 29 three directors will be elected for three-year terms and it is two of these seats the women will contest.

Completing their terms are Alan Patterson, a lawyer and board vice-chairman; Hugh Gordon, teacher and treasurer of the board and professor Michael Ashwood-Smith and all are expected to seek re-election.

The 13-member board has one director appointed by the Sisters of St. Ann, two by the provincial government and nine elected by members of the Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society, three of them each year. Remaining member of the board is the chief of the hospital's medical staff.

U.K. PULLOUT COMPLETED

SINGAPORE (UPI) — Britain officially completed its military withdrawal from Singapore at sundown today, closing out 157 years of service on the strategic island.

The last British commander, Col. Jeremy Swynnerton, boarded a flight to Indonesia for a vacation before returning to England.

Mid-Summer Decision On Gabriola Terminal

The provincial government will decide by mid-summer whether to build a multi-million dollar ferry terminal on Gabriola Island to phase out use of the Nanaimo-Horsehoe Bay ferry route, Transport Minister Jack Davis said Monday.

The government is considering a plan to replace the old run with a Gabriola Island to Iona Island, on the mainland side, route which could take only about an hour, compared with the two hours necessary for the current trip.

Davis, in Nanaimo, to discuss the plans with city council, said the shorter trip is one way to cut down on ferry costs.

The plan would involve building a bridge over Dodds Narrows to Gabriola Island and the construction of a new ferry terminal there. The last estimate for the terminal, done in 1975, is $30 million, and a new terminal on Iona Island would cost about the same.

The plan was first suggested by NDP Transport Minister Bob Strachan.

Davis said the Gabriola-Iona run appears to be the most sensible solution to the outdated and too small Departure Bay facility which is creating traffic problems in Nanaimo.

"I hope by mid-summer we will know enough to tell the government which way we should go," he said.

Help on Taxes For Academy

A citizens' committee, headed by Campbell Spratt, has been formed to help the Victoria Riding Academy on Cedar Hill Crossroad solve its tax problems with Oak Bay council.

Today, the committee delivered a letter to council, outlining proposals that might help the academy operators, Don and Eileen Carley, save the academy which they have run for more than 45 years.

Spratt said the committee had earlier requested council to meet with the members and had been told to produce their recommendatons in writing.

At the March 1 council meeting an ultimatum had been given the academy to do something about tax arrears or move elsewhere.

The academy owes $10,500 in back taxes over the past two years and another $7,000 will be due in June.

At the March 1 meeting, Mayor Brian Smith said he wished the academy did not have to pay taxes but the council would be derelict in its duties it it lets the debt continue.

Council is taking steps to crack down on tax delinquents who owed a total of $140,000 at the end of 1975.

Council is also insisting that the academy make health and plumbing improvements.

Spratt said his committee's proposals will not be made public until Oak Bay council has had a chance to study them.

$20M Coke Haul

LIMA (Reuter) — Peruvian police announced Tuesday the seizure of more than 616 pounds of illegal cocaine base, capture of an airplane and the arrest of seven men in the country's biggest ever anti-drug operation. The haul was worth an estimated $20 million.

Non-Emergencies Won't Pay More

Victoria's two general hospitals have no plans to follow the lead of Surrey Memorial Hospital and jump fees for non-emergency use of their emergency departments.

Margaret Woodward, administrator of the Surrey hospital, said it will now charge $10, up from $5, for patients who use the emergency department as they would a doctor's office.

The extra charge will not apply to emergency cases, for which the provincial $2 charge remains.

Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director at Royal Jubilee Hospital, said a higher charge to people who plug up the emergency department with other than urgent problems has been considered from time to time but there are no current plans to do anything about it.

Both hospitals charge out-of-province people using the emergency department $5 plus cost of materials.

At Victoria General, assistant executive director John Murray said every effort is made to persuade people coming to the emergency department for other than an emergency to see their own doctor.

Monster in Cave Goal of Climbers

CARACAS (UPI) — Climbing a 4,500-foot rock tower towards a grisly death in the jaws of a humanoid, man-eating monster sounds more like a B movie than reality. But British explorer David Nott, just returned from an expedition to El Autana, a mysterious mountain deep in the jungles of the Orinoco, 400 miles south of this city, is not sure.

"As we climbed higher up that tower, and especially during the long nights hanging from our ropes in the dark, the man-eater didn't seem so far fetched after all," he says.

The mystery of the mountain is the unexplained cave, which pierces it from side to side, like the eye of a needle, 400 feet from the top. Geologists say it is the oldest cave in the world. What they cannot explain is its position thousands of feet above sea level.

But the Piaroa Indians who have penetrated the jungle to within sight of the mountain have no doubts about it. For them and their centuries-old legends it is the lair of a giant, vaguely human in form, which descends the walls of its fortress on stormy nights to seize and devour men and women of their tribe.

Veteran climber Nott and his companions, Steven Platt, also British, and Wilmer Perez and Carlos Reves, both Venezuelan, decided to put the legend to the test recently.

They approached the mountain by dugout canoe up four rivers, the Orinoco, the Siapo, the Autana and the Cano Manteco and then cut their way 15 miles through the jungle to the base of its north ridge. The climb to the cave took three days, and the team spent three days in it.

"Inside it is as big as a cathedral with a perfectly sculpted dome. Tunnels and galleries run from the main chambers with smoothly vaulted roofs and level floors. The rock is colored from white to rose red," Nott said.

"It is breathtaking. But we don't understand it."

And the monster? "Perhaps he was snoozing after dinner inside the mountain along a gallery we didn't discover," Nott joked.

"On the second day up there, while Perez and Reyes were mapping the cave, Platt and I traversed out along the west face and found four more openings, all at the same level. But they were blocked by roof falls and we had no equipment to deal with this. There are also more openings on the east face some distance on along the vertical wall from the big openings we had entered. Perhaps that's where he hides himself".

Asked whether there were bones up there or other remains of victims, Nott said:

"What we did find in the part of the cave system we explored was charred wood. Like an old campfire. Perhaps it was a shrub burnt by lightning, except that I don't see how lightning got in there. Scientists are testing it".

Nott intends to go back to the cave — "that's already decided. As soon as we have figured out how to get to the other openings and collect new equipment, we'll be on our way."

The cave survey by speleologist Perez will be submitted to scientists studying the formation of the Guyana Shield and the plateaus of the region in the hope they can clarify its origins.

The expedition was sponsored by Dr. Roman Rojas, director of the Venezuela Frontier Commission, and coordinated by commission staffer Daniel Genoud who discovered the approach route which had so long baffled other teams of explorers and cost the life of one of their members.

U.S. FEELS NIXON HAD LOW MORALS

NEW YORK (AFP)—A Gallup poll here found that U.S. residents feel Richard Nixon had the lowest morals of the last seven U.S. presidents. However, the poll said the same persons believed Nixon accomplished the most in foreign relations. It said they believed Franklin Delano Roosevelt was the best of the last seven presidents, found John F. Kennedy inspired the most confidence and that Dwight Eisenhower had the highest moral qualities.

MORE TO RECORDS THAN MEETS THE EAR

OTTAWA (CP) — There's more to a long-playing record than meets the ear.

First, there's the cost—an average of $20,000 to produce an album that carries 10 cuts. That price can vary, depending on the length of production time and the number of musicians used.

It is a fanancial risk, since every album finds itself in a fierce competitive market. In Ottawa alone, record dealers say about 100,000 albums are sold each month.

The hours spent recording are long and arduous. The producers, engineers, musicians and singers involved may have to repeat one tune as many as 30 times until the right musical quality is achieved.

Take the case of a 10-track album that Ottawa folk-singer Ian Tamblyn has been recording at Marc Productions here. About 150 production hours have been logged and it will be a few months yet before the tapes become discs and reach the record stores.

Negotiations for Tamblyn's first album started about a year ago. Since the singer was approached with the idea, he was luckier than most aspiring recording stars.

Usually the artist has to finance his own demonstration disc at a cost of $500 to $600. Afterwards it is up to him to hustle prospective studios and try for a contract.

But Tamblyn's good fortune was more than sheer luck. He started playing music 10 years ago in Thunder Bay, Ont., and has spent the last four years playing coffee houses in Quebec and Ontario.

A recording contract is a temptation to any musician, but Tamblyn worried about the quality of music produced in a studio. He said he was concerned that the clinical studio climate would leave his music barren.

He soon learned that "with all that intense work and equipment it's possible to do an album until it's perfect, but really, despite the tricks, it doesn't help unless you've got it to start with."

The equipment at Marc Productions, Ottawa's largest recording studio, can record up to 16 tracks on one tape. Each track is for a single instrument, a voice, a choir or any combination.

After taping, the next step is a process called mixing. This involves transferring the 16 tracks on to regular two-track stereo tape.

The finished tape is made into a grooved disc or, as is known in the trade, mastered. This disc is the base for the final product that is sold in record stores.

Blast Furnace Uses Garbage for Fuel

KITIKYUSHU, Japan (Reuter) — One of the world's largest steel makers now is extracting gas from garbage by disposing of rubbish in small blast furnaces.

Nippon Steel Corp. is getting rid of 30 tons of waste a day in 13-foot blast furnaces instead of the conventional incinerators, in experiments at its plant in southern Japan.

An oxygen-enriched fire is fed into the furnace, where it combines with carbon in the waste to reach a temperature hot enough to melt steel.

The plant is using the gas generated by the waste of fuel, and is working on a recycling system. This would cut maintenance costs and reduce the danger of pollution.

Other advantages are that materials such as glass and plastics need not be separated and the space needed for the system is small.

Tires 'Basket Cases' After Ottawa Testing

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal transport department spends more than $200,000 a year to test 2,000 tires in the interest of highway safety.

The department's motor vehicle safety program tested a type of steel-belted radial tire last year at its Hull, Que., facility and ordered the recall of 42,300 tires as a result.

The program currently covers only tires sold on new passenger cars, said Harold Scharbach, senior compliance auditor for regulation enforcement, but will soon be expanded. Legislation before Parliament would give the agency power to test all tires manufactured or sold in Canada. This would include all new-equipment tires and those sold at retail outlets as replacements.

The centre tests tires in batches of 39, all bought from retail outlets and all representing the same manufacturer and type of construction. Three samples of each tire are subjected to tests for endurance, design, construction and highspeed tolerance.

In the endurance test, tires are hooked up to a rotating steel drum and run continuously for 34 hours at a simulated speed of 50 miles an hour.

During the first 10 hours the tire is subjected to low and medium loads. For the final 24 hours, it is run at the manufacturers' maximum specified load and pressure rate.

The high-speed test lasts 3½ hours. For the first two hours the tire is run against the steel drum at a constant speed of 50 miles an hour with a surrounding temperature of 100 degrees fahrenheit.

After two hours the speed is increased to 75 miles an hour. During the next hour it is increased by five miles an hour at 30-minute intervals to a peak of 85 miles an hour.

The tire is then taken off the drum and examined for tread separation, damage, bare fabric and air loss.

In the final test the tire is subjected to pressure on the carcass to ensure that the bead will not break away from the rim. One additional test, given when problems are suspected, is an adhesion test to determine how much force is required to tear the tread away from the carcass.

When all tests are completed the agency slashes each tire to ensure it will not be retreaded and sold.

The faulty steel-belted tires tested by the agency last year were described as "basket cases" by Mr. Scharbach by the time the tests were finished. The tread had separated from the rim during the high-speed test.

Women Join the Peacekeeping Forces

By STEPHEN SCOTT

ISMAILIA, Egypt (CP) — Peacekeeping can be women's work. Fifty Canadian women prove that point by working with about 800 men in the United Nations Emergency Force (UNEF) camp in this Suez canal town.

They hold jobs as nurses, clerks, communicators—jobs they do in Canada but that were formerly done by men outside the country.

The majority like it. So do the men who, the women say, spoil them and find the sight of them a relief in this Western island in an Eastern cultural sea.

At first the women were asked to volunteer for this work. Now they are assigned here. So far, only single women have been sent but changes in the armed forces pension plan have made it possible for married women to come.

Edith Knechtel of North Vancouver, B.C., and Ottawa is a private and a teletype operator; Lynn Houghton of La Ronge, Sask., is a major and a nurse.

Both asked to come here. Maj. Houghton said she begged. Both joined the forces originally partly because of the opportunities to travel.

Maj. Houghton says if women have a problem here it is getting used to living in confined spaces. The work was not the big deal some people thought it would be. Men quickly realized that the women could do it. Most of the comforts of home are in the camp, including a hairdresser.

Women are forever being asked to use the spare seat in vehicles going to Cairo, Tel Aviv, Port Said, Suez, the buffer zone, wherever. They need not be bored.

And they stand up better to being away from home. Men start looking forward to going back two months before their six-month stint is up. Women ask for extensions.

"Men don't seem to derive comfort from being among themselves, as women can," says the straight-talking, nonsense nurse with a ready laugh who finds no difficulty talking to men on equal terms.

Pte. Knetchel was walking down Seymour Street in Vancouver one day four years ago when she came upon a recruiting office, "and here I am."

"You have to get involved in a place like this," says the lucid, blue-eyed 25-year-old who subs as an easy-listening disc jockey on the base radio station some weekends. "In a small base you have to make your own fun."

A woman who joined the forces after finding little satisfaction in two years of university, she says she has yet to make up her mind whether to re-enlist later this year.

She came here in October and found that men smoothed the way for women.

"Servicemen always make things easier for servicewomen because they are gentlemen."

Brig.-Gen. J. P. R. Larose, Canadian commander, has decreed that there will be no inter-mess dating—officers date officers, other ranks date other ranks.

That poses no problems for Pte. Knechtel, who notes that personnel tend to move about at their own level in the services and most of the officers are older anyway.

It may be a bit of a problem for officers, however. Maj. Houghton was one of three women officers in the camp at the time.

Unlike some other women here, Pte. Knechtel feels no resentment that married women have up to now been excluded from overseas assignments.

70 Uruguayans Flee Crackdown

MONTEVIDEO (AP) — More than 70 Uruguayans have taken refuge in the Mexican and Colombian embassies to escape an anti-Communist crackdown, diplomatic sources said Tuesday. A total of 48 refugees have been granted safe conduct passes to Mexico since the government began arresting members of the outlawed Communist party and their relatives late last year.

U.S. Mail Service on Way to Bankruptcy

WASHINGTON (WP) — U.S. Postmaster-General Benjamin Bailar has warned that the postal service could be "insolvent within a year," without massive new federal aid to stem rising debts now estimated at nearly $3 billion.

Bailar also told the Senate post office committee that some action is necessary within two to four months to prevent additional cutbacks in service.

He also complained bitterly about the absence of White House response to his pleas for more aid.

In Washington and nine other East Coast cities, meanwhile, postal service deliveries in business districts were reduced this week to one daily — causing disruptions in mail-room scheduling at large-volume mail users and forcing some companies to consider picking up their own mail at local post offices.

Cutbacks in downtown mail delivery as well as closings of rural post offices prompted the hearing.

Post office committee chairman Gale McGee said at the hearing that the recent cuts created "a resentful, rebellious state of mind" among the public and in Congress about postal problems.

The cuts achieved on annual savings of $6 million.

Bailar conceded the savings involved were relatively small compared with an overall postal service budget of $14 billion a year, but he told McGee that management of the post office system has "no responsible choice" but to make every cutback that is possible.

Congress is considering legislation that would provide up to $1.5 billion a year of new aid to the postal service for a three-year period.

During that time, a new commission would study the impact of an anticiaptd decline in mail business as well as necessary services for the public at large which the government should finance.

To date, the administration has opposed new postal subsidies, and Bailar revealed this week that Office of Management and Budget director James Lynn hasn't returned his telephone calls and that the White House hasn't responded to a supplemental budget request two weeks ago.

"It appears that the administration is making a very studied effort to stay as far away from the problems of the postal service as possible," Bailar asserted.

Masked Wheelchair Hecklers Hit Wallace Bid

Times News Service

MADISON, Wis. — "They will grow up," said George Wallace after hecklers wearing Arthur Bremer masks and pushing wheelchairs tried to disrupt a campaign appearance here.

Senator Henry Jackson of Washington, like Wallace a candidate for the Democratiic presidential nomonation, was the tartget of similar abuse later Tuesday.

"What happened to me, that doesn't matter," Jackson told reporters. "Bringing in Bremer on Wallace, that was sick."

Bremer was convicted and sentenced to 63 years in prison after attempting to assassinate the Alabama governor during the 1972 presidential campaign. Wallace was paralysed from the waist down and now uses a wheelchair.

Neither Wallace nor Jackson was harmed by the hecklers. It was in Madison a week ago that former Georgia governor Jimmy Carter, another Democratic candidate in Wisconsin's April 6 primary election, was sprinkled with peanuts.

Carter is a peanut famer.

Wallace appeared to ignore demonstrators, who shouted: "Wallace go home" as he arrived at a Madison restaurant for a speech.

They carried placards which read: George Stand Up and be Counted" and Free Artie Bremer.

SEND IN MARINES: JACKSON

MADISON (WP) — Sen Henry Jackson, in speeches Tuesday, said the United States should have sent Marines to Lebanon, if asked, in order to keep contending Moslem and Christian factions from "shooting each other up."

He attached a string of conditions to his troop proposal, but he criticized the Ford administration for "doing nothing" to prevent what he called "an explosive situation."

"Now it is clearly too late" to intervene, Jackson said.

"If the Syrians take over, we may not be able to prevent war."

Recalling that President Eisenhower sent the U.S. fleet and Marines to Lebanon in 1958 to avert a threat of civil war, Jackson said "It would have made a tremendous difference" if the United States had offered to take similar action when leftist Moslems, supported by Syria, began to step up their attacks on the government of President Suleiman Franjieh, a Christian.

VEGAS BACK IN BUSINESS

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — Bartenders and culinary workers have reached tentative agreement on a contract with operators of 10 downtown casinos, clearing the way for a return to business as usual in the gambling capital of the U.S.

The agreement Tuesday headed off the possibility that Las Vegas' longest and costliest gambling workers strike, ended Friday, would be renewed.

He Struck Terror Into the Hearts Of Debtors . . .

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A witness disguised in a ski mask told congress Tuesday some debt collection agencies use physical threats and cruel trickery to force payment of bills.

The mystery witness at a House of Representatives hearing said he had been a professional debt collector himself and recounted hair-raising anecdotes of his techniques, including the time he asked a woman by telephone what her shoe size was.

When she responded, he told her: "We're going to deliver you a pair of cement shoes your size."

Another time, he said, he drew another woman out of her home by impersonating a police officer and phoning to say her son had lost both legs in an auto accident. The woman, in tears, walked into the trap at the hospital door.

"She thanked us that her son was still alive and paid the debt," he said.

Saying he feared retaliation from former associates in these collection capers, the heavyset witness appeared disguised in a maroon ski mask, sunglasses, an aquamarine suit and tie, a glittering pinky ring and a pseudonym — "James Clark."

"Clark" said he had served as both employee and manager of collection agencies in a city he declined to identify.

He testified before a house banking subcommittee which is considering legislation that would bring the debt collection industry under federal regulation and provide fines and jail terms for illegal collection activities.

Subcommittee chairman Frank Annunzio, said bad debts totalled $3 billion in the U.S. last year, making collection a major industry in need of federal regulation.

But Rep. Chalmers Wylie said independent agencies handle only about 1 per cent of debt collecting, with the rest managed by banks or "in-house" collectors.

He said some regulation might be needed, but, "If we act on the basis of overdramatization we run the risk of passing bad legislation."

In his testimony, "Clark" said he collected debts ranging from large industrial accounts to record and book club bills which sometimes did not qualify as legal debts.

He said that threats of violence were never actually carried out.

He said other pressure techniques included "beating" debtors psychologically by phoning them every five minutes through the day and telling terminally-ill persons their heirs "would go through hell if they didn't pay us in full."

Penal Bill Off the Mark: Expert

Prisoners Without Hope, Reluctant Juries Make Jails, Streets More Dangerous Places

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

FATTAH

The federal government's proposed peace and security legislation has come under the gun of the head of the department of criminology at Simon Fraser University.

Dr. Ezzat Fattah says the stiff mandatory minimum sentences for convicted murderers as proposed in Bill C84 would neither bring peace to the prisons nor provide security for the public.

Fattah told the annual meeting of the John Howard Society of Vancouver Island Saturday that it was unlikely the two-fold aim of the legislation would ever be achieved.

He warned that the 25-year minimum term for persons convicted of first degree murder and the 10-year minimum term for second degree murder would produce a class of "prisoners without hope."

And that, he said, would end up making the prison guard's job more dangerous.

In addition, he said, the harsher the punishment the more reluctant juries are to convict.

And that, he argued, would increase the chances of a murderer being acquitted.

Fattah said the division of murder into degrees based on the premise that those murders most inimical to public order should carry the greater penalty was illogical and arbitrary.

He noted that whereas the killing of a police officer and prison guard constituted first degree murder the same provision isn't extended to the head of state, Canadian political leaders, nor to the killing of a fellow inmate in a penal institution.

The arbitrary character of the division is even more evident, he said, in its provisions for murders committed through sky-jackings, kidnappings and certain sexual offences, all of which carry first degree charges.

"The unplanned, non-deliberate killing of the victim of rape, attempted rape, or indecent assault would qualify as first degree murder under Bill C84 while the unplanned, non-deliberate killing of a robbery victim would constitute only second degree murder."

He criticized the proposed legislation as too rigid and said it contradicted the recommendations of the Law Reform Commission which has asserted a sentence should not deny a prisoner hope.

"There is no evidence to show mandatory minimum sentences have a greater deterrant effect."

On the contrary, he stated, they would probably have no effect at all as potential murderers seldom consider the consequences before they commit the crime.

And once the deed is done, the chances of the murderer killing again is extremely remote.

"The offenders concerned pose no significant further risk to society," he said. "Long-term incarceration is completely unnecessary from the standpoint of public security, and is a misuse of scarce public funds. In the majority of cases the proposed legislation goes far beyond any public call for vengeance."

Fattah stressed in an interview later he wasn't saying all murderers should escape punishment. Rather, he said, murderers should be treated humanely, and the causes of the crime should be explored more thoroughly.

In his speech he expressed strong opposition to capital punishment and denied it had any deterrant effect.

He said the argument of deterrance was based on the power of fear — that people are so afraid of death that the threat of being executed will deter them from killing.

"Yet the seat belt legislation recently passed in the province of Ontario is based on the contention people are so unafraid of death they have to be forced by law, under the threat of sanctions, to protect their own lives through the fastening of their seat belts."

He said there was no correlation between the abolition of capital punishment and the increasing incidence of murder.

The opposite is perhaps truer, he said noting that states in the United States that have still retained the death penalty tend to reflect the highest murder rates.

He said the chief forces against the total abolition of capital punishment in Canada are police officers and prison guards.

However, he declared, empirical studies do not support the argument that capital punishment offers better protection to either policemen or prison guards in the execution of their duties.

He said he was distressed to see a strong trend in Canada for a return to a system of justice based on the old notions of expiation and retribution.

He abhored such mentality as was exemplified by an early French settler in Quebec who when asked whether his town was law-abiding is reputed to have retorted "We know how to hang in Canada."

He said the behavior of modern-day juries who rarely impose the death penalty should be considered a better indicator of public opinion than the proliferation of polls being carried out in support of capital punishment.

Such polls, he said, are superficial and only reflect the common sense or "gut" feelings of the people.

He said that in a democracy legislation should reflect public opinion but if that opinion is uninstructed, uninformed and highly emotional, it is up to Parliament to show the way.

"Parliament's role is to lead, not to follow," he said. "In the age of declining values the government should act to increase the value of human life, not diminish it."

During a question period Fattah denied he was presenting an elitist argument.

He argued that the government sets its policies in most other areas of business such as foreign affairs without turning to public opinion polls for guidance. And so, why should penal policy be treated any differently? he asked.

He agreed the public was faced with a dilemma in being asked to follow the "learned and reasoned" opinions of the experts and legislators who have as yet failed to come up with a solution to the growing crime problem.

But, Fattah said, the public has gotten a distorted image.

"Nobody hears of the successes. The public never sees the other side."

Bordeaux Fights for Old Image

FRONSAC, France (Reuter) — Wine-makers in the Bordeaux area are rebuilding their confidence with stringent new quality controls and direct selling tactics.

Seventeen months after the name of Bordeaux wine was blackened at the wine fraud trial, growers are moving back on to the offensive.

They have decided that the best way to win back the hearts and palates of their disgruntled customers is to bottle their own wine, subject to the new self-imposed quality checks, then sell it direct to the consumer.

In this way, they hope to reduce their dependence on the powerful Bordeaux-based wine merchants who for centuries have controlled the bottling and marketing of the region's produce.

Christian Lagarde, a member of the Fronsac Wine Growers Association, said: "Our aim is to beat fraud."

Growers badly need new sales outlets. Some estimates indicate that up to 80 per cent of Fronsac wine since 1972 is still lying unsold in growers' cellars because of the wine scandal.

The November, 1974, wine trial involved less than half of one per cent of the whole Bordeaux region's output. But such is the French wine industry's reputation for quality and integrity that the eight-day trial over mislabelling and doctoring wine attracted world-wide attention, with an immediate effect on sales.

The trial dealt a crippling blow to the prestige of Bordeaux wines, which provide a livelihood for some 100,000 people.

Eighteen people answered charges involving claims by government inspectors that more than three million bottles of cheap wine were chemically doctored and mislabelled.

The cousins Lionel and Yvan Cruse, who headed one of the most respected wine houses in Bordeaux, were each given one year suspended prison sentences—later reduced on appeal—and hefty fines for their part in the affair.

The self-admitted villain of the scandal, wine-broker Pierre Bert, received a one-year prison sentence.

Bert created a sensation at the trial when he proclaimed that the whole French wine trade was riddled with fraud.

SPIRITED DRIVE AT PROHIBITION

By K. R. S. RAJAN
CP Correspondent

BOMBAY (CP)—If the All-India Prohibition Council has its way, politicians who like a couple of drinks in the evening will be barred from contesting elections to state legislatures.

The council is a non-official organization campaigning for total prohibition. At the moment, there is no prohibition in most of India.

Only two states—Gujarat and Tamil Nadu — are totally "dry." Parts of three other states are experimenting with "limited prohibition." This has made the prohibition lobby increasingly impatient.

"We should have total prohibition in as short a time as possible," says Dr. Sushila Nayyar, chairman of the prohibition council. "The drink habit is spreading alarmingly and even college students are falling victims to it."

Dr. Nayyar, a veteran of the anti-colonial freedom movement and a disciple of Mohandas K. Gandhi, says complete prohibition is in tune with traditional Indian values. Both Hinduism and Islam, India's two biggest religions, forbid the imbibing of alcohol.

Despite the council's spirited campaign, most state governments seem reluctant to outlaw drinking. One reason for this is the sizable revenue liquor taxes bring. Another is the difficulty of enforcing prohibition in a country of more than 600 million people.

However, the federal government of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi has circulated to state governments what is called "a minimum program for prohibition.".

Under the program, no new distilleries will be permitted. Liquor shops will be moved away from factories, schools and temples and newspapers will not be allowed to print liquor advertisements.

"The idea is to make it more difficult for people, especially the poor, to get a bottle of liquor," said a federal official. "We are proceeding gradually and cautiously."

Canadians On Trial

SPOKANE (AP) — Two Vancouver men charged in a United States Securities and Exchange Commission complaint with selling unregistered securities, went on trial in U.S. district court Tuesday.

Marvin L. Judd and Ivan Todd were among defendants named in a December, 1973, complaint filed by the SEC.

But other defendants in the action, including Ray Bohn, Josephine Priano and William Lasswell Jr., all of Spokane, earlier consented to be permanently enjoined by the government from selling unregistered securities. They neither admitter nor denied guilt and are no longer defendants in the complaint.

The SEC said it intends to show that although $90,000 was raised through sale of securities, about $25,000 actually went into mining investments.

Hiking boots, explained.
Raichle's soft, foam-padded, leather covered Scree Guard keeps rock and ice out of the boot and adds comfort when hiking.
Raichle has a full grain leather lining over contour foam padding for the inner boot. The soft leather-lined tongue (with padding) is hinged to eliminate binding and pressure points. This adds even more comfort.
Grade "A" flesh-out, full grain Russia (heifer) leather is used for the upper boot. It's the most expensive leather in the world.
Special "heel counters" are built into Raichle boots. They grip the heel and help anchor the foot to the sole to prevent heel lifting when hiking.
Raichle boots offer a choice of three different widths: Narrow, Medium or Wide. We do not merely vary the amount of padding (like most manufacturers) so our boots fit better.
Raichle hiking and climbing boots have double or triple stitched midsoles (the nylon stitches are waterproofed in a glue-pitch liquid composite). A full leather midsole conforms to the foot (as does the leather inner sole) and is cemented and screwed to the reinforced Vibram® sole.
Raichle boots have steel or kiln-dried, laminated wood shanks to support the sole and protect the instep.
Raichle boots come in true half-sizes for a better, more comfortable fit. This also makes the boot sole the correct proportion to the boot (and foot) size.
Raichle hiking, trail and climbing boots are number one in Europe. They're fast becoming the most popular boots in North America, too. And for good reason. After more than 60 years of making outstanding quality boots, Raichle of Switzerland knows its work well. Raichle constructs their boots on the finest North American lasts available to fit the comparatively wide ball and narrow heel of the American foot. And Raichle uses Norwegian welt (outside stitched) construction for hiking and climbing boots. It's the most functional, most durable method of fabricating boots yet devised. What's more, expensive Grade "A" leather is carefully inspected, tested and used in all Raichle boots.
The foundationof Raichle's reputation rests on its long history of delivering a fine fit. No other boot maker offers every boot in true half-sizes and three different widths. With soft pig skin leather lining and contour foam padding. All in all, it make Raichle boots fit like a second skin.
We want you to know what to look for in a hiking, climbing or trail boot. Because when you do, we know you'll want Raichle boots.

Body-Rub Law Now in Limbo

By BILL HOLDEN

WINNIPEG (CP) — Nine months after a bylaw was passed aimed at putting a hammerlock on topless body-rub parlors, business remains brisk.

Instead of throwing in the towel, the operators formed an association and came up with a counter-punch that threw the regulations into legal limbo.

Shortly after the bylaw was passed last May, the Manitoba Massage Parlor Association filed a statement of claim charging that the regulations are discriminatory, prohibiting rather than regulating topless studios.

Ken Dusang, president of the association and the owner of two Winnipeg rub clubs, answers with characteristic bluntness when asked why the association is ignoring the bylaw that placed stringent controls on business hours, clothing and licensing requirements.

"Why should we comply?" he asks. "They're stupid bylaws."

The case still is before the courts, and the provincial attorney-general's department has said it will not prosecute until the matter is resolved legally.

In the meantime, the parlors continue to operate.

"If unique is what you seek," says one newspaper advertisement, "call Key Girl."

"Relax with our French-style sessions," coaxes another.

Still another offers a "sensitivity awareness" session with the added incentive of a free sauna.

Free-lancers also are getting in on the act, including one who provides a telephone number and the simple statement: "Have entertainment. Will travel."

Dusang, a wealthy businessman whose varied interests include managing professional boxers, sees the regulations as a clear case of a punch below the belt.

"Why should they license someone and then turn around and change the bylaw in midstream? It's like you're selling beautiful houses and then someone comes along and tells you to sell tents."

The legal struggle leaves Winnipeg police with the appearance of a referee trying to maintain order in the ring while wearing handcuffs.

Because the Crown will not prosecute in the event of violations, city police are not enforcing the bylaw.

Rev. Lester Laird, head of a group calling itself the Committee Against Pornography, says his group does not oppose therapeutic massage parlors but rather the topless studios in downtown Winnipeg that are "merely fronts for prostitution."

For fear of generating publicity for the parlors, the committee has recently reduced its public opposition.

Dusang himself says the rhubarb "hasn't hurt business."

Bone in Israel's Throat

By THOMAS W. LIPPMAN
The Washington Post

JERUSALEM — "Israel," the Arab village leader said with a thin smile, "is like a dog that has tried to swalow too big a bone. She cannot get it down but she cannot spit it out either."

The bone he was talking about is the troubled West Bank territory that Israel captured from Jordan in the 1967 war. His analogy fits the situation well.

While Israelia paratroopers have now restored order after nearly two months of riots and disorder among Arab youths, Israelies and West Bankers agreed that the bone really is stuck and that only external forces, independently controlled by neither the Israelis nor their restive West Bank subjects, can move it.

Sources on both sides agree that the issues that touched off the riots, while troublesome, are only surface irritants and the real cause was frustration over an unhappy arrangement to which neither Israelis nor Arabs can foresee an end.

The disorders have forced the Israeli government to publicly defend its West Bank policies when it would have preferred to avoid the issue, and have provoked demands for change from several quarters within Israeli. But substantive changes that would alter the basic relationship between occupier and occupied cannot be expected soon, Israeli officials say.

Defence Minister Shemon Peres told Parliament last week that Israel would not be deterred by the Palestine Liberation Organization, the Communists, or stone throwers. He might well have included the UN security council in his list.

Israel has not annexed the West Bank, whose residents it regards as Jordanian citizens. But Israel also refuses to evacuate the territory and return it to Arab control without firm assurances that it will not again become a staging area for Arab military attacks against Israeli cities, which are within easy range of the border between the West Bank and Israel proper.

Even if Israel were ready to retaurn the West Bank to Arab control, it is unclear to whom it should be given. The 1974 Arab summit conference at Rabat decided that Jordan no longer has any claim to the West Bank and that its residents should be represented by the PLO.

Whether the West Bankers want to be governed by the PLO is an open question, and in any case the geography of the West Bank is such, analysts here say, that it could not survive economically unless it continued to have direct, close ties with both Israel and Jordan. This would be difficult under PLO rule.

Under these circumstances, Israelis and Arabs say, neither the disorders nor Israel's military response to them addressed the fundamental dilemma of the West Bank, nor will the municipal elections to be held there next month.

No matter who wins — PLO supporters, conservative backers of Jordan's King Hussein, or someone in between — The West Bank will continue to be a diplomatic stepchild whose fate will be determined from outside, in the view of Arabs and Israelis alike.

Rightist religious elements in Israel are urging the government to alter the West Bank situation by authorizing major new Jewish settlements.

Other political elements in Israel urge the government to make clear that no new settlements will be permitted and to force a group of unauthorized settlers who tried to set up a community near Nablus, the West Bank's biggest city, to return to Israel.

Because of internal disagreement about how to handle the issue, the government has deferred a decision and the settlers are living at a nearby army camp. This temporizing move has aroused Arab suspicions.

If those suspiciions lead to disturbances, however, the Iraelis have said they will react strongly, as they did in recent days.

A high ranking officer of the West Bank military government said, "We are going to keep order. We have made it clear that in local administration and politics they can do what they want, but there will be order."

"A solution is really not to be found in the West Bank at all," said another government source. "It is in relations between Israel and the other Arab nations. We are willing to compromise if the other countries will give us assurances it won't be used against us. But we are not willing to commit suicide."

He and other Israelis expressed fear that Arab control of the West Bank would mean the presence of radical anti-Israeli forces, well-supplied with weapons by countries like Libya, attacking Israeli towns just across the border.

IS 'BULGE' WARNING OF EXPECTED QUAKE?

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — They call it "The Bulge" and "The Blister" and "The Palmdale Bubble." And the scientists who study such things wonder: Has the earth heaved itself upward because it is sending an advance warning of the great earthquake that has long been expected here?

In a mystery that is perplexing geologists and beginning to cause serious concern for disaster planning officials, a huge expanse of the earth's crust has risen as much as 10 inches, as if inflated by rising yeast, along a 100-mile stretch of the San Andreas Fault. The bulge begins about 30 miles northeast of downtown Los Angeles and covers at least 4,500 square miles.

Geologists here say there is no evidence yet to establish whether such a swelling is a prelude to an earthquake or is merely a scientific curiosity.

However, a similar, much smaller bulge occurred along the San Andreas Fault before the last major earthquake here, the 1971 San Fernando Valley quake that killed 64 persons. Another bulge preceded a 1964 earthquake that killed 24 at Niigata, Japan.

Southern California has long lived with warnings that a big earthquake looms sometime in the future, but the threat has been mostly theoretical. The bulge has given the state something physical to think about.

It has touched off a series of scientific projects to learn the significance of the mysterious bulge, precipitated warnings that it could be a forewarning of a serious disaster, and accelerated emergency planning. But so far, it appears not to have shaken Californians' traditional apathy toward what scientists say is the inevitable big earthquake.

"The thinking that intrigues us is its episodic nature," said Robert Castle, the United States Geological Survey researcher who led a group that discovered the earth bulge last year. "If we had seen it grow over a century," he said, "we wouldn't be too concerned." But, he added, the land uplifted over a three to four-year period in the early and mid-1960s, "and that's very unusual."

There's This Great Little Shop . . .

MIAMI (AP) — In a discreet location, a newly opened boutique sells women's shoes in size 14, oversized silk corsets and black, wet-look lingerie to male customers.

The shop, catering to transvestites, doesn't open until 5 p.m. when the mostly-upper-middle-income men, some of them married, come out of society's closet to dress in women's clothes.

"The need for this kind of shop was simply incredible," says Phil Salem, the orange-haired proprietor, who says he wears women's lingerie himself.

Authorities estimate that there are one million transvestites in the United States, and Salem says Florida has an unusually high proportion of them.

"A lot of professional men refire here, and a lot of people come here for the season," Salem says. "Men leave their wives for a business trip to Florida and come to buy women's clothes and wear them.

"Transvestites usually are not homosexuals, but most people don't understand that. Homosexuals have become more acceptable in public than transvestites."

SHOES REINFORCED

Salem's boutique is festooned with girlie pictures and sexy magazines. Items for sale include blow-up bras and five-inch-heel shoes custom-built with steel shanks and reinforcements.

"We don't want a 250-pound customer to break the heel," Salem says.

The boutique, located in the same building as a stock brokerage firm, is an offshoot of one in New York and a mail catalogue system. Another store recently opened in Philadelphia and others are planned in Chicago and Atlanta.

"I think we can look forward to doing pretty good business in Miami," says Salem. "We knew there was an active market because we had 3,600 Miami men who were subscribers to our catalogue of clothes. Since they have to pay $7 to be put on our mailing list, we only get people who are serious buyers.

"The clothes are not cheap. Dresses sell from about $50 to $99. Most of our clients are 'in the closet'—or else they'd just walk into a department store and buy what they want."

Salem says many businessmen wear femal undergarments every day. "They have to keep the collar buttoned and wear a tie so they want to feel comfortable under it all."

Miami police say there is no county or state law against men dressing in women's clothes.

Operational UFO Hard to Finance

CAMBRIDGE, Ont. (CP) — Richard Shrubsall says a lot of his friends think he is a bit nutty because of his hobby. The 25-year-old house painter admits that building a working model of an unidentified flying object is not the most conventional of hobbies.

After a year of drafting, Mr. Shrubsall said he has finally finished the plans for the craft and a local steel fabrication plant is building aluminum components for the model.

He said the finished craft will be 49 inches in diameter and 19 inches high. It will weigh 100 pounds and cost $2,000 to make.

Mr. Shrubsall said he plans to assemble the flying saucer in his basement.

If the finished product, powered by an electric motor on an extension cord, rises and hovers 10 feet off the ground without falling apart, Mr. Shrubsall said he intends to secure world-wide patents on the design.

But he has found it difficult to obtain money for the project.

"There is no way I can go into a bank and say I want $2,000 to build a flying saucer," he said. "I don't think they would go for that." Mr. Shrubsall said his design is "so simple it will work."

There are two discs on the craft. The top one will rotate and suck in air, building up pressure and forcing air out through the sides.

The bottom disc will not rotate and will contain a torque fan to control altitude and direction.

$20M Asked For Schools Over 3 Years

A $20 million, three-year capital expenditure program was approved by the Greater Victoria school board Monday for submission to the provincial education department.

Trustee Janet Baird explained the forecast is not a definite commitment on the part of the board, but represents a "needs survey."

The submission includes a $11,020,968 estimate for 1977; $4,723,600 for 1978 and $4,046,600 for 1979 for a total of $19,791,168.

Next year's proposal includes $6.4 million for relisted projects and $4.5 million for new projects, especially classroom conversions, upgrading and additions.

Crewman Rescued

SEATTLE (AP) — An injured fisherman was airlifted early Tuesday from a South Korean fishing vessel to Yaquina Bay, Ore., a U.S. Coast Guard spokesman said. The unidentified crewman reportedly has a broken lower spinal column.

ITU Must Pay $32,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice R. P. Anderson Tuesday ordered the International Typographical Union and the B.C. Federation of Labor to pay $32,000 damages to publishers of a Vancouver Island newspaper which was illegally picketed for 30 months.

The publisher, E. W. Bickle Ltd., producers of the weekly Comox Free Press, has asked the Supreme Court for between $30,000 and $50,000 in damages because of advertising revenue and other income lost because of ITU picketing and an edict issued against it by the BCFL.

Mr. Justice Anderson ruled last September that both the ITU picketing of the newspaper and the federation's declaration that the company was "hot" were unlawful.

He said Tuesday he was forbidden by law to make an order on how the sum should be split between the labor organizations, but suggested the federation pay 20 per cent of the $32,000.

In awarding damages, Mr. Justice Anderson rejected a defence argument that the company should have tried to obtain a court injunction when picketing started.

The judge has yet to decide on damages to be awarded 12 ITU members expelled from the union for crossing the illegal picket line.

CB CLUBS TO REPORT ON CRIMES

VERNON (CP) — Citizen band radio clubs, with a total membership of about 200, have agreed to an RCMP request to report over their radios any crimes they witness while driving in their cars. Rick Bennett of the CB Buzzers says club members will "not be patrolling to fight crime physically . . . but if we do see a crime we will report it." The month-long experiment is modelled on a similar program which has been operating in Chilliwack.

Railways Criticized By Western Shippers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Transportation in western Canada is in disarray because the federal government has heeded sectional interests, delayed action on major issues or threatened sweeping action that has left shippers not knowing what will happen, says a report by a transportation group.

The criticisms are made by the Western Transportation Advisory Council (WESTAC) after a survey of governments, shippers, unions, terminal operators and port administrations. Among the conclusions are:

Provincial government sources have indicated that they think that CP Rail and Canadian National Railways should be forced to provide increased traffic capacity to keep pace with shipper demand.

A mining company has pressed the view that railway freight rates for coal should be subsidized by the federal government in times of depressed world markets to ensure continuity of Canadian fuel sales.

Bulk commodity producers and others are questioning claims by the railways that they are capable of meeting future traffic loads.

The railways are resentful of government pretentions to know better than the carriers how the rails should be organized.

Railway rolling stock and plants to handle grain traffic is run down and the carriers do not have money set aside with which to re-equip.

Shippers of minerals protested the inadequacy of railway freight rates for export grains and said that this situation must inevitably sour their own relations with the railways. Mineral producers said that as long as grain rates are low they must be led to suspect that their own traffic tonnnages are being unfairly charged in order to cross-subsidize cereal movements.

Besides fears that railway capacity might be curtailed short of shipper demand, producers of bulk commodities are worried that quality of service might decline, meaning lengthened journey times for mineral and grain shipments.

SPRING HAS a few disadvantages, as these two sleigh-toting Saskatoon boys discover. When there is no snow for sledding, and it's too muddy for wagons, the only answer is to take to the air.

SURREY NO-NUDE BYLAW ILLEGAL

VANCOUVER (CP) — Surrey took the wrong route in its attempt to ban nude entertainment in beer parlors, provincial Judge Douglas Reed ruled Tuesday.

In quashing the charge, Judge Reed said that Surrey was wrong in trying to control the conduct of people in public places by an amendment to its business licence bylaw.

The amendment was passed by the municipal council last May in an effort to stop a wave of nude and semi-nude entertainment in night spots.

He found the bylaw amendment ultra vires and said: "If Surrey wished (to control strippers) it should have proceeded by passing a bylaw under Section 879 (N) of the Municipal Act.

"It could have done it under that section."

Section 879 (N) gives municipal councils the power to "prevent vice, drunkennes, profane swearing, or indecent, obscene, blasphemous, or grossly insulting language, or other immorality or indecency."

Day Care Centre Protesters Rally

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 200 day care workers, parents and children assembled in front of the Vancouver courthouse Tuesday for a rain-soaked protest rally held in conjunction with a 24-hour strike by employees of eight lower mainland day care centres.

The strike was called by members of the Social Services Employees' Union and the Service, Office and Retail Workers Union of Canada to back demands for a new union contract.

30-Minute Verdict

VANCOUVER (CP) — It took a B.C. supreme court jury less than 30 minutes Tuesday to find Glen Wayne Jansen, 24, of Vancouver, guilty of murder punishable by life imprisonment in the June 24, 1975 underground parking lot death of Frieda Buxbaum.

The jury recommended that Jansen be imprisoned for at least 20 years before being eligible for parole.

Pilot Hung Up

FERNIE (CP) — Cam Grundstrom of Galloway, a hang glider pilot, was rescued Monday by a Canadian Forces seach and rescue helicopter crew that was passing overhead when his glider crashed into a cliff face 20 miles south of here.

Theft Ring Broken

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — A high-speed chase Saturday that involved a commandered motorcycle and led to the arrest of two 15-year-old boys, has resulted in the arrest of 16 other juveniles and recovery of three stolen cars, RCMP said Monday. S. Sgt. Jim Woods said joy-riding appeared to be the primary motivation behind an organized car theft ring that operated in North and West Vancouver.

Attempts Decline

VANCOUVER (CP) — City hospitals report there were 900 attempted suicides here last year compared with 1,500 attempts in 1969. Dr. Paul Termansen, an expert on suicide and a University of B.C. professor, said Monday.

Egg Adjournment

VANCOUVER (CP) — A hearing on a court injunction ordering five northern British Columbia egg producers to either stop production or get back in good standing with the provincial egg marketing board was adjourned for two weeks Tuesday. The B.C. supreme court granted the adjournment to allow counsel for the northern producers more time to prepare their case.

$100,000 Fire Damage To Prince Albert Motel

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — Damage to the two-storey west wing of the Sharaton-Marlboro Motor Inn in downtown Prince Albert, which was destroyed by an early-morning fire Tuesday, has been estimated in excess of $100,000, a Saskatchewan Government Insurance spokesman said Tuesday.

The spokesman said the remainder of the seven-storey building at 13th Street and 1st Avenue suffered only minor damage.

It took fireman more than an hour to bring the blaze under control. There were no injuries to guests in the wing, but fire chief George Slater said several firemen suffered cut hands battling the blaze.

Hotel manager Ron Carter said fire alarms in the motor inn were inspected 10 days ago and he told reporters he could not understand why they did not work Tuesday.

The fire started in a beverage room that occupied the entire main floor of the west wing before spreading to the second floor.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba Education Minister Ben Hanuschak said Tuesday the minimum educational requirements to obtain a teaching certificate will be increased in September to three years from two years.

The minister told the annual meeting of the Manitoba Teachers Society (MTS) that the change is "in recognition of the increasing demands for skills being made upon you as classroom teachers."

The increase will not affect students already enrolled in teacher training programs, an MTS spokesman said.

The only provinces in which two years of education are required are Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Newfoundland. Saskatchewan is expected to increase the minimum requirements to three years in September.

REGINA (CP) — Finance Minister Walter Smishek said Tuesday he will check and advise the house "in due time" whether the Saskatchewan government is making any large special payment to R. H. Dowdell, who recently resigned as head of the Public Service Commission and has taken a job with the federal government.

The minister was replying to questions by Ted Malone (L—Regina Lakeview), who asked the minister specifically to see whether a payment of about $10,000 is being made to Dowdell.

REGINA (CP) — A Liberal backbencher was unsuccessful in the legislature Tuesday in trying to get confirmation that a Uranium City high school was allowed to operate with a high radiation level.

Tony Merchant (L—Regina Wascana) said the high school in the northern Saskatchewan community was closed when radiation of 170 picocuries a litre was found, but when the school reopened, the radiation level was 20, 10 times the acceptable level.

Environment Minister Neil Byers declined to provide specific figures, saying "I do not have at hand the figures for all the buildings in picocretes per litre or whatever they're called."

Long, Tough Haul For Atik Experiment

ATTAWAPISKAT, Ont. (CP) — Fifteen men crammed into a tiny plywood building that passes for Attawapiskat's community centre.

The men described their hopes and fears for the Atik Corp., a non-profit venture that offers hope of breaking the dreary cycle of welfare, unemployment and alcohol that prevails in remote native communities along western James Bay.

Atik, now in its third year of operation and heavily subsidized by federal and Ontario governments, has encountered problems with an expanded operation this winter.

The corporation hauls badly needed freight along James Bay ice and over a winter road through the frozen swamp of the James Bay lowlands from Moosonee to the isolated coastal communities of Kasechewan, Fort Albany and Attawapiskat.

"Maybe you've had your share of problems," David Allen of the federal Indian affairs department told the recent Attawapiskat meeting. "But very few successful businesses start out without many problems."

The mechanical backbone of Atik's freight-hauling operation, which employs eight native people, is a $95,000 machine called Delta 3. Similar machines, capable of hauling tons of heavy materials, are used extensively in the Arctic.

But Atik's machine has been plagued by a series of frustrating breakdowns: incorrect piston rings, faulty gauges, oil leakages and tire blowouts. Despite ideal ground and ice conditions for hauling this winter, the resulting delays brought Atik's earnings down to $30,000 instead of the $70,000 it was counting on.

The Northern Ontario resources and transportation committee, a group of senior provincial civil servants and cabinet ministers, gave Atik an initial $100,000 this winter and later contributed an extra $25,000.

The province's Indian Community Secretariat gave Atik $20,000. The federal Indian affairs department offered a $25,000 grant and a $20,000 loan that must be repaid before the end of the year.

What are the benefits from such public spending? An evaluation by private consultants of last year's Atik project—cutting a winter road from Moosonee to Attawapiskat—showed that $55,000 was paid to native people who would otherwise have received welfare.

"Certainly, the most beneficial aspect in Attawapiskat has been in terms of pride in the community in doing something for itself," said Jeremy Posner, a consultant retained by Atik.

"It was their own idea that they wanted to get into hauling. I say that and add a word of caution: economic development projects in Indian communities are fairly fragile. If this project fails this year, it's easy for these people to get discouraged."

There is little doubt that the Attawapiskat community is solidly behind the program. The men at the recent band council meeting pledged their co-operation.

"I will do everything I can to help you," Chief Emile Makoge said.

The Atik group accepted an offer of help from an Indian contractor in Fort Albany to get more tonnage moved this year before the spring thaw makes hauling impossible.

"We'll bend over backwards to help them," Mr. Allen said. Such help includes giving Atik contracts to haul in supplies needed for construction for schools, nurses' residences and roads in Indian communities.

Atik also hopes to land a provincial government contract next year for hauling the steel required to build a microwave relay system along western James Bay.

Pilot Program Bridging Indian Language Conflict

CROSS LAKE, Man. (CP)—Until a few years ago, elementary education in this northern Manitoba community sometimes turned out to be a conflict between Indians and an often insensitive department of education.

The situation, however, is improving here and in five other northern communities involved in a five-year pilot project aimed at bridging the language barrier between Indians and the rest of society.

Art Rempel, co-ordinator of the Manitoba native bilingual pilot program, says the conflict is historically linked to monolingual English education programs not geared to the native population.

The programs "failed those native students who did not speak English adequately and were penalized for it when teachers labelled them as slow learners."

He said the program, now in its final year, has proved successful in changing native attitudes toward education.

The program teaches English by phasing the language into the curriculum in stages. Starting in kindergarten, it starts with about 15 minutes of English instruction a day and increases gradually through Grade 2.

"This approach will give the youngsters the opportunity to learn and appreciate their language and cultural heritages and to live effectively in a dominantly English society," said Mr. Rempel.

The program uses about 50 teachers and 650 students in six northern communities. Most of the teachers are natives and were prepared for the program through special workshops.

The books in the program have been developed by the native branch of the department of education.

While it still is premature to speculate on the success a child will have when moved into the standard school curriculum, Mr. Rempel said two results of the program are worth noting.

"Native people are more involved in those schools taking part in the pilot project and the average school attendance rate has increased to an unprecedented high in the primary grades."

And, perhaps more important, the general climate of the classrooms is pleasant and lively.

"It seems to mean much to these young native children to be educated in their own language," said Mr. Rempel.

"It fosters a pride in themselves and their identity."

Mrs. Brown would like to thank each and everyone for the patronage in the past year and hopes to see you this coming year.

BONNER JOB PROTESTED

A New Democratic Party MLA said Tuesday the opposition objects to the appointment of Robert Bonner as chairman of British Columbia Hydro because of his actions in the Somers case.

Gary Lauk (NDP — Vancouver Centre) said that when Bonner was attorney-general in the Social Credit government of the 1960s, he sat on a report for 18 months which eventually led to the prosecution of cabinet minister Robert Somers for bribery.

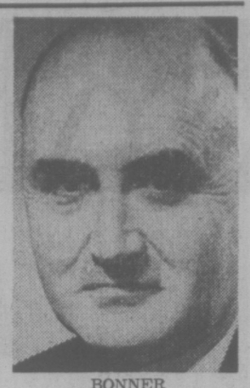

Lauk said the government, in appointing Bonner Hydro chairman, was taking him off the shelf after he "flunked out" as chairman of MacMillan Bloedel.

He said Bonner was "a flunky for the international business conspiracy."

Jim Chabot (SC — Columbia River) challenged Lauk to repeat his statements outside the legislature where he wouldn't be protected by the privileges of the house.

"It's the most despicable, vicious and unwarranted attack against any British Columbian I've even heard in this house," Chabot said.

He said Lauk had no right to question Bonner's qualifications because Jim Rhodes, the NDP-appointed Hydro chairman, had no credentials other than he was once a roommate of former premier Dave Barrett, a socialist and a friend of the NDP.

1975 Freeze Didn't Halt B.C. Govt's Employment

British Columbia put the brakes on public service hirings in 1975, but the service still grew.

On Dec. 31, 1975 ,there were 39,498 provincial employees on the payroll, compared with 37,739 at year-end, 1974. The increase of 1,759 represented a 4.7-per-cent increase.

But the growth rate was much slower than in 1974, when the service grew by 3,513 new employees over 1973 — a growth rate of 10.3 per cent.

The total work force at the end of 1975 consisted of 24,631 permanent employees and 14,867 temporary employees, compared with 21,576 permanent staffers in 1974 and 16, 161 temporary staff members.

The statistics were made public Tuesday with the tabling of the annual Public Service Commission report, which cryptically stated that most of the temporary staff were continuously employed.

The report also stated that 3,832 persons left the public service in 1975, a total turnover of 15.5 per cent. Of that total, 1,044 finished appointed terms, 2,356 resigned, 360 retired, 53 were fird and 19 died.

Enrolment Shrank at NDU While Gov't Funds Soared

Notre Dame University in Nelson is over-staffed and under-utilized, says a report by the Universities Council of British Columbia which was tabled in the legislature Tuesday by Education Minister Pat McGeer.

The report says the provincial government's share of operating costs has risen to 84.3 per cent of the NDU budget this year from 40 per cent in 1967-68.

And while the cost to the government rose to $1.8 million from $309,000, enrolment in the same period at the Roman Catholic institution which was given degree-grating status in 1963, dropped to 500 students from 700.

The council, the controlling body for B.C.'s three public universities, was ordered by the minister to consider NDU's request for $2.1 million in government funds for the 1976-77 academic year.

In January, Dr. McGeer said the new Social Credit government would not give the university its requested special grant and it would have to apply through the council set up in 1974 to distribute funds to the public universities.

When the legislature opened this month, the B.C. Student Federation protested what it termed a threat of closure hanging over the institution that began as a college in 1950.

Dr. McGeer told the students he would investigate the matter but when the report was tabled Tuesday, the minister said he would have little comment because of "what may be delicate discussions" between NDU and the universities council.

The report said that 44 per cent of all courses enrolled five or less students, 40 of the 270 courses offered enrolled one or two students and 24 per cent of the courses had more than 20 students enrolled.

NDP Wants Probe Of Budget 'Leaks'

SMITH

MACDONALD

A special committee to investigage allegations of leaks prior to last week's budget was called for in the legislature Tuesday by NDP Vancouver-East MLA Alex Macdonald.

In a formal petition, the NDP asked for a committee of privileges to investigate "grave allegations" made in the legislature and in the Victoria Times and Vancouver Sun.

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson said in the house Monday that prior to release of the budget he received a phone call informing him the sales tax would increase from five to seven per cent.

Macdonald pointed out that Gibson's statement contradicts a statement of Premier Bennett Friday that information concerning tax changes was not available to anyone who could use the information prior to release of the budget.

The petition also mentions a story in the Times on Friday which outlined the case of a young man who was given documents about two weeks ago for safekeeping by a Bennett aide. The man surmised that the papers dealt with budget information.

The same case was referred to in the Vancouver Sun on Saturday in the columns of Jack Wasserman and Allan Fotheringham.

Another Victoria Times story cited in the petition quotes Finance Minister Evan Wolfe saying Bennett aide Dave Brown had seen parts of the budget and assisted in terminology in writing the budget.

Wolfe said he believed Brown had taken an oath of secrecy although he is not a member of the civil service.

But according to Macdonald, and the petition, the clerk of the house confirmed Brown has not taken an oath of secrecy.

Outside the house, Macdonald said the statements of Gibson are a "very serious matter."

He cited instances of other budget leaks which led to a privileges committee in Ottawa, and to resignations in Britain.

He stressed he was not making any accusations but simply stating that the allegations require a committee investigation.

Wolfe told reporters outside the house his government was sure it had taken all the necessary precautions to protect the secrecy of the budget.

But he said he would have no objections to a privileges committee.

'BOORISH' TREATMENT

A Social Credit MLA attacked the former New Democratic Party government Tuesday for its "incredibly boorish" treatment of the city of Victoria.

Sam Bawlf (SC—Victoria) said the government expanded its land holdings in the city while refusing to pay full property taxes and was arrogrant in dealing with the city on other matters.

Speaking during budget speech debate, he said the NDP doubled the government's land holdings in Victoria and now owns 115 acres or 10 per cent of the total assessment base but still pays only a 15-mill grant in lieu of taxes.

Mincome Changes By NDP 'Sloppy'

A move to cut extended care patients off Mincome last may was "sloppily administered" and some continued to receive benefits, Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Tuesday.

The minister said he checked with his deputy Tuesday morning and confirmed the NDP administration had ordered termination of provincial Mincome payments to chronic care patients.

Both Vander Zalm and Health Minister Bob McClelland said Monday they were not aware of the move made last May.

But Vander Zalm said there was no follow-up of the ruling and while some senior citizens "responded" to the change in policy, others did not and continued to receive Mincome payments.

The matter is now being checked out by the department, he said.

Tory leader Scott Wallace had questioned the minister whether the new extended care rates of $7 a day, up from $1 as announced in the budget, would apply to those cut-off Mincome.

The purpose of the increased rates, according to the budget, is to prevent income assistance recipients from building up estates while paying just $1 a day in hospital.

But old age pensioners still receive federal pension benefits of more than $200 while they are in extended care hospitals.

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson asked Vander Zalm about the concern of families who have handicapped children or other members in chronic care who do not receive Mincome.

The minister said exceptions to the new rates would be spelled out in regulations later.

HONORABLE A-G WAS NO MORE

Speaker Ed Smith is having his troubles in the legislature remembering the new titles and constituencies of the MLAs.

He made the supreme faux-paus Tuesday of recognizing NDP Vancouver-East MLA Alex Macdonald as "the honorable attorney-general."

The house roared with laughter and the real attorney-general, Garde Gardom, expressed mocked dismay as Macdonald, the former AG, quickly took up the bait.

"When are you going to get crime off the streets and back into city hall where it belongs," shouted Macdonald.

Open Remote Areas—Davis

It is time British Columbia reverted to a policy of placing greater emphasis on a transportation program to open up the more remote areas of the province, Transport Minister Jack Davis said Tuesday.

Speaking during budget speech debate, the minister said transportation once had a high priority but in the last few years very little has happened.

"We have to get back to transportation," he said. "Transportation for developing those parts of the community that are relatively new, relatively remote, especially in the north."

The former federal Liberal cabinet minister criticized Ottawa for its present transportation policy.

He said there are cases, such as pipelines, transmission lines and airlines, where the user should pay the whole shot, but there is room for subsidy in other areas.

On the B.C. scene, he said ther is no way B.C. Hydro should be subsidized but there is room for subsidy on certain B.C. Ferries' routes because they amount to extensions of the highway system.

He said some routes like those on the Sunshine Coast or Gulf Islands need not pay their way, but on other main routes, the user should go some distance in paying the total cost of the service.

The government has to work to get ferry costs down by building bigger ferries, manning them more efficiently and providing better scheduling, Davis said.

The minister outlined three areas there the province is having some problem with the federal government — shipping, port development and pipelines.

He said B.C. is opposed to federal legislation now before the house of Commmons which he said would in effect create a merchant marine.

He said the bill would make it mandatory that goods shipped between two Canadian points would be transported in Canadian vessels manned by Canadian crews.

Davis has expressed his opposition to this move previously and said Tuesday it would have the effect of increasing not only shipping rates but the cost of trucking and rail as well.

He said it would eliminate the international competition that now exists on goods shipped from one end of Canada to the other by way of the Panama Canal.

On port development, he said while there are federal subsidies in Quebec and the Maritimes for such development, the user at B.C.'s major ports pays 100 per cent.

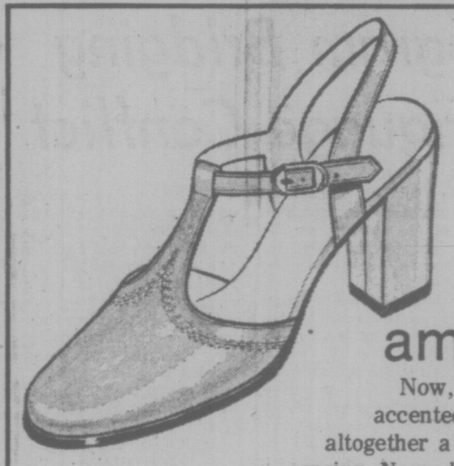

Davis also said B.C. would like to know about national airline costs to determine whether users in B.C. are in effect paying more than 100 per cent for the use of the airline ir order to subsidize operations in eastern Canada.

Taxpayers Fleeced, Says Lauk

The British Columbia legislature was told Tuesday the government broke an election promise in increasing taxes and spending in its 1976-77 budget.

Gary Lauk (NDP—Vancouver Centre) said the Social Creadit Party promised during the Dec. 11 election campaign that if elected it would cut back on spending and freeze taxes.

Now that the party is in office, it has called for more spending than the previous New Democratic Party administration and through increased taxes is "fleecing B.C. taxpayers."

MASSIVE NAVAL VET REUNION PLANNED

VANCOUVER (CP) — The flags are up and the signal reads: Reunion.

The place is HMCS Discovery in Vancouver and the dates are Aug. 20-22 for a reunion of veterans from the Canadian and Commonwealth navies.

Edward Mason, reunion chairman for the Royal Canadian Naval Association, which is sponsoring the event in conjunction with the Vancouver Naval Veterans Association, says he expects between 5,000 and 6,000 sailors to show up for the reunion, the first in British Columbia since the Second World War.

"We're renting a circus big top that will be put up on the parade square at Discovery Island in Stanley Park to accommodate the overflow crowd," Mr. Mason said.

"It'll be the first time the navy has really returned to Vancouver since the end of the Second World War."

Mr. Mason, who served on the Canadian cruiser Uganda in the South Pacific during the war, said the three-day event will include a full naval ball and banquet, salmon barbeque, cruises and a hoped-for appearance of some Canadian warships, "exercises permitting."

Reunion organizers are budgeting to break even on costs with each guest charged $15 for the three days and three nights.

Not only are veterans invited, but active service sailors —admirals ("Some have already accepted our invitation.") seamen, stokers and any other rate, male or female—are also welcome, says Mr. Mason.

The Royal Canadian Naval Association has regular reunions, but this will be the first in 30 years on the West Coast and to mark the occasion, sailors from Australia, New Zealand, Britain and other Commonwealth countries are invited.

Mr. Mason says most of the veterans will be into their 50s and older, including Vancouver's oldest navy veteran, 92-year-old Freddy Whitcomb, an ex-Royal Marine.

"Yes, I'm certainly going to attend, although I don't think many of my friends will be there, most of them are gone now," said Mr. Whitcomb.

He left the Royal Marines in 1923, but has been an active veteran ever since.

(Mr. Mason says any veterans wanting details of the reunion should write him at 1838 Riverside Drive, North Vancouver, B.C., or Barney Sansom, 4123 William Street, Burnaby, 2, B.C. V5C 3J5.)

BISHOPS BEGAN IN HIS CHOIR

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Lt.-Col. Ivor S. Brake has completed 50 years as organist and choirmaster at St. John the Evangelist Anglican Church and for the most part remained hidden from the congregation.

He has worked with four rectors and more than 250 choir members, two of whom became Anglican Church bishops.

Born in England 76 years ago, he went to Victoria, B.C., at the age of 11 and finally to London in 1926.

He joined the church as organist-choirmaster the same year and built the musical portion of the church services to full liturgical value.

He doesn't boast about the music he has composed, music that continues to be contemporary.

He drew up the specifications for the pipe organ which was installed in the church in 1930.

Recognition of his talents is evident in that Col. Brake was Roman Catholic liturgical on a committee which advised planners on the music of the Anglican faith at the time when the Roman Catholic mass was being converted to the vernacular.

He is a shy man with a handsome, grandfatherly face and is easily embarrassed when complimented on his musical talents.

Yet, his uneasiness disappears when he sits at the organ. As his hands and feet play the giant instrument, the music plays the congregation.

Active with the London Symphony Orchestra for many years, Col. Brake continues his interest in the organization. He is chairman of the 1975-76 London Symphony sustaining fund campaign.

He is a former president of the orchestra association.

Lynn Working On New Stadium

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Mike Lynn, general manager of Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League, says his talks with officials of the City of Memphis are serious, not just something to revive interest in a new Minnesota stadium.

Lynn was in Memphis recently for talks with Mayor Wyeth Chandler and city parks commissioner John Malmo about prospects for leasing the Memphis stadium. There are firm plans to expand the 51,000-seat Memphis stadium to handle 72,000 fans if an NFL franchise is obtained.

"I wouldn't be here if it wasn't serious," Lynn said in a telephone interview from Memphis. He said he was assured an NFL team moving to Memphis would get an enviable lease arrangement, including 100 per cent of the beer profits, half the parking revenue and free office and training facilities.

Although there are problems, he said the Vikings were considering shifting two August exhibition games to Memphis this year.

The Vikings have completed their 15-year lease to play at 49,000-seat Metropolitan Stadium in the Minneapolis-St. Paul suburb of Bloomington. Team officials have said the Vikings would be forced to move after 1976 if a stadium with about 65,000 seats is not made available in Minnesota.

Green Tops Dollar List

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Hubert Green's three consecutive tournament victories moved him to the top of the 1976 tour earnings list with a total of $132,006, Professional Golfers' Association statistics showed Tuesday.

Green collected $43,000 for his win on Sunday in the Heritage tournament at Hilton Head Island, S.C. He had won the Doral and Jacksonville Opens in Florida the previous two weeks.

The top 10: Green, $132,006; Hale Irwin, $125,007; Ben Crenshaw, $108,098; J. C. Snead $92,240; Jack Nicklaus, $90,608; Johnny Miller, $87,096; Roger Maltbie, $53,119; Mike Morley, $52,057; Don January $47,955; Mark Hayes $47,946.

Messersmith Offered $1M

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Atlanta Braves owner Ted Turner declined Tuesday to confirm or deny reports that he had offered former Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Andy Messersmith a $1-million, five-year contract.

"I don't know where that came from ... I'm not going to confirm or deny it," Turner said in a telephone interview. "The figure is not for publication. It has not been released."

An Atlanta radio station reported the $1-million figure earlier.

Philippine Finances Shuffled for Oil

MANILA (Reuter) — The first oil strike in the Philippines, after decades of exploration, has spawned a series of financial measures which may have a long-term effect on the business community here.

The size of the strike in the central Philippines off Palawan Island has not yet been determined, but President Ferdinand Marcos, who disclosed the news March 11, has acted quickly to take advantage of its impact.

In a meeting with government officials and stockbrokers three days later, the president deferred indefinitely the implementation of a capital gains tax on stock transfers which was supposed to have taken effect in April.

He also cancelled a central bank ruling against non-residents taking investment profits out of the country. The bank had acted in response to a speculative outbreak of share-buying after the announcement of the oil strike.

Explaining a package of investment incentives, Marcos said: "We are on the threshold of a new era and we would like to say that this is not a day for hard, steady investment."

He pledged a Swiss-style system for foreign exchange deposits in which secrecy and inviolability would be the bywords. "It is our vision that we will establish in the Philippines an asylum even for refugee capital by authorizing secret accounts and under no circumstances will we allow an exception," he said.

The government would also encourage offshore banking in which foreign banks would be authorized to borrow and lend offshore funds through their offices in Manila, he said.

Other points in the program included:

—Continuation of a rule limiting the fluctuation of share prices in any trading day to a ceiling of 100 per cent and a floor price of 50 per cent based on the closing price of the preceding day.

—Closure of the exchanges every Wednesday to allow stockbrokers to cope with clerical and accountting backlogs.

—Allowing the use of United States dollars and other foreign currencies for direct trading in securities.

Despite the measures, the price of oil tumbled on the two Manila stock exchanges after a wave of speculative buying.

Market analysts think the cooling of speculative fever is partly due to the limits on daily share-price movements. There is also thought to have been some early profit-taking.

The oil strike, which still is being assessed for commercial viability, was made off northern Palawan Island, 225 miles southwest of Manila by a consortium comprising Cities Service of the U.S., the Husky Oil Company of Canada and two local firms, Oriental Petroleum and Philippines Overseas.

The search for oil in the Philippines began after the Second World War. It experienced a resurgence after Marcos declared martial law in September, 1972. Among other things he decreed a series of new incentives to attract foreign capital into high-risk exploration ventures.

There are at least six consortia of oil companies engaged in onshore and offshore drilling operations in various parts of the country, but their areas of operation are concentrated in northwest Palawan Island.

The state-owned Philippines National Oil Company (PNOC) also started onshore oil exploration work last year in Cagayan Valley in the north of the country.

PNOC's oil-drilling budget amounted to 30 million pesos ($4.08 million).

About 95 per cent of the Philippines' energy requirements are supplied by petroleum fuels. Along with many other countries, it has suffered from the high cost of crude oil imports.

Central bank records showed payments for the imported petroleum products last year hit the $695-million mark. The figure was 300 per cent more than the oil-import bill for the previous year.

Hancock Glass A Real Pane

BOSTON (AP)—John Hancock Tower, which gained notoriety for losing panes of glass, lost yet another window Monday.

Police said an 8½-by-11-foot pane came crashing down from the 53rd floor of the 61-storey building at about 7:30 a.m. There were no injuries.

It was the sixth pane to fall since a new set of windows was installed last May.

Owners of the building said so many of the first set fell out after the building was completed in 1972 that all 11,000 were replaced.

Howard Society Back on Its Feet

After a shaky two years, the John Howard Society of Vancouver Island is back on its feet with dollars in the bank, an augmented staff, a new constitution and new set of bylaws.

Eighteen months ago the society, dedicated to helping prisoners and ex-prisoners, was in danger of collapse.

The society ended last year with a $7,069 surplus. The year before there was a $2,368 deficit.

At its 39th annual meeting held in Victoria last weekend Ron Reynolds of Nanaimo was elected president.

An 11-man board of directors was also named and included Harry Bootle, Carl Pierce and Theo Berns from Campbell River; Ruth Tickle, Hank Kamstra and Ron Reynolds from Nanaimo; Doug Ayres, Colin Sheppard and Mrs. Lee Colgate from Victoria; and two members at large — Elmer Speidel of Port Alberni and Percy Louie of Cowichan.

Retiring president Mrs. Margaret Heseltine said the constitution was changed so that the objects of the society could better reflect a new emphasis on community involvement and service.

She said the society has decentralized its functions and given greater autonomy to each of the three area councils on the Island.

Anyone interested in penal reform or in helping prisoners or ex-prisoners may join the non-profit group. Membership fee for an individual is $2; for a group, $25.

Oak Bay Cricketers Arrange English Trip

Oak Bay Cricket Club, preparing for a three-week tour of England in July, is looking for player support from other Victoria and District Association sides.

Team spokesman Dave Barnicot said there are a number of playing vacancies open for the club-organized trip.

The first club team from Vancouver Island to tour England, Oak Bay will leave July 2 and play 11 matches against English sides. Also on the itinerary will be a visit to Old Trafford to watch the third test match of the England-West Indies series.

Matches have been scheduled in Sussex, Nottingham, Oxford, Berkshire, Hampshire and Surrey.

"The team will be viewed as a representative side from Canadian cricket," said Barnicot. "As a result, every effort is being made to ensure a well-balanced team that can uphold the strength of cricket in Canada."

Players interested in the tour are asked to contact Barnicot at 382-8221 or 592-4874.

Fighter Pilot Now a Healer

TORONTO (CP) — Shin Sheng has had two contrasting lives. For 20 years, from 1942 to 1962, he served as a combat pilot in the Nationalist Chinese air force, flying more than 200 wartime missions and rising to the rank of colonel.

Today, at the age of 56, he is working as an acupuncturist, following a family tradition in the 5,000-year-old Chinese technique of healing, taught to him by his grandfather when he was a schoolboy.

Since coming to Canada from Taiwan in May, 1974, he has treated more than 80 patients at the Sunnybrook Medical Centre and St. Michael's Hospital in Toronto in a research program to determine the value of acupuncture to people with impaired hearing.

The project has been completed and the results are being tabulated.

Both his father and grandfather were acupuncturists. There was never any question he would follow them.

"I joined the air force to fight the Japanese," he said in an interview. "I intended to return to acupuncture as soon as the fighting was over, but the war with Japan was followed by civil war and pilots were in demand."

Trained in the United States, he was one of the few Chinese aircrew members to survive both wars. Once six Russian-built MiG-15 fighters attacked his plane when he was flying a reconnaissance mission.

While in the air force, Shin Sheng continued to practise acupuncture. By 1970 he had saved enough money to open his own clinic in Taipei.

In 1973 Toronto physician Marion Zazula visited him. When he went to Chicago later that year to visit his son, Dr. Zazula invited him to come to Toronto to give a demonstration to doctors interested in the technique.

Weekend Crafts Fair At UVic

Pottery, macrame, weaving and a variety of crafts from all over Vancouver Island will be on sale at the fourth annual Crafts Fair at University of Victoria Friday and Saturday.

Potters will include Swan Lake Pottery, Ian and Sheila Steel from Nanoose Bay, Bob Hunt, and Brian Potter of Alberta. Elizabeth Honsberger will exhibit macrame lamps and planters and silversmiths Mike Haycock, John and Sandra Arrowsmith and Victoria artist Bente Rehm will include their works.

Glass craftsmen Richard Lette and Chris Aarondson will display tiffany lamps, jardinaires and pendants. Hand embroidered clothes will also be available.

Sale is at the lounge of the Student Union Building, Friday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

WINGS OF SPRING are examined by Winnipeg youngsters, Robin Karlowsky, 11, and Rodger Bestland, 12, who found the live butterfly in the chilly outdoors near their home. A University of Manitoba source said butterflies can emerge early from areas that are sun-bathed and wind-protected.

Alaska Adopts Bold Plan To Rebuild Salmon Runs

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Alaska is preparing to embark on one of the most ambitious economic ventures in the state's history — rebuilding its depleted salmon runs.

A $500 million program is aimed at quadrupling commercial salmon harvest during the next 15 years.

Although the proposal has wide support, ardent advocates agree the bold hatchery plan represents a biological gamble, including the possibility of destroying natural salmon runs.

One spokesman for commercial fishermen said the state must help Alaskans gain a share of the processing market to make the venture profitable.

The plan is the culmination of five years of groundwork by the state fish and game department. Bond issues and oil and gas revenues are expected to pay for it and legislation has been introduced to fund the program.

Under the plan, the state would spend $300 million — mostly on building hatcheries — and set up a $200-million loan program to finance a coordinated network of private and non-profit hatcheries.

Biologists say surplus stocks from the state hatcheries available for commercial harvest would average at least 25 million adult salmon a year by 1994.

The plan also includes a program for rehabilitation of damaged spawning streams and increased research to upgrade management of natural stocks.

By shifting commercial fishing efforts to hatchery-produced runs, officials say other spawning systems could be rebuilt naturally, without extended closures.

The end result would be to boost minimum annual harvests to historic high levels of 100 million fish within 18 years.

After climbing to an average annual harvest of more than 100 million fish in the 1930s, Alaska's bountiful salmon resources were nearly decimated by overfishing in the late 1950s.

After the closure of fish traps in 1959, the harvests rebounded to a peak of about 70 million in 1970, then began a sharp decline to the nearly all-time low catches of less than 25 million for the last three seasons.

If the hatcheries are successful, Governor Jay Hammond and his chief economic adviser, Commissioner of Revenue Sterling Gallagher, said it could mean a $1 billion annual commercial salmon industry.

Substantial revenues would also be generated by increased sports fishing, they say.

Hammond says increased salmon runs would create new cannery jobs and stabilization of the salmon industry would eliminate the need for welfare and disaster-aid programs to support fishermen.

State Representative Edward Naughton, spokesman for Kodiak fishermen, said the state would have to do more than "just produce fish . . . to ensure Alaskans are going to share in the benefits of the program."

Unless the state helps "Alaskans get a bigger share of the fisheries market, the brokers are going to absorb the profits made" on larger catches, Naughton said.

The proposed hatcheries would concentrate on the production of pink and chum salmon, the easiest and cheapest to incubate and rear. They are also the ones that have declined the most in the salmon harvests.

Though he expresses support for the hatcheries plan, William McNeil, a fisheries expert, thinks there is a potential of wiping out most wild salmon.

"We would have been better off moving slowly, but we have no choice now," says McNeil, who took a leave of absence from the national marine fisheries service to advise the state on the hatchery plan.

Bob Roys, director of the state division of fisheries rehabilitation, enhancement and development, plays down the possibility of biological dangers.

He said other countries, among them Canada, Japan and Russia, have shown that problems can be overcome.

McNeil said the possible results of introducing a massive number of artifically bred salmon include:

—Danger of decimating natural stocks. Hatchery-produced salmon could stand 95 per cent exploitation. But how could a fisherman sort wild salmon from their artificially bred cousins?

—Intermingling of hatchery and wild salmon that would mix up the gene pools, possibly altering the fish's all-important homing instinct.

—Wild salmon could catch diseases from hatchery fish.

Hammond agrees that there are possible hazards, "But I think without such an effort we're virtually assured of continuing declines in the fisheries."

Crooked Creek is the largest state-owned hatchery, with a present capacity of 2.7 million eggs. It would be dwarfed by 62 million-egg hatcheries contemplated under Hammond's plan.

Some state biologists wonder if there aren't other answers to the salmon problem, such as enhancing runs through tighter management of natural stocks.

Roy admits the project would be pushing the upper end of technology developed by his department. He said the goal of 25 million hatchery-produced salmon annually by 1994 is achievable with really a maximum effort.

He said Japanese chum salmon incubation hatcheries produced a return of 15 million fish last year. The harvest is expected to climb to 20 million this summer.

U.S. Marshalls Keep Travelling

DERBY, Conn. (AP)—At least two weekends a month Anthony and Mary Dirienzo pack their bags and take off on a three-day trip.

They go by car or plane and the distance can be anywhere from 600 to 3,000 miles.

Their destination is always the same—a prison.

The Dirienzos both work as marshals for the federal government. Anthony is chief United States marshal for Connecticut and Mary is a deputy marshal.

It's the couple's weekend job to transport prisoners from one penal institution to another.

For 13 years they have travelled to prisons in 22 states, as well as Mexico and Puerto Rico.

Mrs. Dirienzo says that because so much travelling is involved in the job of transporting prisoners, the government often appoints the wife of a chief marshal to be deputy marshal. This enables her to accompany her husband.

About the prisoners, she says: "Most of them are surprisingly well-versed and reponsive. Our conversations are very natural and run the gamut from fashions to current world events."

Although Dirienzo is a full-time U.S. marshal, his wife carries the deputy marshal's badge only on weekends. Tuesday through Friday she works as a deputy sheriff for New Haven County in Waterbury Superior Court. That job includes office work and accompanying prisoners to and from the state women's prison at Niantic.

In her role as sheriff she has been instrumental in organizing a junior sheriff program in elementary schools in the area.

"We hope the program will act as a deterrent to crime for the youngsters," she says.

FAMILY LAW TOPIC OF UVIC CONFERENCE

A conference on family law, funded by a $300 grant from the provincial secretary's department, will be held Saturday at University of Victoria.

Co-hosted by the Victoria Status of Women Action Group and the UVic Action group, the workshop will be conducted by Penny Bain of the Vancouver People's Law school.

Delegates to the conference will also be addressed by former provincial status of women co-ordinator Gene Errington.

Bain has taught about women and the law for the VPLS since 1972 and served one year on the Family and Children's Law Commission, matrimonial property group.

Conference will be held in the Elliot Building on campus starting at 8:45 a.m. Registration is $2 and baby-sitting will be available.

ClothTalk by Peter George

We have talked about our SAMUELSOHN suits. I would like to tell you a little bit about our other quality suit line — Pierre Cardin. The clothes are all imported — mostly from France. High arm-holes, suppressed waist and slightly flared skirts give the garment a distinctive tailored look.

In addition to 3-piece suits Cardin is featuring the same styling with 2-piece co-ordinates — slax — jacket. The cloths in this collection are outstanding. The jackets are a lightweight, extremely subtle shepherds plaid. The trousers are also lightweight but in soft flannel. They must be seen to be believed.

The colours of the 3-piece suitings a plain tan, deep blue, and light grey. The co-ordinates come in 2 shades of donegal grey and blue, while the shepherd plaid co-ordinates come in a gorgeous green, light chocolate and a rich blue.

Prices are less than you would expect for this quality cloth and styling. Suits are $260.00 while co-ordinates are $265.00. Truly a small investment for the pleasure and fashion.

City Hall Workers Walk Out

About 80 outside workers at city hall are off the job today in an escalating walkout to protest the suspension of two fellow workers.

The walkout started early this morning when about 40 members of Local 50 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees failed to show up for work and by noon, almost 80 outside employees were off the job.

A source said two city workers, a sub-foreman and a laborer, were given three-day suspensions Tuesday after an underground cable was damaged by a street crew.

Local 50 president Jim Walker said the local has filed a grievance, but the union members decided to act on their own.

He said the executive is attempting to keep the men on the job but "the situation is deteriorating" with more workers booking off as they hear about the situation.

At press time, a meeting was being held with Walker, city manager Jim Bramley and personnel manager Terry Fitzpatrick in an attempt to resolve the problem.

ROBBERY TOOK 24 MINUTES

Brinks Haul $2.8 Million

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Border points and airports are under tight security today in the wake of a $2.8 million robbery from a Brinks armored car here Tuesday.

The amount of cash taken exceeds that taken from a Brink's Inc., express office in Boston Jan. 17, 1950, by eight masked men who got away with $2,775,39.12 of which $1,281,211.28 was in cash.

Police believe that at least three of the five bandits who levelled a Second World War vintage machinegun at the truck driver are Americans and would be headed for home.

They also feel that a recent TV movie based on the earlier armored car robbery could have provided the spark for Tuesday's heist.

Rewards totalling $125,000 have already been offered for information leading to capture and conviction of the robbers and recovery of the money, which is in small bills and virtually untraceable.

The robbery which police term "highly professional" too just 24 minutes to exceute.

When the Brinks truck pulled into a laneway near the main branch of the Royal Bank, there was a white panel truck already parked there.

The armored car stopped behind it.

Three guards entered the bank and came out with bags of money for distribution to branches of the Royal which they loaded on the Brinks truck.

When they entered the bank for more bags, police said, a second truck pulled up behind the Brinks car and the driver got out and approached the armored car.

He banged on the door and motioned for the driver to look at the white van.

At that time, police said, the rear doors of the white van were kicked open, revealing a 50-millimetre machine gun manned by two men. The gun was mounted on a tripod and weighted down by sand bags.

Police said one of the bandits ordered the driver to "open the door." They were the only words spoken by the robbers.

"With the machine-gun pointed at him, the driver opened the door of the armored car and surrendered," police said.

"He was handcuffed by one of the men and forced to lie on the floorboards.

"The first truck then pulled away and the second man followed driving the Brinks truck. The guards inside the bank never knew what had happened." The bandits left their other truck in the alley. There were no shots fired.

The thieves drove the armored car through the busy financial district and along the Bonaventure Expressway to a golf course on Nun's Island, an upper class area on the outskirts of Montreal.

Police found the armored truck about two hours later. Also found nearby was the white van and the machine-gun.

The driver was found handcuffed and gagged in the rear of the truck.

Police said they have few leads and are concentrating their investigation on determining where the machine-gun came from.

"It has to be stolen," one detective said. "You obviously can't buy this kind of gun in a Canadian store."

Insp. Jean-Claude Rondou, heading the investigation said the gun may have come from the United States.

"But you can smuggle piano across the border, and they could easily smuggle a gun like that," Insp. Rondou said.

Towing Contract Runs Out

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Insurance Corporation of British Columbia and the towing industry failed to reach agreement Tuesday to renew contract on towing rates that expires today.

Ron Baldwin, manager of the Automotive Retailers Association (ARA) which represents independent towing companies, said Tuesday night the ICBC board of directors has refused the association's request for a 12 per cent increase over 1975 towing rates.

Baldwin also said ICBC has told tow truck operators they will nt get any increase, not even a 10-cent mileage increase.

As a result, he said, the industry cannot provide towing services for the corporation at an uneconomical rate, and will, effective today, terminate its agreement with ICBC.

Baldwin said the end of the agreement with ICBC shouldn't make any difference to motorists in trouble. But it does mean individual companies can charge whatever rate they can afford to work at.

He did not say what effect the change will have on billing procedures, nor did he rule out the possibility that motorists using a towing service after an insured accident would be billed directly.

He said the request for an increase was contained in an ARA brief to the corporation. The increase would have meant that an $11 towing charge would have increased to $12.50 and a $16 charge to $18.

Closer Gov't Watch On Oil Companies

OTTAWA (CP) — Tougher monitoring of oil companies will be imposed this spring to ensure most of the coming oil price increase is spent on exploration and development of new supplies.

Energy Minister Alastair Gilespie said Tuesday he plans to require mandatory reporting of the money each company spends.

"There is already some monitoring of the industry but I'm not satisfied that it is sufficient for our needs," the minister said.

He told the Commons national resources committee that the monitoring system will be announced at the same time as the new northern oil and gas regulations, likely sometime in early May.

Gillespie announced the new monitoring plan after T. C. Douglas (NDP — Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands) asked what guarantees consumers had that the higher prices they pay will bring on new supplies.

Government ministers already have said that, if the money isn't spent on exploration and development, further action might be taken, presumably to tax away the additional money.

Tax measures now provide an incentive to the companies to pump money back into exploration, Gillespie added.

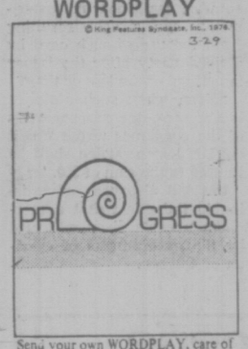

With a $1 price increase, the companies would get an extra 25 cents even without additional investment, while the provinces would get 48 cents and Ottawa 27 cents, he said.

But if the companies reinvested 50 cents of the increase, they would get 53 cents of the $1, the provinces 44 cents and Ottawa three cents.

Gillespie repeated for the meeting that consumers can expect an increase of between $1.05 and $2 a barrel on July 1, that would add between four and eight cents to a gallon of heating oil or gasoline.

He said outside the committee that meetings of government officials on oil prices have been continuing, but no further formal negotiations are expected until Prime Minister Trudeau meets the provincial premiers, probably in early May.

Keep Out, Arafat Tells U.S.

BEIRUT (AP) — Palestinian guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat has told the United States not to interfere in the Lebanese civil war.

Noting that the U.S. 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean is within 24 hours sailing of Lebanon, Arafat told a news conference Tuesday:

"America says its fleet can arrive on these shores within 24 hours. We now are within range of the fleet. I say welcome America. You will sink in Lebanon as you sank in Vietnam."

Defence Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said in Washington today the U.S. is not currently planning to evacuate American citizens but is standing by in case an evacuation is called.

Meanwhile, leftist Moslem chief Kamal Junblatt said he is under pressure from Syria to stop the Lebanese struggle.

Syrians have stopped a shipment of 4,000 weapons and seven million rounds of ammunition from reaching Lebanese Moslems and have stationed 18,000 soldiers on their side of the border to seal access routes into Lebanon, Junblatt said.

However, Junblatt told reporters before the meeting he still demands that rightist Christian forces agree to the resignation of President Suleiman Franjieh and to far-reaching changes in the distribution of political power before any ceasefire.

NEWS BRIEFS

OTTAWA (CP) — The population of Canada on Jan. 1 was estimated at 22,998,000, an increase of 339,000 from a year earlier, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

Prisoner Burns Self

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — Francois Tallon Ferland, a prisoner in the B.C. Penitentiary, died at midnight Monday night by setting fire to his cell. A penitentiary spokesman said Ferland apparently poured a flammable fluid over himself and his bed and set it afire.

IRA Robs Train

DUBLIN (Reuter) — A gang of masked gunmen early today held up the Cork-to-Dublin mail train in what police believe is the latest of a series of fund-raising raids by the outlawed Irish Republican Army IRA.

Goal Is Austerity

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Argentina's new military president has promised an eventual return to democracy, but called first for "sacrifices and austerity" to stamp out corruption and terrorism. "The armed forces repeat their decision to assure the existence, in the future, of political parties," Lt. Gen. Jorge Videla said Tuesday.

Pictures Slashed

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuter) — A knife-wielding man ran amok here today at an exhibition of phtographs by Lord Snowdon, slashing several pictures and cutting the throat of a guard. Police said Lord Snowdon, estranged husband of Princess Margaret, was not at the exhibition at the time.

Teachers Make Sure MLAs Get School Cost Message

VANCOUVER (CP) — At least one teacher from each B.C. school district will try to convince his local MLA in Victoria Thursday to back teachers' demands for increased education spending.

Bill Broadley, who was elected today to his second term as president of the B.C. Teachers Federation, is financing the venture but it is not intended to be an organized rally.

He said the purpose of the trip is to make certain that each member of the legislature realizes what will happen if the Social Credit government doesn't provide more money.

The BCTF president said most school districts he has heard from have indicated they will increase local taxes if the government doesn't come up with more money because the local boards don't intent to cut back on their education programs.

The teachers voted to raise about $1 million through federation fees for an action fund to support their political action programs. Members voted overwhelmingly in favor of raising fees to about $200 from the $165 teachers expected to pay this year.

Teachers left allocation of the money up to the discretion of the new executive, which was being elected today.

Meanwhile, deputy education minister Walter Hardwick told the convention that he and others in the department are out of touch with many education developments in the province.

"Our system is not now managed in a fashion in which we in the department know much of what is going on in education terms," Hardwick said. "I'm concerned about our ability to manage the system — to flag problems when they arise and develop mechanisms to correct them.

He listed several shortcomings of the department and suggested the coming year of "fiscal restraint" will allow for time to review those areas.

He spoke specifically of a review of class sizes, which the BCTF fears will increase under the new education budget.

Hardwick also promised studies and co-operation with the BCTF and the public on concerns over students' ability to read and write, an increased interest in technical training and the problems of children with learning difficulties.

"The evidence from the human resources and justice departments is that there is a close correlation between success in school . . . and social offences at a later date.

HOUSE ARGUES INTO MORNING

Business in the B.C. Legislature bogged down as members wrangled over procedure until the early morning today.

The opposition protested it need further informatin before speedy approval could be given to a bill approving up to a $400 million government loan and a $1.222 billion interim supply bill. See Page 60. Other House stories are on Page 72.

Bureaucrats Pay Cheques Checked

Local government bureaucrats tend to be regarded by the jaundiced eye of the taxpayer as knitters of red tape, procrastinators and pompous purveyors of restrictive rules and regulations.

But, in the Greater Victoria area at least, there are compensations for these much-maligned officials.

An article by five Times municipal reporters on Page 19 today looks at the salaries paid to senior public officials by the municipalities of Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquiamlt, as well as the Capital Regional District, noting some interesting facts and drawing certain comparisons.

Deborah Wins Trip to Visit the Stars

Deborah Sing, 19, of Saanich, is looking forward to an all-expense trip to Hollywood as the winner of the Times-CJVI visit-the-stars contest.

"This is wonderful," she ssaid Tuesday afternoon after the official drawing. "I didn't think I had a chance."

The win certainly was not easy.

Deborah marked down Al Pacino as best actor, then at the last moment scratched it out and changes it to the correct winner Jack Nicholson before mailing it in.

Then she arrived at the post office at the eleventh hour — literally. It was 11 p.m. Saturday, one hour before the deadline, when her letter went down the chute.

Making it all chancier, of the 4,600 who entered the contest, 30 per cent had the right answers and Deborah's name was drawn from among 1,380 finalists.

"I watched the Academy Awards and I knew I had the right answers but I was afraid it was too late. I am very happy about this because now we can go to Hollywood this summer."

"We" includes her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Sing, of 1715 Blair, along with Deborah and her sister and three brothers.

The prize pays expenses for two and the rest of the family will be paying their own way.

"I decided that if I won we would go as a family. My brother is the only one who has been to Los Angeles. He went down with the Mount Douglas High School band. He can act as our tour guide."

Deborah is a graduate of Mount Douglas and is employed at Eaton's.

Three consolation prizes of a dinner for two at The Empress and two passes to an Odeon theatre were awarded to those whose names were drawn second, third and fourth from among the 1,380 finalists.

They are Patricia Haram of 6788 Blanchard Road in Sooke, Helen Pride of 203-1002 Pakington Street and Betty Marshall of 41-1706 Newton Street.

Ironically Deborah won her trip by correctly predicting a clean sweep for One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest but she has not yet seen the movie.

"I read the book in high school and I thought that if they could make a movie out of it, it would be quite an achievement. I saw Jaws and I was very impressed but I took a chance on One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest on the basis of the book."

She is an avid movie fan.

Nuclear Submarine Is a Big Monster

You are looking at the Trident Monster.

That's what leaflets told hundreds of Victorians who this morning watched or took part in a demonstration march from Beacon Hill Park to the Parliament Buildings.

The march, featuring a giant symbolic representation fo a missile-carrying submarine, was in protest of the construction of the Trident nuclear base 60 miles south of Victoria in Bangor, Washington.

The watchers saw a conglomeration of bamboo polies, rope and black plastic and were told that they were looking at a 550-foot-long monster — exactly the same size as the nuclear submarines.

But what about a look at the people behind the Trident Monster?

The leaflets told those who read them only that the march was led by the Pacific Life Community. What, then, is the Pacific Life Community?

In trying to get a breakdown on an organization, usually you look for the leader — the president or chairperson. But the PLC has no leader, no specific chairperson. And that's interesting, to start witn.

"We rotate spokespeople and try to do as much sharing as possible," explains Jim Douglass of the Vancouver PLC group. "The whole philosophy of the Community is exploring non-violence as a way of life and the way we achieve this non-violence is by as much sharing as possible."

Members of both the Victoria and Vancouver Communities share their fears of a nuclear attack on the Pacific Northwest with American PLC groups in San Francisco and Seattle. The four groups meet regularly and discuss ways of fighting — with non-violence, of course, — the Bangor Trident base.

"We're a trans-national community," says Douglass. "Trident is threatening our entire life on this globe. It will be the most destructive system ever devised by anyone. It's on the border so it's an ideal opportunity for a trans-national campaign. It would be just perfect if this violent thing could be stopped by non-violent means."

Boosted by the great success non-violent demonstrations and public pressure had in stopping the Vietnam War, the PLC has already gone on the peace warpath.

Today's demonstration was only one of several already field.

Community members, joined by the Bangor-based Concerned About Trident movement, have held three demonstrations at the base itself. In one, they ran into a little trouble when they went over the fence and planted a symbolic garden to show that the land being used for military purposes could be used instead for growing food to feed people.

In December, seven community members, including two from Victoria, went on a cross-Canada trek, campaigning against the Trident base. They gathered more than 10,000 signatures in support and present ed the petition to External afairs Minster Alan MacEachen and Prime Minister Trudeau.

As recently as this month, though Defence Minister James Richardson made it clear that the federal government will make no protest to the United states. He said the base was essential.

But the PLC people, many of whom admit to being long-time activists who aren't afraid to fight laws, non-violently, or go to jail, are undaunted.

Ideally, they would like to see the federal government say Canada does not support Trident. Eventually, they would like to see the Strait of Juan de Fuca declared a nuclear free zone.

Demonstrators carry Trident 'monster' with black flags each representing a warhead

In the mean time, they will continue putting their point across and hope someone listens. Today they met with the NDP caucus and Thursday the PLC people will put on their slide show entitled "From Trident To Life" for the benefit of the Socred caucus.

er background who has been in Canada six years, "The Community is working on all social concerns." As well as Trident and its effects, these concerns include "political awareness, sexual deiscrimin-

It is, at the moment, greatly concerned about Trident, but the Pacific Life Community goes deeper than that.

Explain two Victoria members, laborer Jim Hennebury who came from Montreal and student soon-to-become teacher John Tomlinson an American with a Quakatin awareness and Third World awareness."

"In our meetings we use a lot of interesting techniques — some poople call it re-inventing the wheel," laughs John. "We set up a group decision-making process, with an agenda prepared in a creative fashion. And we don't take any action unless we reach agreement by concensus.

"It's extremely creative and invigorating . . . that no one person has to take charge of a meeting."

And as we part, there's an invitation to "come along one night and sit in on one of our sessions."

Thanks John. I'd like that.

B.C. People 'Expendable'

Catholic Bishop of Victoria Remi de Roo today joined Pacific Life Community in condemning the Trident nuclear missile base being built at Bangor, Washington.

A statement from the bishop was read at noon in front of the provincial legislature during a protest rally organized by Pacific Life Community to generate awareness of the submarine base's aggressive purpose.

The bishop said he expressed alarm to the prime minister a year ago, joining with others to ask for Canada's intervention in Washington, D.C. to stop the escalation of nuclear force.

"Since then the project has developed from 10 submarines to 30. The implications are that the total population of the lower B.C. mainland is considered expendable in the event of nuclear attack," De Roo wrote.

He noted the cost of building the base just 60 miles across Puget Sound from Victoria could better be spent solving part of the global food problem or to produce new energy sources.

"Hungry people learn from us that the domination of other countries by military power and terror is more important than a just society where nuclear warfare would be out of the question," he said, calling for others to protest "this disastrous project."

"Silence on our part makes us accomplices to this warlike gesture."

Canadians and Americans should direct themselves to more effective involvement in the cause of social justice — "for there can be no true peace without a foundation on justice."

Family's Aged Mutt Gave Fire Alarm

A deaf 15-year-old mongrel named Twinklestar has been credited with saving his two owners from harm when fire broke out in the night at their Saanich home.

A spokesman for the Saanich fire department said today Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Keel were awakened at about 11:30 p.m. Tuesday by the sound of their dog barking.

Keel told firemen he knew something was wrong as Twinklestar is stone-deaf, partly lame, weak-eyed and seldom — if ever — barks.

He went downstairs to investigate and when he opened the kitchen door he discovered the room full of smoke.

While his wife called the fire department he tried to extinguish the blaze which was confined to a cupboard under the sink. An eight-week-old pup also owned by the Keels was overcome by smoke and died.

"Twinklestar's sure getting lots of loving today — I'll tell you," Mrs. Keel said in an interview today. "Her teeth are getting soft but we'll see that she gets the best. . ."

Mrs. Keel said Twinklestar, a poodle-pomeranian cross, was a Christmas gift puppy from her son.

Damage to the house, located near the Central Saanich boundary, wass estimated at $2,000.

Flu Deaths Hit at Random

Number of deaths among elderly patients at Saanich Peninsula Hospital has jumped from the usual two or three a month to 13 this month, with flu seen as a contributing factor.

At the same time, the random pattern in which flu has hit this winter continues, with only the peninsula hospital reporting an unquestionably higher death rate among eight hospitals queried.

Dr. Allan Arneil, regional health officer, said Tuesday the here-and-there pattern has been reflected throughout the winter, with absentee rates at some schools high while others remained at normal.

While attendance figures at schools appear to be swinging back to average, Arneil said the flu is still appearing among adults, some of whom have had two or even three bouts.

"I wouldn't like to give the all clear yet as far as flu in concerned."

Arneil said flu among hospital patients tends to push the mortality rate up in two ways, first through directly related diseases like pneumonia, and then by reducing a patient's resistance to unrelated conditions.

The 75-bed paninsula hospital provides long-term care for mostly elderly patients and administrator John Stevens said Tuesday it appears at least eight of this month's deaths were flu-related. The hospital earlier stopped patient visiting for two weeks because of flu.

At Gorge Road Hospital, where there are 300 extended care beds, administrator Bill Morrison said the flu appeared to hit staff harder than patients. He estimated there have been two or three flu-related deaths in recent weeks.

George Harrison, administrator for four hospitals operated by the Juan de Fuca Hospital Society, said the average death rate of about 14 a month in the 320 extended care beds has remained unchanged.

Spokesmen at Victoria's two general hospitals say that only about eight deaths among patients in close to 1,000 beds at Royal Jubilee and Victoria General can be related to the flu in the past couple of months.

While the general effect of flu has been higher than usual this winter, Dr. A. A. Larsen, provincial epidemiologist, said the outbreak is still within the "usual" picture.

ESCAPERS TOOK WRONG RIDE

An escape bid by two young inmates at the Jordan River detention camp Tuesday ended as they hitch-hiked on the West Coast Road — they got a lift from a corrections officer.

Sooke RCMP said today Gary Allan Smith and Christopher Ward Ingalls, both 18, were picked up at 3:30 p.m. only four hours after they had been reported missing.

A corrections officer driving to work spotted the pair walking beside the road about three miles from Jordan River and four miles from the camp.

The two, drenched by heavy rains in the area Tuesday afternoon, had apparently been trying to hitchhike.

"They got a ride with the wrong person," a camp spokesman quipped today.

The youths have been transferred to the more secure penal premises on Wilkinson Road. Charges of being unlawfully at large will be laid, Tim Thimson, acting director of Wilkinson Road jail said.

So far this year five inmates have walked away from the Jordan River camp.

Ask The Times

Q. Queen Elizabeth is the queen of Canada: why then is the standard carried on the car of the lieutenant-governor of B.C. — the queen's representative here — the Union Jack and not our Canadian flag? — M.J.

A. It has nothing to do with the flag of Canada at any given time. Long before the adoption of the maple leaf ensign the queen's standard for each province was determined to be the Union Jack, containing the coat of arms of that province in the centre, to be used by lieutenant-governors. The queen's personal standard is used when she visits in person.

Red Tape's in the Black

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

They're called the bureaucrats.

In local government they are the people who supervise and manage, who write reports and sign letters, who implement the policies established by their elected bosses — the mayors and aldermen.

They inhabit carpeted offices with comfortable chairs, where they are waited on by attentive secretaries.

They draw up plans and concepts, rules and regulations. They collect money from the rest of us under an impressive variety of taxes, levies, import and licence fees.

They're the cause of a great deal of frustration; the butt of much sarcasm, anger and abuse.

But — and it's a big but — there are compensations. It's a steady, pensionable job, reasonably free of ulcer-causing anxiety and tension.

There are often evening meetings to attend but by and large it's a nine-to-five sort of pattern with at least an hour off for lunch plus morning and afternoon coffe breaks.

And besides, the money isn't bad. Compared with many other jobs, in fact, the money isn't bad at all.

Predictably, as the table below indicates, the city of Victoria pays its senior officials higher salaries than those paid by its municipal neighbors. In almost every case a Victoria bureaucrat receives significantly more than his counterparts in Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt.

Without drawing any conclusions whatever but merely to satisfy idle curiosity, let's see what other fact the table reveals:

The 10 highest-salaried officials in the city will receive this year, even if they are paid only 1975 rates with no increase, a minimum of $329,948. As one mill in 1976 will produce $239,074, that means more than one and one-third mills of this year's expected tax levy of around 50 mills (or more than 2.5 per cent of the individual's tax bill) will go to pay these officials.

Seven Victoria officials earn more than $30,000 a year and 12 earn between $25,000 and $30,000.

In Saanich two officials top the $30,000 mark, while Oak Bay and Esquimalt have only one official each in that rarefied salary bracket.

The four municipal engineers will receive a total of $124,235.

The four treasurers will get $108,034.

The four police chiefs — Esquimalt chief Arthur Burton also doubles as fire chief — will be paid $116,580.

In Victoria the police chief gets $3,048 more than the fire chief. In Saanich the difference is $3,900 between the chiefs' salaries. But Oak Bay pays its police and fire chiefs the same ($24,000).

The eight most senior staff in the Victoria engineer's department at City Hall are paid a total of $226,096.

Taxpayers of Victoria, Saanich and Oak Bay fork up a total of $9,074 per month in salaries to their respective municipal administrators: Jim Bramley, Bill Tremayne and Stewart Fleming.

All fascinating facts, no doubt, but they don't provide any answer to the central question: Are our bureaucrats worth these salaries?

The answer to that is virtually impossible to establish, buried as it is in a mass of complex factors including professional competence and qualifications, past experience, productivity and value judgments on the responsibilities of the job in question.

But, even if the non-union professionals don't emulate their CUPE colleagues in heavily emphasizing the "parity" argument in salary increase submissions, some comparisons are drawn and the going rate for the jobs does have relevance.

Where, then, do we look for such comparisons?

Although the city's personnel director cites a number of similarities between Victoria and Burnaby, a glance at the urban population structure of Canadian cities shows that nowhere is there any real counterpart to the balkanized web of municipalities in Greater Victoria.

Singling out the specific case of Victoria itself makes rough comparisons a little easier, however. The city's estimated population as of Jan. 1 this year was 70,000, and it is the hub of a metropolitan area inhabited by some 230,000 people.

Notwithstanding a number of demographic differences, one of the closest parallels can be drawn with Kitchener, Ont.

Kitchener has a city population of 130,000; its "twin," Waterloo has another 50,000; and together they form part of a metropolitan area comprising seven municipalities and a total population of some 275,000.

Kitchener has 1,102 employees on the city payroll. Victoria has about 750 permanent staff plus another 200 "casual or temporary" employees engaged for specific events at the Memorial Arena, for summer parks jobs and so on.

Comparing six of the highest-paid Victoria officials with their Kitchener counterparts shows that three are paid less but the other three are paid more. And one of the employees in the latter category gets a lot more than he would doing the same job in the Ontario city.

At $35,664 a year, planning director Geoff Greenhalgh receives $5,528 more than his opposite number, who is paid $30,136.

Fire Chief Eric Simmons is paid $2,710 more than the Kitchener fire chief; city solicitor Jakob de Villiers $1,162 more than his counterpart.

But the following three officials are less well paid than their opposite numbers (annual in brackets):

City manager Jim Bramley ($2,680); comptroller-treasurer Mason Sheldrick ($3,518); engineer John Sansom ($1,254).

Comparisons with conditions south of the border are probably pointless, because of the significantly lower cost of living (and hence salaries) in the U.S.

Even so, it's surprising to note just how wide the gulf is between Victoria bureaucrats' salaries and those currently paid by the administration of a slightly smaller sized town in Washington

Bellevue, Wash., with a population of 66,000 and metropolitan-area population of 119,000, employing 530 personnel, pays most of its department heads about the same as deputies and senior assistants at Victoria City Hall.

All seven Victoria officials in the $30,000-plus group receive substantially more than their Bellevue counterparts.

Planner Greenhalgh, engineer Sansom and solicitor de Villiers each receives $9,192 more.

Manager Bramley enjoys the smallest differential in the group, and even his salary is $3,120 more than the Bellevue manager receives.

Aggregating the seven salaries, we find that it costs Victoria $45,828 a year more than Bellevue to employ these officials. The respective totals: Victoria $242,580; Bellevue $196,752.

Ambulance Drivers Close to Contract

Provincial ambulance drivers are nearing settlement of their first master contract with the B.C. government since it took over ambulance services in the province almost two years ago.

The 425 members of the ambulance drivers local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees are expecting final Treasury Board approval of the first contract "soon", said George High, a member of the local's bargaining committee.

The local, which represents all drivers, including those in Victoria, employed by the Emergency Health Services Commission, was certified as the bargaining unit in June, 1974.

Actual bargaining began in August, 1975, and a final contract was hammered out about three weeks ago and approved by the union and the Public Service Commission.

But the contract must have treasury board approval before provisions, including pay raises, take effect.

City Hall Workers Walk Out

About 80 outside workers at city hall are off the job today in an escalating walkout to protest the suspension of two fellow workers.

The walkout started early this morning when about 40 members of Local 50 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees failed to show up for work and by noon, almost 80 outside employees were off the job.

A source said two city workers, a sub-foreman and a laborer, were given three-day suspensions Tuesday after an underground cable was damaged by a street crew.

Local 50 president Jim Walker said the local has filed a grievance, but the union members decided to act on their own.

He said the executive is attempting to keep the men on the job but "the situation is deteriorating" with more workers booking off as they hear about the situation.

At press time, a meeting was being held with Walker, city manager Jim Bramley and personnel manager Terry Fitzpatrick in an attempt to resolve the problem.

ROBBERY TOOK 24 MINUTES

Brinks Haul $2.8 Million

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Border points and airports are under tight security today in the wake of a $2.8 million robbery from a Brinks armored car here Tuesday.

The amount of cash taken exceeds that taken from a Brink's Inc., express office in Boston Jan. 17, 1950, by eight masked men who got away with $2,775,39.12 of which $1,281,211.29 was in cash.

Police believe that at least three of the five bandits who levelled a Second World War vintage machine-gun at the truck driver are Americans and would be headed for home.

They also feel that a recent TV movie based on the earlier armored car robbery could have provided the spark for Tuesday's heist.

Rewards totalling $125,000 have already been offered for information leading to capture and conviction of the robbers and recovery of the money, which is in small bills and virtually untraceable.

The robbery which police term "highly professional" took just 24 minutes to execute.

When the Brinks truck pulled into a laneway near the main branch of the Royal Bank, there was a white panel truck already parked there.

The armored car stopped behind it.

Three guards entered the bank and came out with bags of money for distribution to branches of the Royal which they loaded on the Brinks truck.

When they entered the bank for more bags, police said, a second truck pulled up behind the Brinks car and the driver got out and approached the armored car.

He banged on the door and motioned for the driver to look at the white van.

At that time, police said, the rear doors of the white van were kicked open, revealing a 50-millimetre machine gun manned by two men. The gun was mounted on a tripod and weighted down by sand bags.

Police said one of the bandits ordered the driver to "open the door." They were the only words spoken by the robbers.

"With the machine-gun pointed at him, the driver opened the door of the armored car and surrendered," police said.

"He was handcuffed by one of the men and forced to lie on the floorboards.

"The first truck then pulled away and the second man followed driving the Brinks truck. The guards inside the bank never knew what had happened." The bandits left their other truck in the alley. There were no shots fired.

The thieves drove the armored car through the busy financial district and along the Bonaventure Expressway to a golf course on Nun's Island, an upper class area on the outskirts of Montreal.

Police found the armored truck about two hours later. Also found nearby was the white van and the machine-gun.

The driver was found handcuffed and gagged in the rear of the truck.

Police said they have few leads and are concentrating their investigation on determining where the machine-gun came from.

"It has to be stolen," one detective said. "You obviously can't buy this kind of gun in a Canadian store."

Insp. Jean-Claude Rondou, heading the investigation said the gun may have come from the United States.

"But you can smuggle pianos across the border, and they could easily smuggle a gun like that," Insp. Rondou said.

Towing Contract Runs Out

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Insurance Corporation of British Columbia and the towing industry failed to reach agreement Tuesday to renew contracts on towing rates that expires today.

Ron Baldwin, manager of the Automotive Retailers Association (ARA) which represents independent towing companies, said Tuesday night the ICBC board of directors has refused the association's request for a 12 per cent increase over 1975 towing rates.

Baldwin also said ICBC has told tow truck operators they will not get any increase, not even a 10-cent mileage increase.

As a result, he said, the industry cannot provide towing services for the corporation at an uneconomical rate, and will, effective today, terminate its agreement with ICBC.

Baldwin said the end of the agreement with ICBC shouldn't make any difference to motorists in trouble. But it does mean individual companies can charge whatever rate they can afford to work at.

He did not say what effect the change will have on billing procedures, nor did he rule out the possibility that motorists using a towing service after an insured accident would be billed directly.

He said the request for an increase was contained in an ARA brief to the corporation. The increase would have meant that an $11 towing charge would have increased to $12.50 and a $16 charge to $18.

Closer Gov't Watch On Oil Companies

OTTAWA (CP) — Tougher monitoring of oil companies will be imposed this spring to ensure most of the coming oil price increase is spent on exploration and development of new supplies.

Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said Tuesday he plans to require mandatory reporting of the money each company spends.

"There is already some monitoring of the industry but I'm not satisfied that it is sufficient for our needs," the minister said.

He told the Commons national resources committee that the monitoring system will be announced at the same time as the new northern oil and gas regulations, likely sometime in early May.

Gillespie announced the new monitoring plan after T. C. Douglas (NDP — Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands) asked what guaratees consumers had that the higher prices they pay will bring on new supplies.

Government ministers already have said that, if the money isn't spent on exploration and development, further action might be taken, presumably to tax away the additional money.

Tax measures now provide an incentive to the companies to pump money back into exploration, Gillespie added.

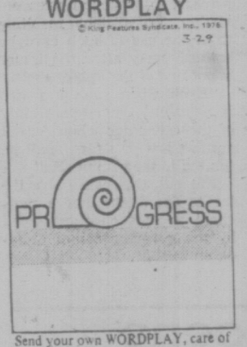

With a $1 price increase, the companies would get an extra 25 cents even without additional investment, while the provinces would get 48 cents and Ottawa 27 cents, he said.

But if the companies reinvested 50 cents of the increase, they would get 53 cents of the $1, the provinces 44 cents and Ottawa three cents.

Gillespie repeated for the meeting that consumers can expect an increase of between $1.05 and $2 a barrel on July 1, that would add between four and eight cents to a gallon of heating oil or gasoline.

He said outside the committee that meetings of government officials on oil prices have been continuing, but no further formal negotiations are expected until Prime Minister Trudeau meets the provincial premiers, probably in early May.

Keep Out, Arafat Tells U.S.

BEIRUT (AP) — Palestinian guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat has told the United States not to interfere in the Lebanese civil war.

Noting that the U.S. 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean is within 24 hours sailing of Lebanon, Arafat told a news conference Tuesday:

"America says its fleet can arrive on these shores within 24 hours. We now are within range of the fleet. I say welcome America. You will sink in Lebanon as you sank in Vietnam."

Defence Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said in Washington today the U.S. is not currently planning to evacuate American citizens but is standing by in case an evacuation is called.

Meanwhile, leftist Moslem chief Kamal Junblatt said he is under pressure from Syria to stop the Lebanese struggle.

Syrians have stopped a shipment of 4,000 weapons and seven million rounds of ammunition from reaching Lebanese Moslems and have stationed 18,000 soldiers on their side of the border to seal access routes into Lebanon, Junblatt said.

However, Junblatt told reporters before the meeting he still demands that rightist Christian forces agree to the resignation of President Suleiman Franjieh and to far-reaching changes in the distribution of political power before any ceasefire.

OTTAWA (CP) — The population of Canada on Jan. 1 was estimated at 22,998,000, an increase of 339,000 from a year earlier, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

Prisoner Burns Self

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — Francois Tallon Ferland, a prisoner in the B.C. Penitentiary, died at midnight Monday night by setting fire to his cell. A penitentiary spokesman said Ferland apparently poured a flammable fluid over himself and his bed and set it afire.

IRA Robs Train

DUBLIN (Reuter) — A gang of masked gunmen early today held up the Cork-to-Dublin mail train in what police believe is the latest of a series of fund-raising raids by the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

Goal Is Austerity

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Argentina's new military president has promised an eventual return to democracy, but called first for "sacrifices and austerity" to stamp out corruption and terrorism. "The armed forces repeat their decision to assure the existence, in the future, of political parties," Lt. Gen. Jorge Videla said Tuesday.

Pictures Slashed

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuter) — A knife-wielding man ran amok here today at an exhibition of phtographs by Lord Snowdon, slashing several pictures and cutting the throat of a guard. Police said Lord Snowdon, estranged husband of Princess Margaret, was not at the exhibition at the time.

Teachers Make Sure MLAs Get School Cost Message

VANCOUVER (CP) — At least one teacher from each B.C. school district will try to convince his local MLA in Victoria Thursday to back teachers' demands for increased education spending.

Bill Broadley, who was elected today to his second term as president of the B.C. Teachers Federation, is financing the venture but it is not intended to be an organized rally.

He said the purpose of the trip is to make certain that each member of the legislature realizes what will happen if the Social Credit government doesn't provide more money.

The BCTF president said most school districts he has heard from have indicated they will increase local taxes if the government doesn't come up with more money because the local boards don't intend to cut back on their education programs.

The teachers voted to raise about $1 million through federation fees for an action fund to support their political action programs. Members voted overwhelmingly in favor of raising fees to about $200 from the $165 teachers expected to pay this year.

Teachers left allocation of the money up to the discretion of the new executive, which was being elected today.

Meanwhile, deputy education minister Walter Hardwick told the convention that he and others in the department are out of touch with many education developments in the province.

"Our system is not now managed in a fashion in which we in the department know much of what is going on in education terms," Hardwick said. "I'm concerned about our ability to manage the system — to flag problems when they arise and develop mechanisms to correct them."

He listed several shortcomings of the department and suggested the coming year of "fiscal restraint" will allow for time to review those areas.

He spoke specifically of a review of class sizes, which the BCTF fears will increase under the new education budget.

Hardwick also promised studies and co-operation with the BCTF and the public on concerns over students' ability to read and write, an increased interest in technical training and the problems of children with learning difficulties.

"The evidence from the human resources and justice departments is that there is a close correlation between success in school . . . and social offences at a later date."

HOUSE ARGUES INTO MORNING

Business in the B.C. Legislature bogged down as members wrangled over procedure until the early morning today.

The opposition protested it needs further information before speedy approval could be given to a bill approving up to a $400 million government loan and a $1.222 billion interim supply bill. See Page 60. Other House stories are on Page 72.

Bureaucrats' Pay Cheques Checked

Local government bureaucrats tend to be regarded by the jaundiced eye of the taxpayer as knitters of red tape, procrastinators and pompous purveyors of restrictive rules and regulations.

But, in the Greater Victoria area at least, there are compensations for these much-maligned officials.

An article by five Times municipal reporters on Page 19 today looks at the salaries paid to senior public officials by the municipalities of Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquiamlt, as well as the Capital Regional District, noting some interesting facts and drawing certain comparisons.

Deborah Wins Trip to Visit the Stars

Deborah Sing, 19, of Saanich, is looking forward to an all-expense trip to Hollywood as the winner of the Times-CJVI visit-the-stars contest.

"This is wonderful," she said Tuesday afternoon after the official drawing. "I didn't think I had a chance."

The win certainly was not easy.

Deborah marked down Al Pacino as best actor, then at the last moment scratched it out and changed it to the correct winner Jack Nicholson before mailing it in.

Then she arrived at the post office at the eleventh hour — literally. It was 11 p.m. Saturday, one hour before the deadline, when her letter went down the chute.

Making it all chancier, of the 4,600 who entered the contest, 30 per cent had the right answers and Deborah's name was drawn from among 1,380 finalists.

"I watched the Academy Awards and I knew I had the right answers but I was afraid it was too late. I am very happy about this because now we can go to Hollywood this summer."

"We" includes her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Sing, of 1715 Blair, along with Deborah and her sister and three brothers.

The prize pays expenses for two and the rest of the family will be paying their own way.

"I decided that if I won we would go as a family. My brother is the only one who has been to Los Angeles. He went down with the Mount Douglas High School band. He can act as our tour guide."

Deborah is a graduate of Mount Douglas and is employed at Eaton's.

Three consolation prizes of a dinner for two at The Empress and two passes to an Odeon theatre were awarded to those whose names were drawn second, third and fourth from among the 1,380 finalists.

They are Patricia Haram of 6788 Blanchard Road in Sooke, Helen Pride of 203-1002 Pakington Street and Betty Marshall of 41-1706 Newton Street.

Ironically Deborah won her trip by correctly predicting a clean sweep for One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest but she has not yet seen the movie.

"I read the book in high school and I thought that if they could make a movie out of it, it would be quite an achievement. I saw Jaws and I was very impressed but I took a chance on One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest on the basis of the book."

She is an avid movie fan.

New idea in citrus meringue pies is putting the pulp of an orange in the filling. For a chef's touch, the top is garnished with orange sections.

Orange Meringue a Treat

MARY MOORE

In appreciation of some pamphlets I mailed to her, Mrs. Keith H. mailed me sone of her favorite recipes. Among them was one for an Orange Meringue Pie which intrigued me for I had just returned from sunny orange land.

Because I had Temple oranges on hand I used them when testing this pie and it was lovely. One of the different features is that pieces of orange pulp are added to the filling. Notice too that I have given you a different recipe for the pastry crust which is very easy to handle.

Be sure to make this pie. It is a beauty.

ORANGE MERINGUE PIE
(deep 9")

Pastry:
2 c. unsifted all-purpose flour
⅔ c. lard or shortening
⅔ tsp. salt
1 small egg yolk
1½ tsp. vinegar
3 tbsp. PLUS 1 tsp. cold water

Filling:
Grated rind 2 large oranges (2 tbsp.)
Juice from 2 large oranges (see below)
Hot water (see below)
Membraneless sections from 1 large orange
¼ c. cornstarch
2 tbsp. flour
⅞ c. sugar (first amount)
½ tsp. salt
2 eggs — yolks and whites separated
1 tbsp. lemon juice
2 tbsp. margarine
¼ c. sugar (second amount —for meringue)
⅛ tsp. cream of tartar (for meringue)

To make pastry cut the lard or shortening into the flour and salt until size of peas. Combine the egg yolk, vinegar and water and add to flour mixture stirring with a fork. Pack between your palms and roll out on lightly floured board to fit deep 9" pie plate. Trim and flute edge. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. about 8 to 10 minutes. Do not overbake.

To make filling, in heavy pot mix thoroughly the cornstarch, flour, sugar and salt. Measure the orange juice squeezed from the 2 oranges from which you have grated the rind. I had nearly 1 cup. Make orange juice up to TWO cups by adding hot water. Add it and grated orange rind to flour mixture in pot and cook stirring until THICK. Mix a little of the hot mixture into the egg yolks in a cup and return to pot along with orange pulp and stir 3 minutes over medium heat. Remove from heat and add lemon juice and margarine and mix. Pour into baked pie shell.

Nover with meringue made by beating together until stiff 2 egg whites and ¼ cup sugar and cream of tartar. Mound attractively all over filling. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. 10 minutes until attractively tinged with gold.

This pie should be made three or four hours before cutting to be sure it cuts neatly. Pronounced "great!" If you care to just before serving decorate top with a few more orange sections dipped in sugar.

Baggage Limits Spreads

OTTAWA (CP) — Enforcement of new regulations for hand baggage carried onto aircraft has been extended to Vancouver, Edmonton, Calgary, Winnipeg, Ottawa, Halifax and Mirabel (Montreal) international airports effective March 29.

Bags and parcels carried on by passengers at these airports must be no more than 20 inches long, 16 inches wide and nine inches deep, the transport department and the Air Transport Association of Canada said Tuesday in a joint announcement.

The enforcement program has been in effect since January at Montreal's Dorval airport and at Toronto's Malton Terminal 2. By July 1, most other Canadian airports will be included in the program.

All hand baggage must be stowed under seats to avoid possible injury to passengers during turbulence and permissible dimensions were determined accordingly. Baggage not meeting the size limit must be checked.

A HOME REFERENCE CENTRE FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

Introducing the Centennial Edition of Funk & Wagnalls

New Encyclopedia.

VOLUME ONE ONLY . . . 49¢

START YOUR SET TODAY

The best way to get information is to go to the source.

And that's exactly what Funk & Wagnalls has been doing since 1876, when they began publishing reference books.

Their sources for this new Centennial Edition include hundreds and hundreds of prominent people. Each a recognized authority in his, or her, field of knowledge. Many with Nobel and Pulitzer prizes to their credit. And while they're too numerous to list here, you'll find they're all listed in Volume 1.

The result is a comprehensive, accurate home reference center with over 193,000 indexed subjects. [That's as many subjects as encyclopedias costing hundreds of dollars more contain.]

And each article is written in clear, simple English that gets to the heart of the subject without going over your head.

Try Volume 1 for 49¢. It'll sell you the rest of the set.

To introduce you to Funk & Wagnalls New Encyclopedia, we sell Volume 1 at the special introductory price of 49¢.

So instead of going through a high pressure sales pitch, you just go through Volume 1 and let it convince you to buy the rest of the set a volume or two a week.

That way, you find out if it's the right encyclopedia for your family before you pay for the whole set. And you save two ways. First, because Funk & Wagnalls sells their encyclopedias through supermarkets instead of through salesmen working on commission, there's no high commission to pay. Second, because supermarkets can sell in great volume, Funk & Wagnalls can afford to charge you less per volume.

So stop by the Funk & Wagnalls display in any of our supermarkets and pick up Volume 1. It's one of the smartest purchases you can make these days.
